CHAINS OR BEADS

Wood, Japanese Glass and China Worn About Neck.
Decorations Hang Below the Waist and Midway Must Have an Ample Supply.

"And a string of beads" is sure the last word in the description of every modish summer costume. It is the least touch but by no means the least in importance. Once upon a time a girl thought she was very lucky to possess a neat little string of coral, or a short rope of fine pearls, or possibly a pendant on a gold chain. Now she must have almost as many as she has handkerchiefs.

It is often the chain of beads that makes the costume. This is especially true of the collarless frocks that look so unfinished without something about the neck. The shops are showing such a wonderful variety of bead necklaces at an equal variety of prices that one should have no trouble in indulging in two or three at any rate. Those lovely long chains—most of the newer chains reach below the waist—of Japanese glass, china and wooden beads strung on knotted cords and ending in beautiful carved wooden lockets, larger many of them than a silver dollar, look especially good over linen frocks of the chemise variety, or with severe blouses and skirts.

For the organdie and voile frocks pretty little chains can be made at home from tinsel cords with Jap or Italian beads and finished off with silken or tinsel tassels. The advantages in making these chains is that they can be planned as an intimate part of the costume. It would not be surprising to hear of some one buying a frock to match her beads, so important has the necklace become.

And here is a way to imitate with little trouble and surprising effect those lovely woven chains done on the small wooden looms. Use about eight strands of various colored silks, and lay them parallel, being sure they are exactly the same length. About half way on these at each side weave some small beads for the depth of an inch or so to hold the threads together, and at the bottom where the strands meet in 16 threads weave beads again for a depth of two inches and let the threads ravel into fringe with a bead tied into the end of each.

LACE IS ENJOYING A VOGUE
Decoration Popular This Summer on Hats as Well as on the Parasol.

Now that the stern war uniforms are a thing of the past and woman-kind is turning to the most feminine clothes she can find in the general reaction against plainness and severity in dress, lace—the eternal feminine among fabrics, has a large part to play in modes of the moment. Lace parasols, for instance, are enjoying a vogue they have not had since Victorian days, and to match these are lace-velled hats of picturesque lines. At a recent country club opening a woman, who last year never appeared out of her trig motor corps costume, floated across the lawn under one of those new sunshades of black lace; and her hat matched the parasol.

The hat was a poke-shaped affair of leghorn, with a brim binding and ribbon band in bright Italian green. Over the green-trimmed leghorn was thrown black lace and a pink rose nestled in the flounce of lace that overhung the brim. The parasol was of Italian green silk and was rather small. The much larger lace cover fell over its edge and rippled softly in every breeze. As for the rest of her costume, this lady young lady wore a frock of black taffeta made with utmost simplicity, a cunning skirt drape falling over a very narrow skirt that clung about the ankles.

Optimistic Thought.
Those who have few affairs to attend to are great speakers; the less men think the more they talk.

One Thing in His Favor.
"De man dat laughs at his own jokes," said Uncle Eben, "makes you feel kind o' friendly toward 'im, 'cause he seems so good-natured and easy to please."

Bird Trials.
It is said to be an established fact that several kinds of birds, crows in particular, hold trials to judge one of their number which has in some way offended.

Look at the Back.
If you want to make the new frock decidedly French, look to the back of it. The French woman always pays much attention to the detail of the back of her frocks. She realizes that she is not a paper doll with a negligible back. A simple chemise frock with a very plain front might show considerable braiding in the back, and the effect would be smart.

Evening Coats Vie With Evening Gowns in Their Brilliance—Taffeta Favorite Fabric—Tunics in Evidence.

Fashionable cities of the United States keep their fingers on the pulse of Paris. The mood of the moment expressed on the banks of the Seine is immediately felt by the style diagnosticians on this side of the Atlantic. Every symptom is known, every fashion idea is gauged by the clothes specialists over here.

Many of these Paris modes are adopted outright because they spring from a field long fertile with all that is lovely. Many others have to be adapted to the American woman and still others created especially for her.

The wise designer, observes a prominent fashion correspondent, like the true artist, knows what is beautiful and selects it from the myriads of ideas and fabrics which are as conglomerate as a hundred daubs of paint on an artist's palette.

Out of this class of fashion creators with "the know" has arisen the American couturier, who, while keeping a watchful eye on Paris, knows how to create her own models, which rival in loveliness and perfection any importation that France may send over.

NEW FASHIONS IN GOWNS AND COATS

Styles as They Are Reflected in the Latest Phases of Fashion.

Evening Coats Vie With Evening Gowns in Their Brilliance—Taffeta Favorite Fabric—Tunics in Evidence.

The wise designer, observes a prominent fashion correspondent, like the true artist, knows what is beautiful and selects it from the myriads of ideas and fabrics which are as conglomerate as a hundred daubs of paint on an artist's palette.

Out of this class of fashion creators with "the know" has arisen the American couturier, who, while keeping a watchful eye on Paris, knows how to create her own models, which rival in loveliness and perfection any importation that France may send over.

With the coming of peace the Parisienne burst into bloom. Like some rare bulb that had lain in dark hibernation awaiting the call of the spring sun, she dazzled the world. Her evening gowns could not be sufficiently brilliant in color to express her mood of joyousness.

Naturally, the American woman, atune with the same joy of victory, followed suit. Brilliance marked every gathering. Jewels were brought from their velvet boxes, and once more the American woman bloomed. The marvel was how quickly femininity was able to clothe itself in the new and brilliant raiment of joyous peace.

Taffeta Favored for Coats.
Evening coats vie with evening gowns in their brilliancy. Taffeta is the favorite fabric for these summer mantles, though baronette satin with its glimmering folds makes exquisite evening wraps. Glace silk, with two tones running in its depth, is found in many of these capelike garments. Two contrasting layers of chiffon or georgette crepe make delightfully pretty wraps and give sufficient warmth for balmy summer evenings.

These wraps are frequently yoked in the drop shoulder line and the silhouette suggests the old-fashioned dolman, which lends itself perfectly to these modern capes. Crystal tassels, or those of silver, gold and jet, trim these garments or act as ornaments on heavy strands of beads that tie the fronts of the cap together. Pearl and jet are effectively combined in this bead trimming.

The collars of these wraps are sometimes made of the material. They are cut straight, made double, and are gathered and wired at the center back to give the high line reaching nearly to the crown of the head. Fur, especially white fox and skunk, is used with lovely softness on these capes when a fur collar is needed.

The contrast of peltry with silk is always lovely, however inconsistent it may look in summer.

Ostrich feathers are profusely used to trim these evening capes. The graceful fronds of ostrich make the ideal trimming for the summer wraps. Fringe is seen on these garments, but not so much as formerly.
