CODLING MOTH OUTDONE BY FRUIT WORM PEST

NEW INSECT ENEMY INJURES PEAR MORE THAN HIS OLD ALLY, SAYS COLLEGE SPECIALIST.

"Fruit worms caused more injury to pears in 1919 than codling moth" is the assertion of A. L. Lovett, entomologist at O. A. C. "In well sprayed commercial apple orchards included in our tests codling moth injury was less than 1 per cent. Fruit worm injury was twice as heavy. Pears suffer more serious attack than apples."

While a comparatively new pest, the fruit worms are rapidly assuming proportions.

Tests at the central experiment station indicate that lead arsenate 2 pounds, (powder) to 100 gallons of dilution at O. A. C. and at Hood River late spray solution as applied in the pink will control the pest.

Poison sprays in the Calyx application are too late to effectually check the worms.
