CURFEW BELL STILL SOUNDED

Authorities of Lincoln's Inn, London, England, Keep Up Custom Established Centuries Ago.

At nine o'clock each night, the curfew is rung in London, England, writes a correspondent, as it has been for 300 years. This old-time custom is still a part of the duty of the chief porter of Lincoln's Inn. The bell which is tolled was originally brought from Calais by the ill-fated Robert Devereux, earl of Essex, in 1596. It is hung in the old Lincoln's Inn chapel, erected during the reign of James I, in the building of which Ben Jonson is said to have used his trowel. "At 8:45 each night I light my lantern and proceed to the belfry," said the chief porter—who in his modesty wishes to remain anonymous. "As soon as the last stroke of nine has sounded I strike the bell 50 times. Why 50? Well, I don't know, except that it is the custom. The only time the curfew has not been sounded in Lincoln's Inn during the past 300 years or so was during the war after the bomb fell in Chancery lane in October, 1915. I rang the bell, as usual, at nine o'clock. The bomb fell 25 minutes later, shaking the whole place. Some people thought that the curfew was responsible, so it was suspended until the night of the armistice."
