

Every Little Saving Is Worth While

Some young people have the mistaken idea that a cent or two here or there does not count. But sooner or later they find that every little saving counts—and helps build up their bank account.

KEEP YOUR WAR STAMPS IS ADVICE OF GOVERNMENT

Washington—"Keep your War savings stamps," is what Lew Wallace, Jr., director of savings, treasury department, says to the people who hold such government securities. "Do not allow these savings to pass into the hands of speculators and suffer a loss," he added. "Hold them until they are due and the government will pay their full face value, and the purchasers will get all the government intended they should receive when they invested their money. When cashing their stamps the people should invest them in the new treasury savings certificates which have taken the place of the war savings stamps as government securities sold in small amounts."

War savings stamps issued in 1918 will mature in January 1, 1923, and will be redeemed at par. The war savings stamps were issued in unit denominations of $5. When purchased the first month in the year they were sold for $4.12, and the sale price increased one cent each month to the end of the year. These stamps have always been redeemable, the redemption value increasing month by month in the same proportion as the purchase price increased. The $5 stamp issued in 1918 is worth $4.63 at the present time. Next January it will be worth $5, a difference of 37 cents. Director Wallace takes occasion to warn holders of these stamps not to sacrifice the profit between present redemption prices and the par value price which the government will pay, even if the scalpers offer more than the government now pays when cashing the stamps. He believes it is far better for the holder of the stamps to tide over any pressing necessity in order to receive the full value of the stamps, as the government intended. One great advantage to the purchaser of the treasury savings certificates, new issue, he says, is that they are not transferable, and the holder cannot sell them to the scalpers as they near maturity.

"It would appear that the person who is trying to save is beset on all sides," said Director Wallace. "Those who bought war savings stamps were generally people of small means, Classified ad.

with limited savings. For the most part they were patriotically inclined, and bought because they wanted to help the government with money at time of war. Many of them of necessity have sold their stamps or redeemed them at the places of purchase. Now, those issued in 1918 are approaching the period of their greatest value, and the ever ready sharper is trying to shave off the part of the savings of these people by offering them a slight increase over the present redemption prices. The government does not offer pro-rata redemption prices for its savings securities. Its policy is to encourage savings; to induce the investor to hold until maturity and then to reinvest. The new issue of savings certificates provides for redemption at any time, paying 3 1/2 percent interest during the time of investment. But to encourage these investors to make the best of their savings, interest is paid at the rate of 4 1/2 percent compounded semi-annually if the certificates are held until maturity, which is five years. Another advantage of the new savings certificate is that they are all sold at the same price no matter what time of the year they are purchased. They are sold at all postoffices and redeemed at the treasury department by mail."

ASA GRAVES WILL BOX BOUVIER AT SALEM TONIGHT

Asa Graves will box at Salem, tonight, when he will meet Ray Bouvier, a Salem lad. The event will be part of a card which has been arranged by company F and will be held in the armory.

Two weeks ago, Graves made his initial appearance in the ring here, getting a decision over Fetzer of Monmouth.

The main event of the Salem smoker will be "Battling Sverson of Salem and Frank Crites of Newberg."

NEW DANCE HAS MADE HIT

Gothamites Take to Importation From London, Though It Seems Rather a Childish Pastime.

There's a new dance stunt in town. It's the balloon dance and it's from dear old London, don't you know. It's a bit of all right, too.

A few nights ago it was introduced at the Rendezvous—one of Broadway's most exclusive supper clubs. And it made a tremendous hit, says the New York World.

A toy balloon is tied to the ankle of each dancer of the fair sex and the idea is to get through a close-fitting foxtrot or a toddle with the balloon still intact. That is the girl's idea.

The idea of the men dancers is to break as many balloons as possible without stepping out of the dance. On a crowded floor the balloons have about as much chance as a snowball in—well, a warmer place than New York. However, a prize is offered to the woman who can emerge from the maze of the dance with her balloon still flying.

One young lady at the Rendezvous actually won the prize. But the popping of the colored spheres reminded one of the popping of champagne corks.

Anyway, it's a great boon for the balloon manufacturers. For the dance floors of the average toddle sanctuary are so small that the only way to step off one's partner's balloon is to step on her feet—and that is not very popular with the fair sex.

RETURNING TO SWORD PLAY

New York Children in Their Games, Seem to Have Abandoned "Modern Warfare."

Playwrights and theatrical producers predict the return of the costume play and the swashbucklin' melodrama. But the youngsters of New York seem to have realized this prophecy in their games.

Wooden swords, umbrella rib daggers and crossbows have supplanted dummy rifles and barrel stave artillery pieces that were popularized by the World war.

Sword play, with hickory rapiers and fragile crate-cover cutlasses seem to have asserted a romantic appeal over infantry charges and vocal "bing! bangs!" The vacant lot is no longer no man's land, but a rock-strewn heath or a tin can infested moor, where Frankie and Johnny would "do each other in mortal combat as Spaniard and Dutchman in the lowlands."

There is more realism in the sword than in the pistol, with which one must say "Bang! Bang!" Rock piles have become castles after the fashion of the Arthurian legends and lance-armed knights guard drawbridges of planks or old doors over imitation moats.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

One of Great City's Tragedies.

An old-time tragedy of the Central Markets, Paris, has been recalled by the death at an advanced age of a once rich woman, who for many years made a poor living there overturning garbage cans and selling anything of value she might be able to find therein.

Her name was unknown, and for nearly half a century she was merely called "Princess." Fifty years ago it was fashionable for persons of high society in Paris to pass a riotous night in the cafes and stalls of the market. On one occasion a fashionable woman, one of a gay party, was robbed of money and jewels, presumably by her escort. Left penniless, she refused, for reasons easily surmisable, to communicate with her husband or her family in central France. Instead she sought employment and gradually fell into extreme poverty. She got her nickname owing to her invariable habit, when asked about her former life, of replying: "Ask no questions; I am a princess from a far country."

Smiling Porches.

More houses are being built with enclosed porches than ever before; you may walk down long streets of dear little homes whose porches smile at you through tiny panes of glass. You pass medium-sized places with grounds, comfortable houses set back from the road, and large mansions—in every one somewhere you catch the glimpse of an enclosed porch-room. Old-fashioned houses follow suit, and back of the rounded Colonial pillars are fitted small-paned glass partitions that inclose the porch as efficaciously as though it had been built that way in the beginning. In the summer these are lifted out, leaving the porch as before.—The Designer.

Canada Pushing Honey Industry.

It is expected that Ontario's honey crop next season will be marketed largely on the co-operative system, as a result of the activities of the committee appointed recently by the Ontario Bee Keepers' association, and with the assistance of the Ontario government. The honey will be graded and have a registered brand for the protection of consumers. Each package will have a distinguishing number, by which it can be traced back to the producer.

Snails in London Restaurants.

English officers who served in France during the war acquired in many cases a taste for frogs' legs and snails, hitherto unknown to London menus. When they returned home they demanded the same tidbits in London and now both frogs' legs and snails are conveyed daily from France to London by airplane. Some of the London restaurants are doing an enormous business in serving these two articles of food.

ONE THAT NEVER FAILS

Last fall O. L. Bernice drove his flock of sheep down from the grazing lands in the Mount Adams forest reserve to winter quarters near White Salmon, Wash.

In a fog he lost 40 head and a dog was missing. No trace of the wanderers was found in a week's diligent search. Recently the dog turned up at the house with 39 sheep, all but one having wintered somewhere under the guidance of the watchful shepherd.

Sheepmen are at a loss to account for the fact that the dog was able to keep off predatory animals, for in winter wolves, cougars and coyotes prey continually on sheep.

You can't always tell about a dog by his looks. Once there was a dog that nobody claimed. He had no pedigree. His bones almost pierced his flesh. His head and tail hung at half mast. He had a bruise on his hip from a man's kick, when somebody salvaged him. He cringed and trembled when anybody attempted to touch him. He was an outcast, a wanderer, an Ishmaelite.

A time came when his owner wouldn't have sold him for all the gold that was ever mined. Given a square deal, this canine outcast became, for the good deeds he did, a famous dog.

The sheep dogs of Scotland are guides and defenders, not only of the sheep flocks but also of the children of the crofters. But for these born shepherds of the weak and defenseless it would be unsafe for the children to go far from the lonely and isolated crofts in the outlying districts. The schools are far away, and it is a long, rough journey across the moor to the school and back again.

So the sheep dog goes along with the children, carrying their books and safeguarding them on their way. Over the dog's back the books are slung, and so long as there is life in his body no harm will come to the children or their belongings.

The dog is better appreciated since the World war. With helmet, canteen and kit the war dogs ministered to the wounded and helpless on the battlefields, passing from one wounded soldier to another, slaking thirst and carrying the first aid that saved thousands of lives and relieved infinite suffering.

In memory of his service a heroic statue of the war dog, designed by a famous sculptor, has been erected near White Plains, New York.

It is a monument to a friend that never fails.—Oregon Journal.

STUMP BURNING NEAR FALLS CITY IN MAY

Utilization of many hundreds of acres of logged-off lands in the vicinity of Falls City, in the western part of Polk county, is planned. Stump-burning demonstrations are to be held there beginning early in May.

The demonstrations, which are to be held by the extension service of the Oregon Agricultural College in cooperation with the county agent, will show a modification of the charring method. The bowl of the stump and entire root system are destroyed. The land-clearing movement is becoming of increasing importance in this county, where large areas that have been logged over are now lying idle. Owners who have considered the expense of holding these acreages have decided to take steps to improve the land, as it is believed that some tillable land can be

FRUIT MEN WANT COLD STORAGE IN PORTLAND

At a meeting held in Portland, Monday, representatives from practically all of the fruit districts of the Northwest, including California sat with the Portland dock commission. It was the purpose of this meeting to place before the commission, the needs of the fruit interests of the northwest of suitable cold storage facilities, which would enable shippers to hold fruit at Portland without loss, before making shipments by water. This would prevent "dumping" of fruit, eliminate the cause for excessive cargoes and would tend to equalize the market. This will not impose a burden of expense on the growers, but will rather cause an increase in returns due to better methods of caring for the fruit at terminals. According to C. I. Lewis, who represented the Oregon Growers' Cooperative association, the outlook is very optimistic and it is expected that definite plans will be made at a later date.

The committee on the advertising of the Northwest boxed apple met at Portland, Monday, to outline plans for this season's advertising.

Practically all apple districts signified their intention of combining in this project, except Wenatchee. A sub-committee will be detailed to Wenatchee to solicit their cooperation in the matter of advertising. "Unless all districts can get together," said C. I. Lewis, chairman of the committee, "the campaign will be dropped until next year."

C. I. Lewis, chairman of this committee presented his resignation due to his leaving for the east. C. A. Swigart was elected to succeed him.
