

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK

Nature's Most Wonderful Laboratory and Out-of Door Paradise

The wildest geysers in the world, dancing amid thousands of boiling springs, their basins arrayed in gorgeous colors like gigantic flowers.

Here, too, are hills of sparkling crystals, hills of sulphur, hills of glass, mountains of every style of architecture, icy or frosted, mountains boiled soft like potatoes and colored like a sunset sky.—John Muir, the great naturalist.

Turnips Good Late Feed

Pomeranian white globe turnips planted in June make excellent late summer feed, especially in the coast districts. Cows will need an extra amount of succulent material when the pasture gets shorter.—O. A. C. Experiment station.

Defoliating caterpillars, so prevalent this year, are in the majority of cases about mature and the injury is practically at an end. Observation indicate little likelihood of repetition of this years abundant crop of these leaf feeders as parasitic insects are very active on them at present.—O. A. C. Experiment station.

MANY LEGENDS OF THE OAK

Tree's Grandeur and Beauty Seem to Have Impressed Each Ancient Race in Turn.

The ancient races, struck with the noble aspect of the oak, have in all ages enveloped it in the clouds of their legends and carried it back to the remotest antiquity. Of this class was the holm oak, which in the days of Pliny still existed near Rome, on the trunk of which was an Etruscan inscription in letters of brass stating that before the existence of the Eternal city it was already the object of popular veneration. The Roman naturalist also asserts that in the environs of Heracles, in the kingdom of Pontus, there was a tradition that two oaks which overshadowed the altar of Jupiter Strapius had been planted by Hercules. The origin of certain trees is lost in even remote antiquity.

The imposing terror of the Hercynian forest has deeply impressed all those who have described Germany, and Pliny and Tacitus especially. The aged oaks of its somber vales, where wandered the elk and the aurochs, especially aroused the admiration of the Roman historian. "The majestic grandeur of the oak in this forest," he says, "surpasses all imaginable belief; this tree has never been touched with the ax; it is contemporary with the creation of the world and appears to be the symbol of immortality."

RED COW UNDER SUSPICION

Silly English Superstition That Her Milk Would Make the Hair of Baby Red.

A director of a London dairy company told a correspondent recently that a dairy show a circumstance illustrating a belief that existed not long ago in connection with a cow's milk.

It was in the days when many London dairies kept a few cows at the back of the establishment, partly to give the impression that the daily milk supply was all derived from these cows, or to enable the proprietor to meet the wants of his customers in special cases for infant feeding. The shop had been closed for the day, when a woman called to ask for new milk for a baby. This was supplied.

Shortly after the woman called again and asked: "Can you tell me the color of the cow you took that milk from?"

The owner of the establishment said he was not quite sure, but would go and see. He went and returned saying: "It was a black cow, but why do you want to know?"

"Well, sir," she replied, "if it had been a red cow my mistress would have asked you to change the milk, as the baby would then have had red hair, and she does not want that."—London Morning Post.

A Yankee Samson.

For a long time Grandfather Higgins insisted that he was a very light sleeper and that a slight noise would always waken him. On the other hand, grandmother was sure that he could sleep sounder than the ordinary person—so sure, indeed, that she declared she could cut off his whiskers some night without his knowing it until morning. Grandfather retorted that, if she could succeed in doing it, he would go with her to visit their son in Idaho.

For a few days grandmother said no more about it; apparently both had forgotten the conversation. But one morning when grandfather awoke his throat and the lower part of his face felt unusually cold. He sat up in bed, put his hand to his face, and uttered a little cry, jumped up and hurried to the mirror. Sure enough, his whiskers were gone. He looked round in bewilderment and saw a mass of grayish-white hair and a pair of grandmother's shears on a chair beside the bed. Grandmother was right!—Youth's Companion.

Mardi Gras at New Orleans.

The New Orleans observance of the Mardi Gras has been growing steadily since its establishment in 1830, and is now numbered among the most brilliant of the public and social festivities of the United States. His Majesty Rex, the king of the carnival, first rode at the head of a body of Arabic troops in honor of the Russian Grand Duke Alexis in 1872. The experiment was a success, and Rex became an established favorite. The "Mystic Crew of Comus," however, antedates this portion of the carnival by some 15 years, for it was in 1857 that the first "Mystic Crew" appeared in a fantastic night parade of gorgeous floats, manned by masked revelers. But so many additions have been made to the Mardi Gras that now Rex and Comus are only two features of a magnificent celebration which embraces the entire city.

Good Whistler Story.

"One of Whistler's stories was of Burne-Jones and himself going to a country fair and wandering into a sideshow to see a tattooed lady—and he was afraid to say how many subjects were tattooed on her—on one knee the American Eagle, on the other, the Union Jack, and on her back Leonardo's Last Supper. And she really was amazing, and they enjoyed it hugely. Some four or five years afterward, in London, Burne-Jones burst in upon Whistler, and told him the same tattooed lady was at the Aquarium, and they must go and see her again. And they went and she had grown very stout in the meanwhile and when they looked at the Last Supper, all the apostles wore a broad grin."—From "The Whistler Journal" by E. R. and J. Pennell.

MARK TWAIN IN WASHINGTON

Good Stories Concerning Sojourn of the Famous Humorist at Capital Are Current Still.

When Mark Twain lived in Washington the streets in the national capital were in such a condition that an intoxicated philosopher aptly described them by saying: "When it's dry you can't see where you are going, and when it's wet you can't go." Mark Twain remarked that the winter visitor would probably wonder, if there happened to be a thaw when he came to town, why the city fathers were so shortsighted as not to dilute the mud a little more and use the streets for canals.

Another story told about Mark Twain during his stay there which is probably better known, had its beginning when the humorist called to see Grover Cleveland at the White House. The President and Mrs. Cleveland had invited Mark Twain and his wife to dine with them, and the latter was ill and unable to go. Mark Twain went alone, apologized for the absence of Mrs. Clemens, solemnly handed Mrs. Cleveland a paper, and asked her to sign it. In surprise she inquired what it was and why she should sign it. Mark Twain turned the paper over and showed her a line in Mrs. Clemens' handwriting: "Don't wear your arctics to the White House." Mrs. Cleveland wrote underneath the line: "He didn't."

While in Washington Mark Twain, who for nearly two years was a newspaper correspondent, having sat in the press galleries of the senate and the house, wrote two humorous articles: "A Late Senatorial Secretaryship," and "Facts Concerning a Recent Resignation." Both of these articles were written about his own experiences, as he had been private secretary to Senator Stewart of Nevada, but not finding his duties congenial, he resigned.

NO SECOND TIME FOR HIM

Retailer Will Have Things Properly Fixed for the Next Customer He Brings In.

"This is a customer of mine," said a man in a local wholesale jewelry house recently, as he introduced his companion to the proprietor. "I want to give him absolutely wholesale prices. Strictly wholesale."

"All right," replied the wholesaler to the retailer who was a regular customer of the house. "Whatever you say goes."

This is done sometimes, it is said, but the usual custom is that when a retail jeweler brings in a customer, a profit is added to the wholesale price and this goes to the retailer for his services. The customer in this case purchased several hundred dollars' worth of goods.

In an hour the retailer, who had insisted on "absolutely wholesale" prices for his customer, returned to the wholesaler house.

"What profit did you get for me?" he asked the wholesaler. "None," was the reply. "You insisted that the prices be strictly wholesale." "But didn't I kick you under the table?" asked the retailer. "You should have gotten wise to that." "You never kicked me," replied the wholesaler. "You must have been kicking your own customer who sat next to me."

"After this," was the reply, "the customer will sit on my side. Then there will be no mistake."—Kansas City Star.

When you look at a 30 x 3 1/2 USCO at $ 10.90

OUR tire dealer is naturally enthusiastic when he shows you the 30x3 1/2 USCO at $10.90.

To him USCO has always represented a tire value that he felt more than justified in offering his customers.

At the $10.90 price he can hardly be blamed for putting it to the front as the value he would most like to be remembered by.

This much to keep in mind—

United States Tires are Good Tires

USCO has always sold as a quality tire of known standards and performance.

Today at $10.90 it fixes the worth of your tire dollar at a new maximum by reason of its own distinguished values.
