We are advised that the amateurs at Monmouth who are preparing "The Rivals" for presentation next Saturday evening at the Normal chapel, are getting in first class form, and will beat the record for fine theatricals in this county. The familiar figure of J. B. V. in the strange costume of a XVIII century nobleman is very impressive, though not conducive to a serious frame of mind. But his personification of the enraged father is tremendous they say. The different parts have all been well provided for, and all those who are fortunate enough to see the play will come away well repaid and better pleased, if all we hear be true. The costumes are elegant, the auditorium all that could be desired and the play—well the play takes second rank to none.
