Two well-known Polk countyites were endeavoring to outdo the other on a trip to Monmouth by motor the other day. One was vowing up and down that he had pop corn popping in the hills and the other rejoined him by declaring that he was feasting on roasting ears. The question is which is the bigger one or whether this delightful climate of ours actually is so fruitful in extremes.

There are a few who every week make it a rule to drop in the ENTERPRISE office or call us up over the telephone and give us items we never could secure were it not for their kindness. We are grateful for their kindly helps, and would appreciate it if every one would do likewise. The more news we have the more representative we can make our publication.
