WAKIN' 'EM UP.

Salem Journal with Hammer and Tong, will Stand in with Portland Promotion Convention.

The preparation for a great state promotion convention to be held at Portland in August is attracting attention and is causing speculation.

Portland has awakened to the fact that Oregon is ready to go ahead. "Parkis is willin'." But how let the rest of the world know it? Must we court the bride to win her?

The misfortune has attended us in Oregon of imagining that our boundless, imperial resources would of themselves attract the eyes of the world. We have not counted success. But the fatal gift of imagined confidence in the drawing power of our own resources has been the greatest obstacle to development. While we have waited, hoped and dreamed the eyes of the world have been lured elsewhere, and the swarming streams of humanity have passed us by as an undeserving white chip.

Now we are going to arouse, get a move on, get up and dust, paw the earth and let them know that we are coming down the pike at an antopace. We shall quit the dreaming, waiting and hoping that accidental greatness will overtake us in spite of ourselves while we are sucking our thumbs.

Too many of our enterprising aspirations for development of our country have, when rounded up, consisted of a desire for government appropriation. Beyond having something done for us out of the public treasury, what have we ever done for ourselves? If our whole promotion work this time don't stop right there, we shall have advanced a step.

Until we shall be able to do something for ourselves without drawing on the public treasury for inspiration, we shall not even make good use of our treasury grafts.

Who praises our St. Louis exhibit but those on a salary there? or some one connected with them? We are long on graft; we recognize and reward only our brazenest self seekers; we put people on guard who cannot hold a gun, and then we kick because the world does not consider us a great and wonderful community.

We put our Log Cabin, crazy-quilt exhibit at the St. Louis World's Fair in charge of Old Man Williams, a sainted, white-whiskered populist, of hold-up renown, from Jackson county. The biggest politicians in the state recommended him.

When visitors come in and stare at the skins tacked on the walls, he opens his dreary eyes, takes his pipe out of his mouth long enough to say: "Have a chair, ladies," and goes to sleep again. He had the ability get the appointment, and then went to sleep. That is the full extent of a great deal of our "ability."
