The page contains an article from the Pacific Christian Messenger discussing various topics related to agriculture and economic development in California. The article mentions the growth of the state's agricultural industry, the importance of plowing, and the use of steam-ploughs. It also touches on the challenges faced by farmers, such as the difficulty of plowing in the rich valleys, and the need for improved tools and techniques. The article highlights the role of education and government support in helping farmers adapt to these challenges. The overall tone is informative and educational, aimed at providing practical advice and insights for those working in the agricultural sector.