It is quite severally believed and concoded that he was chosen mayor of Portland a few years ago, bat was deprived of the deserved house by a jugglery of figures that cenjuring enumerators knew too well how to handle.

Mr Inman is an energetic man. Admirers have called him one of natures noblemen, despite the fact that he is not of the autocratic class that is "hung 'round with strings and stuck o'er with medals." He is a self made man and in the prime of vigorous manhood. He was born in Iowa and crossed the plains in 1865 with an ox teams. He received a splendid education in the rugged school of experience. At an early age he was thrown upon his own resources and labored at Weidler's Lumber mills in North Portland for several years. He was one of the incorporators of the North Pacific Lumber mills, where he occupied a proprietary position until he sold his ownership and joined his forces with the great
