

Eruptions

Dry, moist, scaly, itchy, or form eczema or salt rheum, pimples and other cutaneous eruptions produced from humors, either inherited, or acquired through defective digestion and assimilation.

To treat these eruptions with any medicine is dangerous. The thing to do is to help the system discharge the humors, and strengthen it against their return.

Wood's Sarsaparilla permanently cured J. Blines, Franks, Ill., of eczema, from which he had suffered for some time; and Miss Anna Walter, Box 212, Algona, Wis., of pimples on her face and back and itching skin on her body, by which she had been greatly troubled. There are more testimonials in evidence of this great medicine than can be published.

Wood's Sarsaparilla promises to cure and keeps the promise. Don't put off treatment until you have a bottle of Wood's today.

A Fad to Own Shootings.
It has now become a fad to own shootings in the South, where this year it is said that the birds were shot so plentiful. The shootings are as extensive as those of Scotland, and among the owners of parks of this kind in North and South Carolina are many New York millionaires. Shooting parties are given during the winter, the guests being taken down in special cars.

A New Zealand paper reports that the grave of Robert Louis Stevenson in Honolulu is overgrown with weeds and in some danger of being lost altogether. Many persons used to visit it, but it is said that the yearly average is now something like six.

ENJOY BEING PETTED.

SNAKES TAKE TO FONDLING LIKE KITTENS.

Diamond-Back Rattlers Are Good Pets When Handled Right—They Will Not Strike Unless Surprised or Hurt, and Always Spring Their Rattlers.

"Oh! Aren't they darlings! May I hold them a moment? I should just love to try them so cute."
The speaker was a comely, matronly-looking woman, well, though somewhat slowly, dressed. She was one of a motley crowd that stood before an exhibition platform in a dime museum.

On the platform sat a garish young woman, who, on the show bills, was "the peerless Circaasian beauty." She wore very short skirts, as real Circaasian beauties always do, and her high-heeled satin slippers and crimson stockings were undoubtedly imported from the wilds of Circaasia. Her hair stood up in a great mass, like the bill of a ripened dandelion. It was probably a wig, but it was the orthodox style of beauty for the dime museum "Circaasian."
At the feet of the beauty lay the "darlings" which had evoked the woman visitor's admiring exclamation. They were not babies, but a pair of big diamond-backed rattlers, the deadliest of the rattlesnake tribe. Safely caged in a den of wire and glass, they could do no harm, but at each of the hourly exhibitions given in the museum the Circaasian beauty would take the venomous reptiles from their den, fondle them and, as the museum patrons expressed it, "do stunts" with them. The beauty looked somewhat suspiciously at the woman who had made the request.

"Don't," she exclaimed. "They're the most poisonous of all snakes and their bite means almost certain death. The managers would not allow you to touch them and it might cost you your life."
"Huh! I ain't afraid," was the reply. "I was in the business before you was born and handled snakes that was a deal trickier than rattlers. Water moccasins, black and puff adders and venomous reptiles from all parts of the world. Once," she added proudly, "I owned a cobra." The woman on the platform incontinently surrendered and allowed the visitor to take her pets, which the stranger fondled as a fond mother would a baby.

"Oo wouldn't my mamma, would oo?" she cooed as the ugly, flat head of the rattler lay against her cheek. The snake darted out its forked tongue, but it did not spring its rattles. The glitter of its beady eyes showed that it was fully conscious of what was taking place, but it evidently enjoyed being caressed by the visitor. "Even the most venomous snakes are harmless as long as they are treated right," said the woman. "They love to be petted and stroked, just as a cat does. If they are tormented, they are likely to strike. Rattlers are the easiest of all snakes to handle, for they won't bite without giving warning. Nearly always they will coil for a strike, and invariably they will spring their rattles."

"I was in the business nearly fifteen years. In that time I was bitten more than a score of times, but it was always because of my own carelessness. I always kept antidotes at hand and never suffered from a bite more than most persons would from the sting of a bee. Snakes have always been one of the best cards in museums and side shows. In nine cases out of ten the reptiles are handled by women. The act proves more attractive to the public than when they are handled by men. Besides, women take to snakes more readily than men. Perhaps they inherited that from old Mother Eve," and the speaker laughed at the suggestion.

WESTERN MONEY IS DIRTY.
Eastern Cities Grab the New Currency Issued by Treasury Department.

The bulk of the paper currency in circulation throughout the West is well worn and often exceedingly filthy by reason of its long use. A crisp new bill is a curiosity in most Western communities. The currency is kept in circulation so long that it will hardly hold together, while it is redolent of the foulest of smells. That which is returned to the Treasury Department from Chicago for replacement is said to be the worst of all. It is so bad that the employees of the department stubbornly try to get assigned to desks where none of this ragged, filthy currency is handled. Those who have to handle it are considered very fortunate. From these towns come money for redemption which is practically new. Many banks in the East make it a rule to never put out old money. Many of the bills from Washington have never been folded.

The chief of the redemption division explains that a New York bank which would pay out such money as is handed over the Chicago bank counters could not do business. Its customers would not have the soiled and ragged money. Many go further and say the filthy money is dangerous. The facts do not bear this out. There never has been a case of contagious sickness in the department which could be traced to contaminated bills.

The reason why the West gets dirty money and the East gets clean money rests entirely with the banks. The Eastern banks supply new currency because their customers refuse to handle the other kind. The Western banks give out dirty currency because their customers do not protest. It costs the banks extra to get new money. It costs 20 cents per $1,000 to send old money to the department for redemption and its costs the same amount to get the new bills, a total cost of 40 cents. The Government pays the expressage on silver. The banks say that they would be glad to furnish new bills if the Government would pay the expressage. Unquestionably they would. But the Eastern banks find it no hardship and are glad to pay the expressage to keep the new currency on hand.

If all the banks in the country would suddenly decide to use only new bills over their counters the bureau of engraving and printing would be unable to supply the extra demand. This is the one department of the Government that runs day and night, with three different shifts all day except Sundays and holidays. But if the bankers should ask for clean money Congress would be glad to furnish the extra printing.

The reform for clean money proceeds slowly. One bank nearly always begins. Sometimes the banks let it be known that in their woman's departments only new currency will be paid out. The innovation is usually infectious. The department knows that when one bank starts others will follow.

Gulls in London Parks.

From the bridge which crosses the lake they may be seen floating on the water or circling overhead, uttering plaintive screams as they dart about in search of food.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Popular of the Composition Means Money to Composer.
The actors who have made their fame on one play, the authors whose reputation rests upon one book, or the operators whose celebrity is connected with one speech, are not nearly so numerous as the singers who have become known through one song. The recent death of "The Great McDermott," who will go down to posterity as the singer of "Hy Jingo, We Will," the song which made the term "jingoism," a familiar term in the English language, recalls the story of many of these one-achieved individuals.

Police Officer Reilly.
The most fickle and difficult to understand people in the world," said a theatrical manager a few days ago, "are the comic-song public. Sometimes a song, with absolutely no merit to recommend it, will go like wildfire, while, on the other hand, some of the most clever and catchy songs ever written fall as flat as a smoothing iron."
"A song will sometimes be sung by a music-hall singer which will seem to have in it no more of the elements of popularity than any other song. Yet suddenly it will become all the rage, and will be hummed and whistled by thousands of people all over the country who never heard the name of the singer, and perhaps never put their foot in the music hall. Probably, then, a year or two later the same singer will appear with a song quite as taking, apparently, as the first one, yet it will fail to create the slightest stir, and will be a dead letter, except to those who have heard it in music halls."

Instances of the accuracy of this generalization abound. It was Miss Lotie Collins who first sang "Ta-ra-boom-de-ay" in a London music hall. Few thought it was a song out of the ordinary, even those who heard it, yet within a few days all London was humming it, and it was not long before it had become as familiar as "God Save the Queen."

It is said that there are at least a dozen singers of comic songs who are known in the profession as "one-song men." The meaning of the title is, of course, that they have sung one song which completely eclipsed all of their other performances. For instance, Charles Coburn, the man who sang "The Man That Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo," made more money out of other songs, but for one person who knows one of his other songs probably a hundred know this one.

Other familiar instances of the one-song success are Anna Held's "Won't You Come and Play With Me?" and Ernest Hogan's "Who Said Chicken in This Crowd?" Both of these have sung many another song, but none of the others has had such extreme popularity. The authors of "Little Annie Rooney," "After the Ball is Over" and other equally well-known songs are almost unknown, yet in many cases their one song carried them to temporary fame.—New York Times.

NEW KIND OF RAILROAD TIES.
South American Mora Timber to Be Tried by Pennsylvania Road.

The Pennsylvania Railroad is soon to begin an experiment with a new kind of wood for ties. Orders have been placed and several consignments of the material are now on the way from South America, says the Philadelphia Ledger. As soon as the vessels arrive preparations will be made for placing the ties at points along the main line and in and around Philadelphia. The ties are of Mora wood, and come from British Guiana. It is claimed for them that they will last fifty years, the timber being exceedingly hard and possessing the quality of durability. The present ties last from three to ten years. The purchasing price alone for each tie of the Mora wood is $1, and the delivery price about $1.50. The cost of the white oak ties, which the road has been using, is about 75 cents each.

There have been many experiments made during the last twenty-five years to procure some material for ties that will stand the severe tests from heavy and fast traffic, but thus far no successful results have been attained. Many patent preservative processes have been resorted to, such as chemicals to preserve the wood, cement encased in steel and steel plates bent into oval or semi-half moon shape. Just now the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railway is experimenting on its main line, near Sandusky, Ohio, with a design of steel ties constructed from old worn out sixty-five-pound steel rails.

About $90,000,000 is now spent annually by the railroads of the country for renewing worn-out ties. It being estimated that 112,000,000 new ties are needed each year. The total number of ties now in use on the railroads of the country is calculated at 780,000,000. This demand is so great and the heretofore sources of supply are so nearly exhausted, says the Black Diamond, that the International Society of Arboriculture has undertaken to encourage the growing of catalpa trees, with special reference to the need of crossties for American railways. White oak, canker, white cedar, chestnut, pine and redwood, which have up to this time been used for ties, are becoming too costly, if not too scarce, to supply the demand from this source. The society suggests that the catalpa be planted along the right of way of railroad lines, not only as a future source of supply, but as a means of adding to the pleasure and comfort of travelers. Ties from this wood, it is claimed, will last thirty-five years.

CURE SICK HEADACHE.

"I wish you to publish my letter stating the grand effect LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND has had on my health."

MRS. ANNA ASTON

"I was suffering to such an extent from ovarian trouble that my physician thought an operation would be necessary. Your medicine having been recommended to me, I decided to try it. After using several bottles I found that I was cured. My system was toned up and I suffered no more with my ovaries. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the greatest boon on earth to suffering women."—MRS. ANNA ASTON, Box 13, Troy, Mo.

Ovarian trouble is serious trouble. Every woman knows this. Frequently she has ovarian trouble when she thinks she has only a "pain in the side." All at once she finds herself unable to walk. She is a sick woman. An operation, dangerous and expensive, is the usual procedure, and at best, she can expect merely to gather together the shattered remnants of health after a tedious struggle.

Many times this is necessary and many times it is not. It is wise for every woman to be convinced that every backache and sideache, every abdominal pain, indicates something wrong, and something which will not go away itself or be driven away by hard work. It is also right for every woman to know that for every disorder of the feminine organs Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the perfect treatment, that it is the medicine always safe to use and always certain to help.

When your health and perhaps your life is at stake, it is wise to pass by a remedy which holds the record for the greatest number of absolute cures of female ills and which is recognized by the profession to be the greatest medicine for women in the world, and accept something else which you know little or nothing about?

Read the records of cure in the letters like Mrs. Aston's printed regularly in this paper, and if you are sick, do not be satisfied to take a substitute for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

The Distinctive Value
of Syrup of Figs is due to its pleasant form and perfect freedom from every objectionable quality or substance and to the fact that it acts gently and truly as a laxative, without in any way disturbing the natural functions. The requisite knowledge of what a laxative should be and of the best means for its production enable the California Fig Syrup Co. to supply the general demand for a laxative, simple and wholesome in its nature and truly beneficial in its effects; a laxative which acts pleasantly and leaves the internal organs in a naturally healthy condition and which does not weaken them.

To assist nature, when nature needs assistance, it is all important that the medicinal agents used should be of the best quality and of known value and Syrup of Figs possesses this great advantage over all other remedies, that it does not weaken the organs on which it acts and therefore it promotes a healthful condition of the bowels and assists one in forming regular habits. Among its many excellent qualities may be mentioned its perfect safety, in all cases requiring a laxative, even for the babe, or its mother, the maiden, or the wife, the invalid, or the robust man.

Syrup of Figs is well known to be a combination of the laxative principles of plants, which act most beneficially, with pleasant aromatic liquids and the juice of figs, agreeable and refreshing to the taste and acceptable to the system, when its gentle cleansing is desired. The quality of Syrup of Figs is due not only to the excellence of the combination, but also to the original method of manufacture which ensures perfect purity and uniformity of product and it is therefore all important, in buying, in order to get its beneficial effects, to note the full name of the Company—California Fig Syrup Co.—printed on the front of every package.
