LUCKY BOY "CAVE-IN"

Was Expected by Owners—In Worked-Out Rock—No Loss.

Men Blown From the Tunnel With Great Force—Clothing Nearly Torn off Their Persons.

A short time since the local press gave an account of a "cave-in" at the Lucky Boy mine in the Blue River mining district that did injustice to the owners, Messrs. Sharkey and Zimmerman, in that it was intimated that it had damaged the property and would interfere with the workings for a time.

A GUARD editor met Mr. Sharkey at Beekup Springs a few days ago and learned the facts in the case. The "cave-in" was in worked-out rock and was not unexpected, the cracking of the ten by ten inch timbers that supported the sixty to a hundred feet of rock above having been giving ominous warning. The men employed about the mine had been given strict orders to keep out of the worked-out chamber and the hundred-foot tunnel that led thereto. However on the day the timbers gave way Frank Sharkey and two of the employees could not resist the temptation to go to the inside end of the tunnel on hearing an unusual cracking of timbers, thinking, of course, that they would be perfectly safe in the well protected tunnel.

They came out faster than they went in. While there the supporting timbers finally gave way and the great mass of rock fell in. The compressed air had no escape but through the tunnel and it rolled the three men out onto the "dump" as if they had been bits of paper. With clothing torn almost from their persons, and with some patches of skin, they finally got on their feet and looked at each other foolishly, as much as to say, "How did it happen?" It is surprising that all escaped with nothing but bruises to show for being shot out of a tunnel that was timbered on top and at the sides. Had they swerved against either side a fatal or serious result might have easily happened.

As to financial loss there was none. It was intended to take out about a thousand tons more ore through this tunnel, representing probably $16,000, but the warning cracking of timbers called the miners out. This ore, with that on the continuation of the ledge into the mountain, will be taken out through an almost complete shaft from above.

BROKE HIS LEG AT BLUE RIVER

Daily Guard, Aug. 19.

Samuel Peil and Robert Day were on their way Friday to their mining property in the Blue River district and were within a hundred yards of the cabin descending the grade on Gold Hill when the brake gave way and frightened the horses so that they toppled the whole rig over the grade, damaging things seriously and breaking Mr. Peil's leg about two and a half inches below the knee joint. Mr. Day was thrown out but escaped serious injury. Medical aid was summoned and the injured member was set.

Mr. Day came back to Eugene last night and started this morning with a rig to meet Mr. Peil, who has already started on the mill wagon from Blue River. They will arrive in Eugene tomorrow afternoon.

Mr. Peil is a brother-in-law to B. F. Dorris.

The Owen Coal Vein.

The old coal property, discovered some 20 years ago on the Owen place, nine miles west of Eugene, is being partially developed by Alf Walker, who has two men working on the vein. The "blowout" was only 8 inches wide at the mouth of the tunnel but increases to a vein 30 inches thick at the face. The coal is in blanket form instead of a ledge and runs on a declivity of 8 feet to 75 into the hill. Mr. Walker says the property has long been considered valuable and that if the coal could be mined in marketable quantities it would be a boon for the county.

Scarlet Fever.

The two youngsters of A. J. Pickard have the scarlet fever at their home, 282 West Fifth street. The place has been put under quarantine by the city authorities.

DROWNED IN McKENZIE

Daily Guard Aug. 18.

Another sad drowning in Lane county has to be recorded. The victim of the treacherous waters this time is James Moore, foreman of a drive of logs for the Corvallis sawmill. The scene of the drowning was in the McKenzie river about three miles below Coburg, back of the Berger farm, and the time was Saturday afternoon about 2:30 o'clock. In floating the logs down the river the unfortunate man was engaged in knocking the "dogs" out of the logs as they struck snifter and deeper water. He had just knocked the "dog" out of a monster log, and being deceived as to the depth of the water in which the log was floating, stepped off. He was at once taken off his feet by the swift current and rapidly borne down stream. He floated perhaps 100 yards when he sank, but shortly afterward came to the surface and floated again quite a distance. Samuel Garrison and young son were fishing near there and saw the unfortunate man being carried to his death. Mr. Moore saw them and shouted for help but it was impossible to do anything for him as the river was full of logs and the water exceedingly swift. No man could have gone in and come out alive. Seeing that he could not be saved, Mr. Moore gave up and cried, "I am gone." At that moment he reached a whirlpool and was drawn under, never to come to the surface again alive.

The other members of the logging crew soon reached the place where the unfortunate man went under and made haste to recover the body. The river was dragged all the afternoon and evening and all day Sunday without finding the body, and today dynamite was taken over from Eugene to be used in attempting to bring the body to the surface. It had not been found up to a late hour this afternoon.

The drowned man leaves a wife and five children at Corvallis. He belonged to the Knights of the Maccoches and it is understood had his life insured for $2000.

Business Change.

Daily Guard, Aug. 19.

I. W. Pope, of the Eugene Soap and Chemical Co., yesterday evening sold his interest in the former partner in the business, O. L. Bowder. These gentlemen have been associated in this important industry in Eugene since I. T. Nicklin sold out to them a year ago. They have increased the capacity of the output and altogether have made the Eugene Soap & Chemical Co. one of Eugene's important industries. It will continue so in the hands of Mr. Bowder who will conduct the business. Mr. Pope will devote his time to his mining property in Bohemia where he is largely interested.

It is the new Werner edition and consists of twenty-four volumes of the original work, six volumes of an "American supplement," and one volume each of index and "guide to systematic readings." It is a library in itself.

It is bound in sheep and comes at a price at which no library or even a home with no library of even humble pretensions can afford to do without it. Persons contemplating the purchase of an encyclopaedia should examine this edition. We shall be glad to give information as to the publishing house and cost to inquirers.

VETERANS WILL GATHER

Gen. Summers May Be Elected Commander-in-Chief of Spanish-American War Veterans.

General O. O. Summers has received a letter from the adjutant general of the Spanish American War Veterans, requesting him to attend the national convention of that body, which will be held at Indianapolis on September 22, 23 and 24. The letter also states that it is the wish of many of the members of the organization that he allow his name to be mentioned as a candidate for the office of senior vice-commander of the organization.

If General Summers allows his name to be mentioned in connection with the vice-commandership, he will undoubtedly be the next commander-in-chief of the national body. As this organization is second only to the G. A. R., it would be an honor to Oregon General Summers will attend the convention and will work to have the 1903 encampment in Portland. This would bring 5000 men to Portland, and naturally would be very beneficial. The business of this convention will include the matter of consolidating of the Spanish-American War Veterans and the Spanish-American Veterans. President Roosevelt has signified his intention of being present at this encampment. The Department of Oregon of the Spanish-American War Veterans consists of eight camps, of which three are in Portland, and one each in Salem, Roseburg, Ashland, Corvallis and Eugene.

SCHOOL ROOM WILL BE SHORT

The question of accommodation for school pupils in Eugene is an ever perplexing one. Last year, notwithstanding the erection of the Patterson school there was congestion among the lower grades of both the Geary and Patterson schools, resulting in the necessity of conducting a first grade room in the High School building. Even then the whole school room accommodation at the disposal of the directors was taxed to its limit.

Since school closed the population of the district has increased greatly. A noticeable fact is that among the newcomers a large percentage are families containing several members of school age. Other evidences are the increase in houses and acreage of renting property. These facts bring apprehension to the minds of the school directors.

The present plan put forward is to establish two new rooms in the High School building, one for an overflow second grade and an additional room for high school pupils.

A prominent business man today suggested that a new four or six room building in Fairmount would relieve the Patterson school of probably 150 pupils and be an accommodation to a large community over that way as the boundaries of the district reach well out toward Springfield.

The present need of Eugene is a first-class High School building, leaving the three large schools for the light grades. It must come sooner or later. Money spent for schools is never lost.

Will Return to Oregon for Good.

Hon. H. B. Miller, of Eugene, consent to Nien Chwang, China, who is now in Portland on a vacation, in an interview by the Telegram yesterday stated that he expects to give up the consulship.

Mr. Miller expects to return to Niu Chwang in November, but does not expect to retain his position as consul very long. In fact, from what he said incidentally, he has already started preparations to hand his office over to some successor and return to Oregon for good.

Farms Sold.

During the past few days E. J. Fraser, the real estate dealer, sold the following farm property: The M. B. Hood farm, five miles southwest of Eugene to Daniel Stubbs; the Baifur Guthrie farm, eight miles west of Eugene to Wm. Fisher, and the C. M. Stephens farm at Llewellyn to Chas. C. Fitch, lately from Michigan.

All these purchasers are of a desirable class of industrious citizens and will contribute materially to Lane county wealth.

Married.

TRAGICAL DEATH NEAR JASPER

Daily Guard Aug. 18.

Saturday afternoon Frank Kirkland, who was engaged with a crew conducting a drive of shingle both down the river to Springfield, met with an accident resulting in his death by drowning. Near Jasper the bolts became clogged in a deep, swirling eddy. Kirkland was alone but he attempted to relieve the congestion and fell into the water. He kept himself afloat for about an hour, calling for his mates to help him. The drivers were accustomed to yelling at their work and they could not distinguish his cries of distress. Finally he succumbed to exhaustion and sank. As he went down the second time one of his companions saw his arms and gave the alarm—too late to recover the body in time to restore life.

Undertaker J. W. Kays was called to meet the body at Springfield from whence B. A. Washburne and Jas. Clark had gone for the body. It was brought to Eugene about midnight last night and shipped to Elgin, Oregon, where his relatives reside.

Harry Kirkland, brother of the deceased, accompanied the body. Jas. Clark, of Springfield, uncle of the unfortunate man, went as far as Portland. The young man was aged 21 years, was industrious, steady and quite popular with all who knew him. A number of his fellow workers came down with the body from Jasper. He was a Woodman.

Another Shooting Accident.

Special to the Guard.
CHESWELL, August 18.—There was much sorrow in the family of John Gully near Cheswell Saturday, by the accidental shooting of their dog, Carlo. The boys were out on the river hauling wood, when the dog got after a skunk under a drift of logs. Dale, the oldest boy, being on the opposite side, mistook the dog's nose for the skunk and wounded him so that he had to be killed. He was a valuable dog. His reputation was widely known. John says he can never be replaced even though he might get a thousand dogs.

Daily Guard Aug. 19.

25 Cents For Hops.

Today's Oregonian: James Winstanley, secretary of the Oregon Hopgrowers' Association, was in Portland yesterday and said he had been offered 25 cents a pound for all his hops this year. He thought there would be no difficulty about getting that price for good hops for he had received two offers of that figure from men who stood ready to sign contracts. This is the highest bona fide offer for this year's crop yet reported.
