LOCAL NEWS FROM PORTLAND

(From Portland Correspondent.)
Portland, April 4.—The new primary law, which will be tested at the polls at the coming June election, will probably work a complete revolution in Oregon politics. It is still an untried measure, but it is easy to prophesy that so far as boss rule in Oregon is concerned this is the beginning of an end. The trend of recent events in the direction of a higher code of ethics and a cleaner administration of governmental affairs. This is a wall for the election of Governor Chamberlain and United States Senator Genriu.
The demand for the re-election of George E. Chamberlain is by no means a political one. His administration of the office has been so clean, fair, economical and so entirely free from political trickery that there has existed an through his term a steadily increasing desire on the part of conservative and fair-minded voters that he continue at the helm of the state for another term.

This is one instance of an awakened public conscience and of the destined overthrow of the Oregon bosses.
The recent resignation of Republican State Chairman Frank C. Baker is another demonstration along the same line.
The wisest of the Republican ward heeders in Portland can find no satisfactory explanation of Mr. Baker's abdication. It may mean that the Republican junta will have no money to spend during this campaign. It may mean that the late chairman sees the handwriting on the wall, and having no inclination to wage a losing fight had rather strike his colors now than later. The fact remains that the former boss went to the national capital, saw the wise men of the East, returned home and, in the pariance of the street, threw up the sponge.
Nearly all of the Republican aspirants for governor are in Portland, each confident of his nomination. The keynote of the campaign is this: "As Portland goes, so goes the election." C. A. Johns and Dr. James Withycombe both claim predominant strength in the metropolis and each of these gentlemen spurn the idea that ex-Governor Geer is in the race.
However, it is entirely probable that the vote the tall statesman from the Waldo Hills will receive will be a wonderful surprise to his competitors. Dr. Withycombe, on the strength of his connection with the Agricultural College and by having conducted numerous farmers' institutes at state expense, poses as a horny handed son of the soil. He sings bucolics, but his notes are those of an amateur. Geer is the real thing. Possibly the biggest success of his life was achieved on his farm at Macleay. Still, the other leaders are inclined to under estimate his popularity, and when the votes at the primary are counted the four most astonished men in Oregon will likely be Charles Augustus Johns, Harvey K. Brown, Charles A. Schlabrode and Dr. James Withycombe.
Democrats as well as Republicans of liberal and independent tendencies are much edified over the large Democratic registration in Multnomah county. It clearly indicates that the people are doing their own thinking this year and in large numbers are breaking away from their old Republican moorings to vote for the best men for state offices regardless of party affiliations.

A very gratifying feature of the political situation, and one that is new to a certain extent, is the ease and facility with which the Democratic state ticket was filled with the very best and ablest men in the state. In former years it has sometimes been exceedingly difficult to obtain the consent of men to stand as Democratic candidates for all the offices that were in every way suitable. No such obstruction will mar the success of the party this year. In every instance men of the strictest integrity and of the highest personal character have asked for places on this state ticket.
The Democratic candidates to be voted for at the primaries April 20 follow:
Governor—George E. Chamberlain, Portland.
United States Senator—John M. Gearin, Portland.
Justice of the Supreme Court—T. G. Hailey, Pendleton.
Attorney-General—Robert A. Miller, Portland.
State Printer—J. Scott Taylor, Klamath Falls.
Secretary of State—Paul T. Shroat, Salem.
State Treasurer—J. D. Matlock, Eugene.
Congressman, First District—Charles V. Galloway, McMinnville; P. A. Cochran, Woodburn.
Congressman, Second District—James Harvey Graham, Baker City.
