WALTER SMOCK, CIVIL ENGINEER, WAS DROWNED

Walter F. Smock, a civil engineer employed by the Southern Pacific Company on the construction of the new bridge across the Willamette at Springfield, was drowned about 5:30 Saturday evening near the scene of his labors. Sev-ral of the engineering crew were in swimmin; on the west side of the river, when Smock, who was a good swimmer, started for a boom near the east side, built to protect the construction work from floating logs.

He was within a few feet of the boom when he shouted for a boat. Then he suddenly disappeared. Douglas Hollenbeck dived and brought his friend to the surface within five or six minutes, but was unable to keep him afloat, and Smock's apparantly lifeless body sank again. It was recovered by Hollenbeck a few minutes later and taken ashore.

The efforts of a physician and the unfortunate young man's companions were of no avail, and after working an hour and a half they gave it up.

Smock was well known in Eugene and was very popular. He had been employed about a year on the construction of the bridge and the Springfield-Henderson cutoff under C. S. Freeland, engineer in charge of the work. He was 24 years of age single and a graduate of the University of Illinois,. He was prominent in athletics during his college days and after graduating was assistant football coach at Stanford University. He also coached the team of the Lick High School in San Frnacisco and it was he that brought out Moullen, the well-known U. O. player, as a punter, Moullen having played on the Lick team while Smock was coaching it last fall. He assisted Bruce Shorts in coaching the University of Oregon team.

Smock was known to have been troubled with sudden attacks of heart feilure, and it is thought that while swimming Saturday evening one of the attacks came on and that death came in that way instead of drowning, as he appeared to be dead when Hollenbeck reached him a few minutes afterward.

The body was brought to Day & Henderson's undertaking rooms in Eugene to await instructinos for burial.

Word was received from Decatur, Ill., Monday to ship the remains there and they left Tuesday afternoon. The Eugene lodge of Elks, of which the young man was a member, escorted the remains to the depot.

MORE HOP CONTRACTS IN LANE COTNTY

Lane county hop growers are beginning to take more to the contract method of selling their crops. The Guard a few days ago noted the filing of a number of contracts with the county clerk, and today three more as follows were filed, Klaber, Wolf & Netter being the purchasers in each case:

J. S. Taylor, of Harrisburg, his entire crop of clusters, estimated at 12,000 pounds, at 10 cents per pound, delivered at the railroad at Harrisburg.

J. W. Thornsbury and A. C. Patterson, of Eugene, 35,000 pounds at 10½ cents per pound, to be delivered at the railroad at Eugene.

Eliza Anderson and H. L. Anderson, of Eugene, their entire crop, estimated at 20,000 pounds, at 10¼ cents per pound, delivered at the railroad at Eugene.

COLD STORAGE PLANT FOR FLORENCE

It has been known for some time that Wm. Kyle & Sons, of Florence, have been considering the question of engaging in the business of preserving salmon by means of cold storage, but until within a few days nothing has been given out as decided up n, says the West.

Now, however, it is announced that they have ordered the machinery and will at once put in a complete cold storage plant. The equipment will include a machine for making ice, as well as a cannery to take care of such fish as are not suitable for cold storage.

Work will be commenced next week at fitting up the buildings and the ice machine will be shipped here from Portland the latter part of this month. The company will put canning machinery into their cannery building and will use their warehouse on the wharf for the cold storage.

This means that the fishermen here will have an opportunity to get better prices for their fish this fall than would otherwise be the case, as fish preserved by that method bring a much higher price in the market than does the canned article.

This enterprise means more to the people of Florence than the difference in the price of fish, as it will give an opportunity to procure ice when needed for other purposes. As it costs but little to operate after the plant is established, the merchants can then obtain ice to keep their butter and other perishable articles cool during the hot days of summer.

LESLIE LELAND WAS DROWNED NEAR COBURG

Thursday afternoon Leslie Leland, aged nine years, was drowned in the McKenzie river near Coburg. He was in swimming with a number of other boys when he attempted to swim across the river on a log. In some way the log got away from him, and being unable to regain it the boy sank and was drowned before his companions could reach him.

When the news of the drowning reached Coburg the sawmill was closed down and all the hands engaged in the search for the body, which was found an hour afterward.
