

ADDRESSED DAIRYMEN AND FARMERS

Professor McKay, of Iowa Agricultural College, in Eugene.

Meeting held at Commercial Club Rooms this afternoon -- State Dairy and Food Commissioner Bailey, Dr. James Withycombe and H. E. Lounsbury also spoke.

A good number of dairymen and farmers gathered at the Commercial Club rooms this afternoon to listen to addresses by Professor G. L. McKay, of the Oregon Agricultural College, and others upon the dairying industry. Professor McKay and party consisting of the following arrived here on this afternoon's train from the north and were taken to the Hotel Smeede: J. W. Bailey, state dairy and food commissioner; Professors Jas. Withycombe and F. L. Kent, of the Oregon Agricultural College; H. E. Lounsbury, district freight agent, and H. A. Binstay, traveling freight agent of the Southern Pacific Co. The party was then taken to the Commercial Club. President L. L. Whitson presided at the meeting and introduced in their turn Professor McKay, Mr. Bailey, Professor Withycombe and Mr. Lounsbury.

Mr. McKay said in part: "Oregon has a most excellent market in Portland, hence the best of shipping is maintained. Your conditions in the state and especially in the Willamette Valley, are ideal for the business, for I have not seen anywhere richer, more productive and better climate conditions. They approach the ideal. Wheat pays out from $22 to $25 per bushel, while better realizes to the farmer $30 per bushel. Your attention should be given to the herd test or selection of the best butter-yielding cows. These are the essential things. First, feed well; second, procure a uniform breed; third, select to improve the herd. From what I have seen of your state, I am satisfied that you can produce as cheaply as any state in the union, and you should see to it that your great city of Portland does not of necessity import butter from other states, as has been done in the past."

Dr. James Withycombe devoted most of his discourse to methods of feeding. The kinds of food for stock that gave best results and how to feed it. He said that the future of agricultural Oregon depended on the dairying industry, because the cow carries the soil and also brings in a more fertile soil than any other animal. As an example he cited Washington county under conditions that produced when wheat was the leading product and under those of the present time, when butter-making is foremost. In the first instance, there was not a bushel in the county, but now there are five good bushels. He also told how the soil could be rejuvenated by raising catch and clover for stock, as had been done at the experiment station at Corvallis, where land had been termed "iron out" and "exhausted" but had been made to produce 50 bushels of grain per acre.

Commissioner Bailey said that the Valley counties should put a carload of butter, eggs, etc., into Portland daily; that the market there was always open and active.

Mr. Lounsbury gave an accurate opinion of Oregon counties and counties to look to show the real advantages in resources possibly they are, and what the state could accomplish by systematic, skillful.
