

111 CASES TAKEN UP BY CIRCUIT COURT

(From Monday's Guard.)
The regular term of circuit court convened this forenoon at ten o'clock with Judge L. T. Harris on the bench. After calling the roll of the trial jurors empaneled and excusing a good many on account of sickness, a grand jury was chosen, consisting of the following: S. R. Williams, A. J. Johnson, O. Bennett, M. D. Mitchell, J. A. McMahon, John Hampton and R. T. Allison. Mr. Johnson was appointed foreman and the jury retired to the district attorney's room to examine the many criminal cases to come up or trial at this term.

J. M. Howe is again acting in the capacity of grand jury bailiff and F. L. Armistage and H. L. Bown court bailiffs.

SWEET ASSAULT CASE.

A majority of the cases that do not require a jury having been disposed of at the adjourned term last week, jury cases were immediately taken up after the court convened this forenoon. The first was that of the state against George, Joseph and Dan Sweet, charged with assault with a dangerous weapon, upon the person of Fred Gosser near Elmira last Spring. Each man under indictment will be tried separately and the trials will probably not end for a couple of days. The following jury was chosen this forenoon to try Joseph Sweet: Henry Gates, Wm. Cornelius, W. P. Cheshire, J. W. Quackenbush, M. J. Hillegas, Eli Perkins, L. E. Flegal, Nason Harwood, F. E. Dunning, Amos Wilkins, J. S. Smigley and R. J. McPhail.

The jury, after being out a few minutes, returned a verdict late this afternoon of not guilty.

TRUE BILLS RETURNED.

The grand jury this afternoon returned true bills against Fred Smith and James Davis both arrested and in the county jail, for forgery.

(From Tuesday's Guard.)

Immediately after the trial of Joseph Sweet, charged with assault with a dangerous weapon, was completed yesterday afternoon in the circuit court, that of George Sweet, upon the same charge, was begun and the following jury chosen:

J. H. McFarland, Levi Berkshire, Geo. Spores, A. Traxler, J. C. Clearwater, J. F. Minney, J. I. Philippi, E. C. Cole, Henry Chilson, Charles Dickerson, H. M. Manville, I. M. Francis.

ENTER PLEA OF GUILTY

Oliver Walker, alias Fred Smith, who forged the name of W. B. Andrews to a check for $15 and passed it on J. O. Watts, the jeweler, a few days ago, entered a plea of guilty this afternoon and will be sentenced Saturday at 9 a. m.

James Davis, arrested in Idaho for forging a check on Mrs. A. J. Doran, of Springfield, first entered a plea of not guilty but later changed it to guilty, and his sentence will also be pronounced Saturday at 9 a. m.

TRUE BILL REPORTED.

The grand jury this afternoon reported a true bill against Marvin Martin, the young man who hired a horse and saddle from a local livery stable and sold them at Coburg for $15. The charge is larceny by bailment.

In the case of Edward Lewis, the Mohawk boy charged with assault with intent to commit rape, "not a true bill" was reported.

CIVIL CASES.

Mamie Kanoff vs. Louis Kanoff; divorce. Continued.

George Fisher vs. C. H. Park; to recover money. Dismissed.

Nain McClaren vs. William F. McClaren; divorce. Decree of divorce; custody of minor children to J. J. Butler.

Afred Poston vs. Daniel Hinton as administrator of the estate of John R. Goldson; to recover money. Settled and dismissed without costs.

(From Wednesday's Guard.)

Marvin Martin, charged with the larceny by bailment of a horse and saddle, pleaded guilty in the circuit court this afternoon and Judge Harris set Friday at 10 as the time for sentence. Martin is the young man who hired a horse from Vincent & Edwards' livery stable in Eugene and sold it at Coburg for $15.

The jury in the case of the state against George Sweet, charged with assault with a dangerous weapon upon the person of Fred Gosser, returned a verdict of not guilty last night.

The trestle built across the river by the Pacific Co. to cap the bridge was worked this morning being torn out. It is not probable that high water would have washed it out, but the company would rather incur the expense of its removal than run the risk.

LEONARD LEOPOLD IS TURNED LOOSE

Chicago, Nov. 5.—Judge Finckney, of the criminal court, today granted a writ of habeas corpus for Leonard Leopold, who was arrested at Wausau, Wisconsin, on the charge of murdering Mrs. Margaret Leslie. The police were unable to obtain a confession from Leopold or to prove that he was connected with the murder, and his attorney declared that the police were attacking and mistreating the prisoner.

Died

Seattle last year led the world in divorces per capita, one in 293 population. New York, which has a divorce law, had only one in 4036.

PORT ARTHUR'S DEFENDER IS PAUPER NOW

London, Nov. 6.—A dispatch from St. Petersburg to Reuter's telegram agency says that Lieutenant General Stoessel, defender of Port Arthur, is in such financial straits that he has applied to a charitable institution for treatment for his wound, which is sore, and for assistance to enable him to employ a servant. He has been ordered to produce a medical certificate to show that the services of an attendant are needed.

ANOTHER FREIGHT TRAIN ON S. P.

Beginning Sunday another freight train was added to the business of the Southern Pacific, under the arrangement of a crew making Albany their headquarters. A new crew will go out from Albany at 5:30 p. m. going as far as Junction, returning immediately in charge of a train to be made up there for it, arriving about 11 o'clock, and remaining until the next evening at 5:30. The crew of 225 which arrives at Albany in the evening, will stop off there instead of going to Junction, remaining overnight. The heavy business of the company along local lines has caused the change.

Special Correspondence.

Iverson, Nov. 5.—L. Vaughn made a trip to Eugene this week.

G. W. Dickinson and L. Davis left yesterday for Eugene, to make final proof on their homesteads.

Walter Holland and wife, of Crow, are visiting relatives on the Slesaw this week.

Ray Congdon, of Blachley, was cruising timber around here last week.

Joseph Liles and John Smigley have lately put in 'phones on line 24 of the Llewellyn system.

Clark Lyman, of Garfield, Wash., is visiting his sister, Mrs. L. Vaughn, of this place.

Our school is progressing nicely with Professor J. Edward Boyd, of Halsey, as teacher. This is Mr. Boyd's first attempt at teaching, but he goes at the work like a veteran.

L. Vaughn had a narrow escape from serious injury a few days ago. While going down the mountain from Wild Cat on Noti near W. S. Barrow's, his team ran away, throwing him violently to the ground, stunning him for a short time. The hack was badly used up, but no further damage resulted. Mr. Vaughn was able to be around in a few days.

W. T. Cornelius left yesterday for Eugene to serve as a circuit court juror.

L. Vaughn has nearly completed his logging contract on Noti for F. C. Walters.

Clarence Warden returned home last week from a two months' sojourn with relatives and friends in Linn and Marion counties.

C. W. Cornelius has returned from Mapleton, where he has been engaged marking in the logging camp.

Current Topics of Interest

At the meeting of the Oregon Equal Suffrage Association Saturday, Mrs. Abigail Scott Duniway was elected president, although the leaders had slated Mrs. Anna Wallace Unruh, the prominent W. C. T. U. worker, for the place. The convention was lively from start to finish, Mrs. Duniway refusing to allow the delegates to elect any officer whom she personally disliked.

Secretary Taft spent Friday and Saturday in Idaho, speaking at Pocatello, Boise and other points. He urged the re-election of Gooding in order to sustain his prosecution of the murderers of Ex-Governor Steunenberg. Large audiences greeted the secretary, who stated that his visit to the state was made at the special request of President Roosevelt.

Bodies buried in Mount Calvary cemetery at Portland turn to stone within a few years. This is the startling discovery recently made by gravediggers employed in removing the dead from one part of the cemetery to another. In the case of a grave opened last week, the body of a well-known Portland woman who died and was buried in the cemetery 16 years ago was found to have become completely petrified. Though the coffin and grave clothes had crumbled to dust, the body, in appearance, was unchanged, and the features were plainly recognizable.

Walterville Items

Special Correspondence.
Walterville, Nov. 8.—Mr. and Mrs. F. H. William returned yesterday from a visit in Southern Oregon.

I. H. Bingham, our state senator, is here for a few days.

A. R. England and family left this morning for Los Angeles, Cal., where they expect to spend the winter. A. W. Sturtevant's folks will move into the house vacated by Mr. England.

Clair and Opal Devor gave a party to their young friends last Saturday evening, the occasion being Miss Opal's eighteenth birthday. The evening was pleasantly spent in games and music, and at a late hour luncheon was served, after which all departed for their several homes, declaring it a most enjoyable time.

Mrs. Belle Trembley, of Chitwood, Or., is visiting her father, J. D. Maxson.

Sunday Mrs. Brownson and son Fayette visited Mrs. Brownson's daughter and family, Mrs. Robert Hays, living on the Levinger place, east of Springfield.

Miss Kara Jennings, of Thurston, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Charles Williams, and friends in this vicinity.

Humor and Philosophy

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

Homeliness is a virtue appreciated most by nonpossessioners.

A good suggestion is one that you can sell for a dollar.

A sacred trust isn't one that declares dividends.

Envy is the tribute incompetency pays to success.

Scratch a man and you are apt to find a savage.

If you have the good advice habit, break away.

There is something better than to try, try again, and that is to win out the first round.

A worried man is one who says obvious things ponderously.

There are too many people who are satisfied with merely looking the part.

Doctors enjoy ill health remarkably.

The best little helps for every day are things that look suspiciously like dollars.

What You Missed.

If you never swiped a melon,
If you never rocked a barn,
If you never broke a window,
If you never told a yarn,
If you never stoned a kitten
Just for downright wicked joy,
If you never smoked a pipe,
Then you never were a boy.

If you never went in swimming
When your mother had forbid,
If you never sauced the neighbors,
If you never licked a kid,
If you never hid the razor
Just your father to annoy
And got scolded for your trouble,
Then you never were a boy.

If you never planned to slaughter
Indians you didn't know
Or to steal out through the window
Some dark night and join a show
Or to be a bloody pirate
And get scolded for your trouble,
Killing men and saving maidens,
Then you never were a boy.

If you never once concocted
In your mind an awful plan
To get even with your teacher
When you grew to be a man,
If you never had a sweetheart
You were sure was growing wings
And had sworn to fight her battles,
Then you missed a lot of things.

Not Our Quarrel.

Something should be done to bar out these revolutionary juntas of South and Central America from the United States. If their countries are not large enough for them to do their scrapping in, let them have the countries enlarged.

As soon as one of these warm blooded fire eaters who inhabit these lands gets a grievance against his country he steals a horse or a sailboat and moves stealthily on the United States, and before we know it he has rented a two dollar room somewhere and started a junta. Then he is in the market for all of the weapons that were left over from the Revolutionary war that he can purchase with kind words or scrip issued by his toy revolution.

And, while he may be comparatively harmless, think what an example he is setting to the youth of the land that we are trying so earnestly to teach to work for a living.

Era of the Frenzied Financier

JOHN C. BELL

RECENT events in Philadelphia and Chicago have shown that the wrecking of banks and the robbing of safe deposit vaults by men who go around with burglars' tools, masks and revolvers are not so far much to be feared as the ruining of financial institutions by men looked upon as pillars of society. It was the get-rich-quick idea which proved the Nemesis of Banker Paul O. Stearns, of Chicago, of Banker Frank K. Hipple, and "Frenzied Financier" Adolph Segal, of Philadelphia and of Banker Frank Bigelow of Milwaukee. The Milwaukee financier erred through the faults of his son, who plunged into speculative schemes and dragged his father from the path of safe and conservative finance to that of crime, ruin and a felon's cell. Hipple and Stearns both started right and up to certain stages of their respective careers seem to have pursued lives of honesty and integrity. Then the temptation to embark in projects promising big returns came, and they took the unjustifiable risks involved, leaning on the reputations they had built up as honest and reliable men to obtain the support of others for hazardous enterprises. In Hipple's case religion and philanthropy were used as a cloak to hide doings which, however much softer terms might be used, were nothing less than swindling. Stearns, who fled to Morocco to escape the consequences of his folly, but even there was sought out and remanded to the authorities of his country, is the son of a poor Norwegian farmer. A few years ago it would have been said that he deserved great credit for working himself up to a position of honor and responsibility in the community. He was a sailor as a young man and started in business in Chicago in a small way, rising through energy and thrift. But he could not stand prosperity, and his fondness for big schemes that could not be undertaken without assuming big risks was his undoing.

ADOLPH SEGAL

Hipple's case was similar, but his was the strangest of all. His was the case of a good man gone wrong and led wrong by a man with whom, it might have been supposed, a conservative financier, a man with a reputation to maintain, would have had nothing to do. District Attorney John C. Bell, who is prosecuting the surviving wreckers of the Real Estate Company of Philadelphia, declared in court that he could prove that Hipple, Segal and those cognizant of their doings were engaged in a conspiracy and that as a result of their acts more than $5,000,000 was abstracted from the institution for the use of one man. This was Segal, who, as a director of the company put it, seemed to have hypnotized the president. Segal's career was meteoric. Twenty years ago he was a recent immigrant from Austria, speaking broken English and working over a boiling soap caldron in a cellar in a tenement district. The invention of a new process for waxing paper yielded him $200,000. This gave him a start in business, and his persuasive manner enabled him to borrow money to any extent desired for all kinds of visionary projects. He built a sugar refinery for the purpose of selling it out to the sugar trust and succeeded in doing so, making about $1,000,000 on the deal. Later he tried the same game again, but this time could not sell and got left with the refinery on his hands. It is said he once overdraw his account at Hipple's bank $100,000, but Hipple, being incredibly involved in Segal's schemes, had to honor the check. After Hipple's suicide his family found a hastily scribbled note, which read: "No one to blame but myself. Segal got all the money. I was fooled into lending it to him, thinking his business good." The dead bank president was a plodding lawyer for years, and his reputation for integrity and safe methods led him to be made the custodian of many trust funds, including those of churches and charitable institutions. Outwardly he was so highly moral that nobody suspected him capable of doing a wrong thing, and when his fall came it carried misfortune to many innocent persons with it.
