

DEATH GAME WITH CALM SLEEP TO MRS. M'KINLEY

Canton, May 26.—Mrs. William McKinley, widow of the late president, died at her home here at 1:05 o'clock this afternoon.

For many years Mrs. McKinley had been an invalid. She recovered from the shock of her husband's tragic death, but it left its mark, and when it was known that she had suffered a stroke of paralysis little hope was felt that she could survive. The end came peacefully, almost imperceptibly. Mrs. McKinley never knew of the efforts made to prolong her life or the solicitous hope of her sister and other relatives and friends for her recovery.

At the McKinley home when death came there were present Secretary Cortelyou, Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Barbour, Mrs. Sarah Duncan, Mrs. Luther Day, Justice and Mrs. William R. Day, Doctors Porteman and Rixey and the nurses.

The funeral arrangements so far as made are that Dr. Duxton will have charge of the services, which are to be simple. They will be held at the McKinley home at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon. Secretary Cortelyou is directing the arrangements, and will remain here until after the funeral.

W. B. SCOTT BUYS

LEABURG STORE

Succeeds Drake & Neal—Will Build New Warehouse and Will Inaugurate Free Delivery System.

W. B. Scott, who for several years conducted a general store at Jasper, has purchased the store of Drake & Neal, at Leaburg. He will at once take charge of the business and will greatly increase the stock. He also purchased the building occupied by the store and will erect a warehouse in which he will store goods for the winter trade. He will make improvements to the store building and when they are completed he will have one of the best country stores in the valley. Mr. Scott will put on a delivery wagon and will serve his customers within a radius of six or seven miles. There are several telephone lines in that vicinity, nearly every settler having a phone in their house, and this delivery service will be very convenient for them. They can make their orders over the telephone without leaving their homes and have the goods delivered the same day. Mr. Scott is a hustler, and is bound to give satisfaction to the people of the McKenzie valley.

DEATH OF J. E. BARNES

AT MAPLETON

Died, at Mapleton Sunday morning, May 19, 1907, of cancerous affection of the liver, James E. Barnes, aged 65 years, 4 months and 22 days.

Little is known here about the life of Mr. Barnes. He came to this section about seven years ago and all that is known of his previous career is what he dropped in occasional remarks to his friends.

So far as we can ascertain he left no near relatives. Many years ago he resided in Kansas, where he was a member of the state legislature for one term. He was engaged in mining for a time, and studied law. Afterward he held the office of circuit court judge in Colorado for six years, and later was engaged in newspaper work in California. He came to the St. Lawrence in 1900, and has made his home here since that time. Three years ago he was a candidate on the Democratic ticket for representative from Lane county.

Mr. Barnes was a member of Maple lodge, No. 139, I. O. O. F., and was ever ready to work for the interests of that order. At the time of his death he was deputy grand master for this district.

Funeral services were held at Mapleton Monday afternoon, at the Odd Fellows hall. A suitable discourse was delivered by Rev. T. A. Yost, and the remains were laid to rest in accordance with the customs of the order. A large number of Odd Fellows from Florence were present at the burial.—Florence West.

ATTORNEY SKIPWORTH

RETURNS FROM 'FRISCO

Attorney G. F. Skipworth returned Sunday from San Francisco, where he went over a week ago to tender the money offered by 141 persons, residing mostly at Junction, for the Southern Pacific Company's timberland. The official to whom the tender was made was out of the city and so Mr. Skipworth left the matter with a law firm there to attend to when the official returned. Mr. Skipworth says conditions in the Bay City are very bad. On account of the strike of the telephone girls and the street railway employees it is hard to get any business transacted at all. Scarcely any cars are running, and people who ride on those that are run a risk of being killed or badly injured, as the strikers throw brick bats at the passengers as they alight and even throw them through the car windows. The burned district of the city still presents a very sorry spectacle, and it will be several decades before the city will be itself again.

MEMORIAL

SERMON BY REV.

D. H. TRIMBLE

Sunday forenoon the G. A. R., the W. R. C., the Ladies of the G. A. R. and the Sons of Veterans attended the services at the Methodist church in a body and listened to the annual memorial sermon by Rev. D. H. Trimble. The church was packed. The exercises were interesting, there being special music for the occasion and the interior of the church was decorated. Rev. Mr. Trimble's text was from First Samuel 7-12, "Hitherto hath the Lord Helped Us." He said in part:

"The setting up of the stone upon which was the inscription of our text, marked a crisis in the history of a nation.

"By God's direct intervention, the nation Israel had been saved from her enemies. Through 900 years of history Providence had cleared their path. It marked also a promise of blessing and usefulness to a righteous and obedient people. God had been manifestly in the history. Has He not been in ours? One hundred and thirty-nine years old the fourth of July next, the youngest of the great nations, we stand first in world influence, in wealth, in moral civilization. God was with our fathers, who landed upon the Plymouth Rock, in that fearful struggle of the Revolution, in the no less critical period which immediately followed out of whose travail came the United States Constitution.

"Ours was an unprecedented development from 1783 to 1860. We advanced by leaps and bounds and reached the foremost place among the nations. But we were guilty before God through all these years of a mortal sin. Human slavery, that political leprosy, had fastened itself upon the body politic and was eating through flesh and bone to the vitals of that independence for which our fathers fought and died. Our boasted liberty had but half a meaning. Slavery had evaded the Declaration and the Constitution and, like a viper in the bosom, a cherished institution in the South, it was preparing for a deadly spring at the life of the Union.

"With the election of Lincoln came the secession of the South. The firing on the flag at Sumter struck to the heart of the North like an electric shock and the volunteers of America took the field. Then it was that this country atoned for her sins. Sins of omission on the part of the North, sins of commission on the part of the South.

"Both North and South underestimated the other's powers. To the North it was to be a noon spell, and three months would end the war. One Southerner could match ten Northerners at the beginning of the war. But before the awful conflict was over each had developed a whole-some respect for the other. The cost in the concrete was nearly a million men dead upon both sides and more than five billion of money. One quarter of all the values of the nation at that time. So great a price in blood and treasure did you pay for national unity. The sacrifice was justified only on the principle that no sacrifice is too great to make for one's fellows, if the world is lifted towards truth.

"The results of the war were the freedom of the slave, the verification of the constitution—that all men were created free, the exaltation of liberty, a purer patriotism, national unity and more profound respect for our national institutions. These are the laurels that rest upon your arms.

"The rights and liberties for which you fought are worthy of preservation still, the enemies are still within our borders, the conflict must still be waged. Last year it cost us $1,500,000,000 more that the expense of any single year of the civil war, one hundred thousand of our fellows were killed, God only knows how many men, women and children were wounded. Your comrades were from the field of battle to the crown of glory; these from the gutter and the trenches to the deeper depths of the drunkards' hell. The bulwark of this whole nefarious business is the moderate drinker. From him the immoderate drinkers have developed and through him the habit has commended itself to others. Shall we sacrifice the ticking of our moderate drinking palates for the saving of these 100,000 comrades?

"The statistics of another conflict are to be had. If so they would be more appalling still. The social evil, the red light district in our cities, clandestine relations in our seemingly innocent communities. If the doctors and the lawyers were to tell all they knew it would set the community by the ears. Let us learn the lesson from the downfall of Rome and Greece, the decadence of France, the defeat of Russia upon the plains of Manchuria. Wickedness is weakness, but purity is power.

"The flagrant violation of some laws, which leads to contempt for all law, is a danger that besets us. We consider ourselves still on guard. We challenge every one who seeks admission to places of public trust. He must give the countersign known only to those whom virtue exalts and character crowns. We must preserve by the ballot what you have won by the bayonet.

"God will help us so long as we are true to righteousness. He deserts us the moment we swerve from that path."

DOPE FOR BASEBALL FANS FROM BIG LEAGUES

A Philadelphia newspaper has received the charge that the close baseball would make such an assertion or indorse it by publishing it. For several years partisan sporting editors openly avowed that the American race was a frame-up and that New York had been selected to win the pennant. The Highlanders have never finished better than second, and twice they were beaten out in the final series.

Johnson's administration of the American league has been marked by extraordinary executive ability, but if he had the co-operation of every club owner in his organization he could not prearrange the standing of its team at the close of the first day's games, and in order to have the finish come as framed up every umpire, manager and player would have to be a party to a fraud upon the public.

The American league races are splendidly contested simply because most of the clubs have a capable manager and a complement of players fairly well up to the standard.

As President Comiskey stated at the close of the 1906 campaign, the superiority of the champion White Sox over the tail end Boston was so slight that comparatively small improvement in the latter would put them on full equality with the team that finished seven positions above them.

Sportsmen attribute the American league's uniformly close race to the cleverness of the team leaders in selecting talent and getting results, and consider charges of fraud as too absurd for consideration.

Frank Bancroft, of Cincinnati, says: "From my experience a manager should have two strong points—ability to organize and to train and ability to get all the work out of the players there is in them after they are organized. To my mind Frank Selee was one of the greatest organ-

Who covers the "middle station" for the world's championship Chicago Americans.

"I can sit on the bench pretty patiently when a team is piling up errors," says Hugh Jennings, of the Detroit team. "Errors are a part of the game, and the most conscientious players in the world make them just as the wrong time. The thing that sets me bounding in the air, a nervous jumping jack, is a stupid blunder by a player who is getting $2400 to $3500 a season."

The baseball guess artists guessed right when they formulated the Christy Mathewson, pitcher of the New York Nationals, would twirl this season in his old time brilliant form. Matty is sure going some.

One of the things that annoys the batsmen who face Matty is the wildness of his curves, when he wants to make them wide. His "out," "in," and "drop" are not the efforts of a "piker." The Mathewson wide out shoot shies away from the plate like the yellow dog that flees from the small boy with a tin can and a string, or again, an inshoot will beat in toward the batsman as though there was a magnet affecting the balls concealed in the players' stomachs. As for Mathewson's "drop" it is the cruellest thing probably ever turned loose on major league sluggers. When Matty retires batting averages in the National league will take a sudden jump upward.

SHEEP HAVE STRANGE DISEASE
Malady Invades Idaho Herds, Puzzling Federal Bureau.

Pocatello, Idaho, May 24.—A strange disease is prevailing among the sheep in the Soda Springs region in the eastern part of Idaho. The symptoms are a sudden swelling of the sheep's heads, rapid swelling of the sheep's heads, a few hours, but other slingers for days and those that recover lose their wool. The disease does not seem to be contagious, as healthy sheep near the infected animals do not suffer.

The federal bureau of animal industry has sent Dr. J. H. Frederick, professor of veterinary science at the Brigham Young College at Logan, Utah, to Soda Springs to make an investigation. A number of sheep in the southern part of Utah are similarly affected. The federal bureau is greatly alarmed at the spread of the disease.
