

Walter A. Wood

Mowers, Binders and Rakes

Machines with a reputation for durability and good work. None better.

Manufactured continuously at Hoosick Falls, New York, since 1852.

Not in ans Harvester Trust.
Sold by

J. W. Quackenbush & Sons

CELEBRATION COMMITTEE'S FINAL PLANS

At a meeting of the Fourth of July committee last night final arrangements for the big event here on the nation's holiday were completed. From present indications the celebration will be the best ever held in Eugene. Numerous novel and new features are being secured and the people who celebrate here will not lack for amusement.

Judge L. T. Harris has been secured for president of the day and Attorney C. N. McArthur, of Portland, a graduate of the University of Oregon with the class of 1901, has promised to deliver the oration. John C. Veatch, member of the senior class of the university, will read the declaration of independence. Professor Glas sand his quartet will have charge of the musical exercises in the forenoon. The exercises will be accompanied by an escort from Company A and Company C.

Several bands will be engaged for the celebration thus insuring plenty of good music. Among the features of the day will be a drill by the new fire engine and the big black team, the pride of the city.

W. J. Hill, of the Barker Gun Works, will go to Portland at once to secure vaudeville attractions, also a balloonist and parachute jumper.

The committee has made arrangements with Trainer W. L. Hayward, of the university, to have charge of the sports, which means that some fine races and other contests will be pulled off. A good game of baseball will also be played during the day.

The fireworks will be set off from Skinner's butte, as usual, and not from College Hill, as reported. They will be handled by G. D. Linn, which means that they will be first-class in every particular. No pains will be spared to get the best.

There will be a grand free dance on the evening of that day.

ing disregard of the rights of their womenkind.

"Do not misunderstand me. I have not the slightest sympathy with those hysterical and foolish creatures who wish women to attain to easy lives by shirking their duties. I have as hearty a contempt for the woman who shirks her duty of bearing and rearing the children, of doing her full housewife's work, as I have for the man who is an idler, who shirks his duty of earning a living for himself and for his household, or who is selfish or brutal toward his wife and children. I believe in the happiness that comes from the performance of duty, not from the avoidance of duty. But I believe also in trying, each of us, as strength is given us, to bear another's burdens, and this especially in our own homes. No outside training, no co-operation, no government aid or direction can take the place of a strong and upright character; of goodness of heart combined with clearness of head, and that strength and toughness of fibre necessary to wring success from a rough work-a-day world. Nothing outside of home can take the place of home. The school is an invaluable adjunct to the home, but it is a wretched substitute for it. The family relation is the most fundamental, the most important of relations. No leader in church or state, in science or art or industry, however great his achievement, does work which compares in importance with that of the father and mother, "who are the first of sovereigns and the most divine of priests."

ing disregard of the rights of their womenkind.

"Do not misunderstand me. I have not the slightest sympathy with those hysterical and foolish creatures who wish women to attain to easy lives by shirking their duties. I have as hearty a contempt for the woman who shirks her duty of bearing and rearing the children, of doing her full housewife's work, as I have for the man who is an idler, who shirks his duty of earning a living for himself and for his household, or who is selfish or brutal toward his wife and children. I believe in the happiness that comes from the performance of duty, not from the avoidance of duty. But I believe also in trying, each of us, as strength is given us, to bear another's burdens, and this especially in our own homes. No outside training, no co-operation, no government aid or direction can take the place of a strong and upright character; of goodness of heart combined with clearness of head, and that strength and toughness of fibre necessary to wring success from a rough work-a-day world. Nothing outside of home can take the place of home. The school is an invaluable adjunct to the home, but it is a wretched substitute for it. The family relation is the most fundamental, the most important of relations. No leader in church or state, in science or art or industry, however great his achievement, does work which compares in importance with that of the father and mother, "who are the first of sovereigns and the most divine of priests."

ing disregard of the rights of their womenkind.

"Do not misunderstand me. I have not the slightest sympathy with those hysterical and foolish creatures who wish women to attain to easy lives by shirking their duties. I have as hearty a contempt for the woman who shirks her duty of bearing and rearing the children, of doing her full housewife's work, as I have for the man who is an idler, who shirks his duty of earning a living for himself and for his household, or who is selfish or brutal toward his wife and children. I believe in the happiness that comes from the performance of duty, not from the avoidance of duty. But I believe also in trying, each of us, as strength is given us, to bear another's burdens, and this especially in our own homes. No outside training, no co-operation, no government aid or direction can take the place of a strong and upright character; of goodness of heart combined with clearness of head, and that strength and toughness of fibre necessary to wring success from a rough work-a-day world. Nothing outside of home can take the place of home. The school is an invaluable adjunct to the home, but it is a wretched substitute for it. The family relation is the most fundamental, the most important of relations. No leader in church or state, in science or art or industry, however great his achievement, does work which compares in importance with that of the father and mother, "who are the first of sovereigns and the most divine of priests."

ing disregard of the rights of their womenkind.

"Do not misunderstand me. I have not the slightest sympathy with those hysterical and foolish creatures who wish women to attain to easy lives by shirking their duties. I have as hearty a contempt for the woman who shirks her duty of bearing and rearing the children, of doing her full housewife's work, as I have for the man who is an idler, who shirks his duty of earning a living for himself and for his household, or who is selfish or brutal toward his wife and children. I believe in the happiness that comes from the performance of duty, not from the avoidance of duty. But I believe also in trying, each of us, as strength is given us, to bear another's burdens, and this especially in our own homes. No outside training, no co-operation, no government aid or direction can take the place of a strong and upright character; of goodness of heart combined with clearness of head, and that strength and toughness of fibre necessary to wring success from a rough work-a-day world. Nothing outside of home can take the place of home. The school is an invaluable adjunct to the home, but it is a wretched substitute for it. The family relation is the most fundamental, the most important of relations. No leader in church or state, in science or art or industry, however great his achievement, does work which compares in importance with that of the father and mother, "who are the first of sovereigns and the most divine of priests."

ing disregard of the rights of their womenkind.

"Do not misunderstand me. I have not the slightest sympathy with those hysterical and foolish creatures who wish women to attain to easy lives by shirking their duties. I have as hearty a contempt for the woman who shirks her duty of bearing and rearing the children, of doing her full housewife's work, as I have for the man who is an idler, who shirks his duty of earning a living for himself and for his household, or who is selfish or brutal toward his wife and children. I believe in the happiness that comes from the performance of duty, not from the avoidance of duty. But I believe also in trying, each of us, as strength is given us, to bear another's burdens, and this especially in our own homes. No outside training, no co-operation, no government aid or direction can take the place of a strong and upright character; of goodness of heart combined with clearness of head, and that strength and toughness of fibre necessary to wring success from a rough work-a-day world. Nothing outside of home can take the place of home. The school is an invaluable adjunct to the home, but it is a wretched substitute for it. The family relation is the most fundamental, the most important of relations. No leader in church or state, in science or art or industry, however great his achievement, does work which compares in importance with that of the father and mother, "who are the first of sovereigns and the most divine of priests."

ing disregard of the rights of their womenkind.

"Do not misunderstand me. I have not the slightest sympathy with those hysterical and foolish creatures who wish women to attain to easy lives by shirking their duties. I have as hearty a contempt for the woman who shirks her duty of bearing and rearing the children, of doing her full housewife's work, as I have for the man who is an idler, who shirks his duty of earning a living for himself and for his household, or who is selfish or brutal toward his wife and children. I believe in the happiness that comes from the performance of duty, not from the avoidance of duty. But I believe also in trying, each of us, as strength is given us, to bear another's burdens, and this especially in our own homes. No outside training, no co-operation, no government aid or direction can take the place of a strong and upright character; of goodness of heart combined with clearness of head, and that strength and toughness of fibre necessary to wring success from a rough work-a-day world. Nothing outside of home can take the place of home. The school is an invaluable adjunct to the home, but it is a wretched substitute for it. The family relation is the most fundamental, the most important of relations. No leader in church or state, in science or art or industry, however great his achievement, does work which compares in importance with that of the father and mother, "who are the first of sovereigns and the most divine of priests."

ing disregard of the rights of their womenkind.

"Do not misunderstand me. I have not the slightest sympathy with those hysterical and foolish creatures who wish women to attain to easy lives by shirking their duties. I have as hearty a contempt for the woman who shirks her duty of bearing and rearing the children, of doing her full housewife's work, as I have for the man who is an idler, who shirks his duty of earning a living for himself and for his household, or who is selfish or brutal toward his wife and children. I believe in the happiness that comes from the performance of duty, not from the avoidance of duty. But I believe also in trying, each of us, as strength is given us, to bear another's burdens, and this especially in our own homes. No outside training, no co-operation, no government aid or direction can take the place of a strong and upright character; of goodness of heart combined with clearness of head, and that strength and toughness of fibre necessary to wring success from a rough work-a-day world. Nothing outside of home can take the place of home. The school is an invaluable adjunct to the home, but it is a wretched substitute for it. The family relation is the most fundamental, the most important of relations. No leader in church or state, in science or art or industry, however great his achievement, does work which compares in importance with that of the father and mother, "who are the first of sovereigns and the most divine of priests."

ing disregard of the rights of their womenkind.

"Do not misunderstand me. I have not the slightest sympathy with those hysterical and foolish creatures who wish women to attain to easy lives by shirking their duties. I have as hearty a contempt for the woman who shirks her duty of bearing and rearing the children, of doing her full housewife's work, as I have for the man who is an idler, who shirks his duty of earning a living for himself and for his household, or who is selfish or brutal toward his wife and children. I believe in the happiness that comes from the performance of duty, not from the avoidance of duty. But I believe also in trying, each of us, as strength is given us, to bear another's burdens, and this especially in our own homes. No outside training, no co-operation, no government aid or direction can take the place of a strong and upright character; of goodness of heart combined with clearness of head, and that strength and toughness of fibre necessary to wring success from a rough work-a-day world. Nothing outside of home can take the place of home. The school is an invaluable adjunct to the home, but it is a wretched substitute for it. The family relation is the most fundamental, the most important of relations. No leader in church or state, in science or art or industry, however great his achievement, does work which compares in importance with that of the father and mother, "who are the first of sovereigns and the most divine of priests."

ing disregard of the rights of their womenkind.

"Do not misunderstand me. I have not the slightest sympathy with those hysterical and foolish creatures who wish women to attain to easy lives by shirking their duties. I have as hearty a contempt for the woman who shirks her duty of bearing and rearing the children, of doing her full housewife's work, as I have for the man who is an idler, who shirks his duty of earning a living for himself and for his household, or who is selfish or brutal toward his wife and children. I believe in the happiness that comes from the performance of duty, not from the avoidance of duty. But I believe also in trying, each of us, as strength is given us, to bear another's burdens, and this especially in our own homes. No outside training, no co-operation, no government aid or direction can take the place of a strong and upright character; of goodness of heart combined with clearness of head, and that strength and toughness of fibre necessary to wring success from a rough work-a-day world. Nothing outside of home can take the place of home. The school is an invaluable adjunct to the home, but it is a wretched substitute for it. The family relation is the most fundamental, the most important of relations. No leader in church or state, in science or art or industry, however great his achievement, does work which compares in importance with that of the father and mother, "who are the first of sovereigns and the most divine of priests."

ing disregard of the rights of their womenkind.

"Do not misunderstand me. I have not the slightest sympathy with those hysterical and foolish creatures who wish women to attain to easy lives by shirking their duties. I have as hearty a contempt for the woman who shirks her duty of bearing and rearing the children, of doing her full housewife's work, as I have for the man who is an idler, who shirks his duty of earning a living for himself and for his household, or who is selfish or brutal toward his wife and children. I believe in the happiness that comes from the performance of duty, not from the avoidance of duty. But I believe also in trying, each of us, as strength is given us, to bear another's burdens, and this especially in our own homes. No outside training, no co-operation, no government aid or direction can take the place of a strong and upright character; of goodness of heart combined with clearness of head, and that strength and toughness of fibre necessary to wring success from a rough work-a-day world. Nothing outside of home can take the place of home. The school is an invaluable adjunct to the home, but it is a wretched substitute for it. The family relation is the most fundamental, the most important of relations. No leader in church or state, in science or art or industry, however great his achievement, does work which compares in importance with that of the father and mother, "who are the first of sovereigns and the most divine of priests."

ing disregard of the rights of their womenkind.

"Do not misunderstand me. I have not the slightest sympathy with those hysterical and foolish creatures who wish women to attain to easy lives by shirking their duties. I have as hearty a contempt for the woman who shirks her duty of bearing and rearing the children, of doing her full housewife's work, as I have for the man who is an idler, who shirks his duty of earning a living for himself and for his household, or who is selfish or brutal toward his wife and children. I believe in the happiness that comes from the performance of duty, not from the avoidance of duty. But I believe also in trying, each of us, as strength is given us, to bear another's burdens, and this especially in our own homes. No outside training, no co-operation, no government aid or direction can take the place of a strong and upright character; of goodness of heart combined with clearness of head, and that strength and toughness of fibre necessary to wring success from a rough work-a-day world. Nothing outside of home can take the place of home. The school is an invaluable adjunct to the home, but it is a wretched substitute for it. The family relation is the most fundamental, the most important of relations. No leader in church or state, in science or art or industry, however great his achievement, does work which compares in importance with that of the father and mother, "who are the first of sovereigns and the most divine of priests."

ing disregard of the rights of their womenkind.

"Do not misunderstand me. I have not the slightest sympathy with those hysterical and foolish creatures who wish women to attain to easy lives by shirking their duties. I have as hearty a contempt for the woman who shirks her duty of bearing and rearing the children, of doing her full housewife's work, as I have for the man who is an idler, who shirks his duty of earning a living for himself and for his household, or who is selfish or brutal toward his wife and children. I believe in the happiness that comes from the performance of duty, not from the avoidance of duty. But I believe also in trying, each of us, as strength is given us, to bear another's burdens, and this especially in our own homes. No outside training, no co-operation, no government aid or direction can take the place of a strong and upright character; of goodness of heart combined with clearness of head, and that strength and toughness of fibre necessary to wring success from a rough work-a-day world. Nothing outside of home can take the place of home. The school is an invaluable adjunct to the home, but it is a wretched substitute for it. The family relation is the most fundamental, the most important of relations. No leader in church or state, in science or art or industry, however great his achievement, does work which compares in importance with that of the father and mother, "who are the first of sovereigns and the most divine of priests."

ing disregard of the rights of their womenkind.

"Do not misunderstand me. I have not the slightest sympathy with those hysterical and foolish creatures who wish women to attain to easy lives by shirking their duties. I have as hearty a contempt for the woman who shirks her duty of bearing and rearing the children, of doing her full housewife's work, as I have for the man who is an idler, who shirks his duty of earning a living for himself and for his household, or who is selfish or brutal toward his wife and children. I believe in the happiness that comes from the performance of duty, not from the avoidance of duty. But I believe also in trying, each of us, as strength is given us, to bear another's burdens, and this especially in our own homes. No outside training, no co-operation, no government aid or direction can take the place of a strong and upright character; of goodness of heart combined with clearness of head, and that strength and toughness of fibre necessary to wring success from a rough work-a-day world. Nothing outside of home can take the place of home. The school is an invaluable adjunct to the home, but it is a wretched substitute for it. The family relation is the most fundamental, the most important of relations. No leader in church or state, in science or art or industry, however great his achievement, does work which compares in importance with that of the father and mother, "who are the first of sovereigns and the most divine of priests."

ing disregard of the rights of their womenkind.

"Do not misunderstand me. I have not the slightest sympathy with those hysterical and foolish creatures who wish women to attain to easy lives by shirking their duties. I have as hearty a contempt for the woman who shirks her duty of bearing and rearing the children, of doing her full housewife's work, as I have for the man who is an idler, who shirks his duty of earning a living for himself and for his household, or who is selfish or brutal toward his wife and children. I believe in the happiness that comes from the performance of duty, not from the avoidance of duty. But I believe also in trying, each of us, as strength is given us, to bear another's burdens, and this especially in our own homes. No outside training, no co-operation, no government aid or direction can take the place of a strong and upright character; of goodness of heart combined with clearness of head, and that strength and toughness of fibre necessary to wring success from a rough work-a-day world. Nothing outside of home can take the place of home. The school is an invaluable adjunct to the home, but it is a wretched substitute for it. The family relation is the most fundamental, the most important of relations. No leader in church or state, in science or art or industry, however great his achievement, does work which compares in importance with that of the father and mother, "who are the first of sovereigns and the most divine of priests."

ing disregard of the rights of their womenkind.

"Do not misunderstand me. I have not the slightest sympathy with those hysterical and foolish creatures who wish women to attain to easy lives by shirking their duties. I have as hearty a contempt for the woman who shirks her duty of bearing and rearing the children, of doing her full housewife's work, as I have for the man who is an idler, who shirks his duty of earning a living for himself and for his household, or who is selfish or brutal toward his wife and children. I believe in the happiness that comes from the performance of duty, not from the avoidance of duty. But I believe also in trying, each of us, as strength is given us, to bear another's burdens, and this especially in our own homes. No outside training, no co-operation, no government aid or direction can take the place of a strong and upright character; of goodness of heart combined with clearness of head, and that strength and toughness of fibre necessary to wring success from a rough work-a-day world. Nothing outside of home can take the place of home. The school is an invaluable adjunct to the home, but it is a wretched substitute for it. The family relation is the most fundamental, the most important of relations. No leader in church or state, in science or art or industry, however great his achievement, does work which compares in importance with that of the father and mother, "who are the first of sovereigns and the most divine of priests."

ing disregard of the rights of their womenkind.

"Do not misunderstand me. I have not the slightest sympathy with those hysterical and foolish creatures who wish women to attain to easy lives by shirking their duties. I have as hearty a contempt for the woman who shirks her duty of bearing and rearing the children, of doing her full housewife's work, as I have for the man who is an idler, who shirks his duty of earning a living for himself and for his household, or who is selfish or brutal toward his wife and children. I believe in the happiness that comes from the performance of duty, not from the avoidance of duty. But I believe also in trying, each of us, as strength is given us, to bear another's burdens, and this especially in our own homes. No outside training, no co-operation, no government aid or direction can take the place of a strong and upright character; of goodness of heart combined with clearness of head, and that strength and toughness of fibre necessary to wring success from a rough work-a-day world. Nothing outside of home can take the place of home. The school is an invaluable adjunct to the home, but it is a wretched substitute for it. The family relation is the most fundamental, the most important of relations. No leader in church or state, in science or art or industry, however great his achievement, does work which compares in importance with that of the father and mother, "who are the first of sovereigns and the most divine of priests."

ing disregard of the rights of their womenkind.

"Do not misunderstand me. I have not the slightest sympathy with those hysterical and foolish creatures who wish women to attain to easy lives by shirking their duties. I have as hearty a contempt for the woman who shirks her duty of bearing and rearing the children, of doing her full housewife's work, as I have for the man who is an idler, who shirks his duty of earning a living for himself and for his household, or who is selfish or brutal toward his wife and children. I believe in the happiness that comes from the performance of duty, not from the avoidance of duty. But I believe also in trying, each of us, as strength is given us, to bear another's burdens, and this especially in our own homes. No outside training, no co-operation, no government aid or direction can take the place of a strong and upright character; of goodness of heart combined with clearness of head, and that strength and toughness of fibre necessary to wring success from a rough work-a-day world. Nothing outside of home can take the place of home. The school is an invaluable adjunct to the home, but it is a wretched substitute for it. The family relation is the most fundamental, the most important of relations. No leader in church or state, in science or art or industry, however great his achievement, does work which compares in importance with that of the father and mother, "who are the first of sovereigns and the most divine of priests."

ing disregard of the rights of their womenkind.

"Do not misunderstand me. I have not the slightest sympathy with those hysterical and foolish creatures who wish women to attain to easy lives by shirking their duties. I have as hearty a contempt for the woman who shirks her duty of bearing and rearing the children, of doing her full housewife's work, as I have for the man who is an idler, who shirks his duty of earning a living for himself and for his household, or who is selfish or brutal toward his wife and children. I believe in the happiness that comes from the performance of duty, not from the avoidance of duty. But I believe also in trying, each of us, as strength is given us, to bear another's burdens, and this especially in our own homes. No outside training, no co-operation, no government aid or direction can take the place of a strong and upright character; of goodness of heart combined with clearness of head, and that strength and toughness of fibre necessary to wring success from a rough work-a-day world. Nothing outside of home can take the place of home. The school is an invaluable adjunct to the home, but it is a wretched substitute for it. The family relation is the most fundamental, the most important of relations. No leader in church or state, in science or art or industry, however great his achievement, does work which compares in importance with that of the father and mother, "who are the first of sovereigns and the most divine of priests."

ing disregard of the rights of their womenkind.

SCALY SORES AS BIG AS PENNIES

CURED IN 3 WEEKS BY CUTICURA COSTING $1.50

"After having the measles my whole head and neck were covered with scaly sores about as large as a penny. They were just as thick as they could be. My hair all came out. I let the trouble run along, taking the doctor's blood remedies and rubbing on salve, but it stayed not seem to get any better. It stayed that way for about six months; then I got a set of the Cuticura Remedies, and in about a week I noticed a big difference, and in three weeks it was cured. I have not had any trouble any more, and as this was seven years ago, I consider myself cured. I used one bottle of Cuticura Resolvent, one box of Cuticura Ointment, and two cakes of Cuticura Soap. I think it a splendid medicine, and I recommend it whenever I can. Mrs. Henry Porter, Albion, Neb., Aug. 25, 1906."

FACIAL HUMORS

Acne, Eczema, Ringworm Speedily Cured by Cuticura.

Warm baths with Cuticura Soap, and gentle applications of Cuticura Ointment, the great Skin Cure, speedily cures all cases of facial humors, such as acne, eczema, ringworm, and all other eruptions of the face, neck, and scalp, and adults when seemingly incurable by all other remedies. No other treatment so pure, so sweet, and so speedily effective for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, scalp, hair, and hands, as well as for the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. Guaranteed absolutely pure and may be used from the hour of birth.

Complete External and Internal Treatment for Every Form of Facial Humors. Cuticura Soap (25c) to Cleanse the Skin, Cuticura Ointment (50c) to Heal the Skin, and Cuticura Resolvent (50c) for the Purification of the Blood. Total cost, $1.50. For the Blood, send throughout the world. Put on your Cuticura Soap, Boston, Mass. Sole Mfgs., Boston, Mass.

MAILED FREE. How to Cure Skin Humors.

MAILED FREE. How to Cure Skin Humors.

MAILED FREE. How to Cure Skin Humors.

MAILED FREE. How to Cure Skin Humors.

MAILED FREE. How to Cure Skin Humors.

MAILED FREE. How to Cure Skin Humors.

MAILED FREE. How to Cure Skin Humors.

MAILED FREE. How to Cure Skin Humors.

MAILED FREE. How to Cure Skin Humors.

MAILED FREE. How to Cure Skin Humors.

MAILED FREE. How to Cure Skin Humors.

MAILED FREE. How to Cure Skin Humors.

MAILED FREE. How to Cure Skin Humors.

MAILED FREE. How to Cure Skin Humors.

MAILED FREE. How to Cure Skin Humors.

MAILED FREE. How to Cure Skin Humors.

MAILED FREE. How to Cure Skin Humors.

MAILED FREE. How to Cure Skin Humors.

MAILED FREE. How to Cure Skin Humors.

MAILED FREE. How to Cure Skin Humors.

MAILED FREE. How to Cure Skin Humors.

MAILED FREE. How to Cure Skin Humors.

MAILED FREE. How to Cure Skin Humors.

MAILED FREE. How to Cure Skin Humors.

MAILED FREE. How to Cure Skin Humors.

MAILED FREE. How to Cure Skin Humors.

MAILED FREE. How to Cure Skin Humors.

MAILED FREE. How to Cure Skin Humors.

MAILED FREE. How to Cure Skin Humors.

MAILED FREE. How to Cure Skin Humors.

MAILED FREE. How to Cure Skin Humors.

MAILED FREE. How to Cure Skin Humors.

MEMORIAL DAY OBSERVED IN EUGENE

When the May has culled her flowers for the Summer waited long, and the breath of early roses went the hedges into song, Comes the throb of martial music and the banners in the street, And the marching of the millions, bearing garlands fair and sweet, 'Tis the sabbath of the nation, 'tis the floral feast of May! In remembrance of our heroes We keep Memorial Day.

Memorial Day is being properly observed in Eugene. Business is suspended and practically the entire population of the city is participating in the ceremonies of the day, which seem even more impressive and attended with greater solemnity than ever before. The flowers were in greater profusion, the crowds at the cemetery and the number of persons in the line of parade far surpassed anything yet seen in Eugene on a similar occasion.

The street parade, which is always a leading feature of the day in Eugene, was elaborate and long. It was formed at the intersection of Seventh and Williamette streets, and promptly at 10 o'clock, an advertised, the column was put in motion. First came Major Geo. O. Yoran and staff followed by Co. C and Co. A, first Separate Battalion, then came the Sons of Veterans and members of the G. A. R. on foot, then the W. R. C. and Ladies of the G. A. R. in carriages, besides a number of the older members of the G. A. R. in carriages; the distance to the cemetery being too far for them to walk. Mayor Matlock, City Recorder Dorris and the members of the city council followed in carriages, and last came the school children and citizens in vehicles. The streets leading to the cemetery had been sprinkled during the forenoon and the parade was not attended with the usual dust.

S. W. Taylor was marshal in charge of the parade, and he was assisted by F. T. Plank and W. G. White. Upon the arrival of the parade at the I. O. O. F. cemetery a hollow square was formed around the old soldiers' lot, where the ritualistic services of the G. A. R. were carried out in an impressive manner. After these ceremonies were completed the crowd was directed to the lot of the Spanish war veterans, where similar services were held and the address of the occasion was delivered by Professor B. J. Hawthorne, whose son, Wistar, died at Manila while in his country's service during the war with Spain.

Flowers were in profusion at both lots and it seemed that the whole cemetery was banked with a great mass of vari-colored roses and other choice flowers that grow to perfection in Oregon. Dinner served. The services at the cemetery were ended about noon and the crowds wended their way back to the city. The W. R. C. had prepared a substantial dinner for the old soldiers and their families in G. A. R. hall and as soon as the veterans returned from the cemetery the tables were spread. Flowers on the water. The beautiful ceremony of scattering flowers on the water in memory of the nation's sailor dead was performed at the Ninth street bridge across the mill pond at 2 this afternoon. The ceremonies were in charge of the W. C. T. U., assisted by the G. A. R. and Sons of Veterans. Besides the ritualistic services Judge L. T. Harris delivered a touching address, Rev. O. C. Wright offered an invocation and patriotic and religious songs were sung. This service was inaugurated in Eugene only three or four years ago and has proven to be one of the popular features of Memorial Day.

LOST VALLEY NEWS

(Special Correspondence.)

Lost Valley, June 3.—Our hearty thanks to the county court for their promptness in following our advice in regard to the badly needed bridge at Lowell.

We understand that F. R. Parker is to be principal of the Crosswell school this coming year. Mr. Parker is one of Lane's foremost educators. We congratulate Creswell.

Mr. and Mrs. Holdridge, of Cloverdale, visited with William Williams and family Sunday.

Miss Ennis Neet has gone to Eugene to reside with the family of Mr. and Mrs. A. Mathews. Ennis, we miss you.

Mrs. W. H. Fenton and Mrs. H. M. Parvin were in Eugene recently doing spring shopping.

Miss Alta Williams is home for vacation. Greetings to you, Alta.

Mr. Lawrence, of June, was a visitor to our Sunday school May 25.

Mrs. Cecilia Hunsaker and daughter, Carrie are visiting in the valley.

Dan Parker, of this place, is quarantined at the Eugene hospital. What's the matter, Dan? Chicken pox?

We are pleased to see the genial countenance of Uncle Dan Hunsaker in our midst once more.

D. C. Mathews & Sons have commenced operations on their plant on upper Lost Creek.

Parvin & Cruzan Bros. loaded a car with dressed lumber Saturday.

Miss Belle Keeney is spending the summer vacation with her parents.

A goodly number of our neighbors attended the picnic at Trent Saturday.

Quite a number of our people spent a portion of Decoration Day at the Pleasant Hill cemetery.

"MISTY HOLLOW."

EUGENE COMMERCIAL COLLEGE

The Eugene Commercial College will be open September 1, 1907, in the Hall block, with a new corps of teachers and competent instructors. GEO. T. HALL.

John Isham, of Madras, Crook county, a former resident of Lane county, is here again and will sojourn at Belknap Springs for the benefit of his health. He has been in Portland under medical treatment for several weeks past.

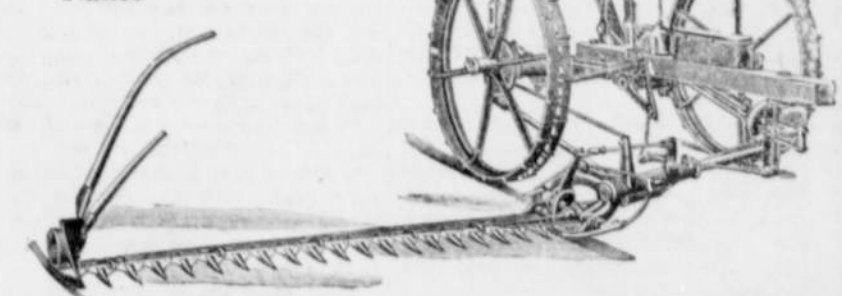

E. P. Williams, of Pleasant Hill, was in the city yesterday.

Here is a Pair, Mr. Farmer, that you cannot improve by drawing to them

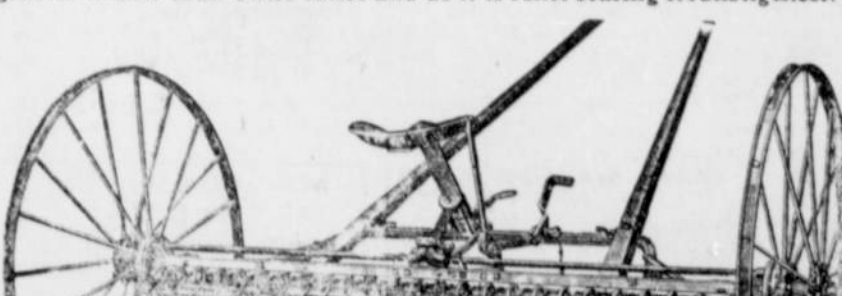

As they will beat three of almost any other mower and rake make. Flexible cutter bar for rough ground. The Osborne Mower is very durable, light running and easily handled, the smallest team can draw a five foot mower all day with ease, a child can handle the mower and understand it. We will replace any broken part during the first year.

"Our Guarantee is Always Good"

A full line of Osborne extras for Binders, Mowers and Rakes

The Osborne Self Dump Rake will be sold this year at the same price that other makes are sold at, and you can satisfy yourself of the superiority in five minutes. It rakes more ground at a swath, it will stand greater strains than other rakes and as it is roller bearing it runs lightest.

MOON & T