ARMSTRONG AND HAINES, THE HORSE THIEVES, GIVEN INDETERMINATE SENTENCE OF FROM ONE TO TEN YEARS—COURT WILL SOON ADJOURN

Judge Harris of the circuit court this afternoon sentenced Robert Dillon, the man who forged the name of an Albany man to a check and passed it on Roberts Bros.' Toggery in this city, to three years in the state penitentiary, he having pleaded guilty.

H. Armstrong and W. Haines, the youths who hired two horses from the Kompp livery stable at Junction City, and ran away with them to Crook county, also pleaded guilty and were given an indeterminate sentence of from one to ten years in the penitentiary. If their behavior is the best they will serve the minimum time.

This cleans up the docket of criminal cases, six of those accused of crimes having pleaded guilty and been sentenced, and three were discharged without trial.

Road Case Takes Time

The Yoran-Linn et al road case, which was started yesterday, occupied all of today, going to the jury late this afternoon.

There are a few minor civil cases to be tried, and as soon as they are completed the court will adjourn.

The Fred Lemley liquor case was continued until the next term because the principal witness of the prosecution is ill.

WANTS FULTON TO SUE LINCOLN STEFFENS

Tucson, Ariz., Jan. 4.—When asked for a statement in reply to the open letter of Senator Fulton, of Oregon, today, Francis J. Heney said:

It is not an easy matter to answer a letter which I have not read and will not attempt to do so. Lincoln Steffens' articles on Oregon land frauds, published in the American magazine, and several articles in Collier's weekly make statements about Senator Fulton which are libelous, if not true, and charge him with acts which would be construed as corrupt. If he denies their truth, I suggest that he test their accuracy by a libel suit.

Any and every statement which I have made about Senator Fulton for publication I am prepared to substantiate with legal evidence when the proper time and opportunity arrive.

"In the meantime I call attention to the fact that Mitchell, Williamson, Jones, Mays, and even Puter, of Oregon, and Abe Ruef, Eugene Schmitz and Louis Glass, of SanFrancisco, each vehemently denied that he had committed any wrong and challenged me to produce evidence thereof.

I have made good on each of them and I will just as conclusively make good on Senator Fulton as to any statement which I have heretofore given out against him for publication.
FRANCIC J. HENEY.

Denounces Heney As a Liar

When shown the foregoing dispatch last night Senator Fulton said: "I called on Mr. Heney for facts; of course, I knew he had none to substantiate his vile insinuations. I denounced him as a liar and he now writes himself down as one, as he fails and refuses even to attempt to submit any statement of facts."

DIED.

MONUMENT UNVEILED TO MEMORY OF VICTIMS OF BENNINGTON HORROR WITH IMPRESSIVE CEREMONIES

REAR ADMIRAL GOODRICH.

San Diego, Jan. 7.—In the presence of thousands, including the officers and sailors of the Pacific squadron and citizens of San Diego and other California cities, who had gathered to witness the ceremony, the memorial monument to the Bennington dead was unveiled this afternoon at the national cemetery on top of Point Loma. Large squads of marines from the warships in the harbor joined with the local militia, the naval reserve and two companies of soldiers from Fort Rosecranz, acted as escort to the cemetery, and hundreds of sailors attended without being assigned to the escort.

Right Rev. Joseph H. Johnson, bishop of the southern diocese of the Episcopal church of California, invoked the divine blessing and the music was supplied by the choir of St. Paul's Episcoal church.

The principal address was made by Rear Admiral Goodrich, commandant of the Brooklyn navy yard, who was commander of the Pacific squadron at the time of the accident to the Bennington. He reviewed the history of the monument and what it commemorated. He said in part:

"It is not my intention to narrate the many noble cases of self sacrifice which illuminate the sad and dark annals of that dreary day. They have passed into history, to form a splendid chapter of which all Americans may well be proud. Out of the steam and clouds of the lower deck several found their way to safety through the presence of mind of one who, raising his voice above the din, called "This is the way; follow me." Men with scalded and blackened faces, the flesh dropping from their bones, endeavored to save their shipmates in still worse case. Some poor sufferers, crazed by their pain, sought relief by throwing themselves in the sea. The instances of men returning again and again at the risk of their lives to rescue their wounded shipmates from the steam filled and perilous spaces below decks are numerous enough to freshen our faith in mankind and to assure us that the American man-of-warsman of today worthily maintains the traditions of a glorious past. What more can be said of the fortitude of any man than this: "Ferguson refused aid and clambered into the ambulance himself, leaving large pieces of his skin on the dock." Alas, it is only his memory which we can now honor, for the man himself shortly afterward crossed the great divide into that land where si and suffering may not enter."

* * * * * * * * * *

"Nothing we can do will add to their fame. Yet, Knowing this full well, we, their comrades, here declare that, so far as our poor efforts can accomplish it, the lesson of their great sacrifice shall not be lost to their native land. In this spirit we dedicate this monument to their memory in token of our own affection and the reverence in which the navy holds its illustrious dead.

"Brothers, you have but gone before us into eternal rest, through the wide portal of suffering and pain, but you have left us, who linger, the lamp of your example to shine as long as the navy of the United States shall exist, cherishing its living and revering those who fell at their post. From this sacred spot the youth of our broad country who enter its service will draw fresh inspiration. Living they will be loved and helped along their way; and when the last summons shall come, finer tribute they cannot receive than that they met their fate as bravely, as loyally and as unregrettingly as did the dead of the United States ship Bennington.

"The finished obelisk stands here today. It makes no pretense to elaboration of design or of ornamentation, for it commemorates the heroism of simple men whose guiding motive was devotion to their duty. To all it teaches a lesson that he who enters the service of his country does so unreservedly, in fact as well as in words. At any moment and in any manner he may be called upon to fulfill that obligation to the letter. His life is one of perils and privations. Long years are devoted by him to the preparation for one brief hour, upon whose issue may hang the very existence of the nation. The annals of our service but too dolorously proclaim that the preparation has exacted and continues to exact its appalling tribute of human life. Yet some must perish that the nation may sruvive.

"The end of those who repose here was not less exalting in its patriotism than is the end of those who fall in battle. In some respects it seems to be on a still more exalted plane. To them were denied the laurels of the victor and the shouts of an applauding populace. Yet as they look down upon this scene today from the heights of the beattitude, they must rejoice in the consciousness that they failed not to give to their country, when she asked it, the utmost they had to give, dying as brave men and true would wish to die, in the performance of duty."

Unveiling ceremony..

When Admiral Goodrich had concluded his address the unveiling took place, consisting of the dropping of the national ensign which had been draped over the two tablets of stone on the face of the monument. One was inscribed:

"To the Bennington dead," and the other:

"Erected by the officers and men of the Pacific squadron, to the memory of those who lost their lives in the performance of duty."

As the flags dropped the soldiers presented arms and three ruffles and flourishes on the drums started the minute guns on board the Charleston and Chicago, which were fired regularly through the remainder of the services.

The second address was given by Colonel R. V. Dodge, president of the Bennington Memorial Association, and after theclosing hymn and the benediction by Bishop Johnson, the graves were decorated with flowers by children from Point Loma Homestead.
