PORTLAND MARKET REPORT

Portland, Or., Jan. 16.—People who are inclined to be pessimistic as to the financial and industrial world, should, according to the Boston Statist, one of the leading financial publications of the country, withhold their fears for about three months. March, the paper says, is the test month of the business year and judgment as to what the business for the year 1908 is going to be should be suspended until the showing for March has been made. The Statist says: "January and February are not especially significant months in the business world. The old business year has been completed and the new one not yet begun. These two months are times of comparative rest. Agriculture is suspended, mining is curtailed, railway traffic is smaller than during several other months, building operations are largely suspended, and manufacturers are not as busy as during the Spring and Fall months. "But when March comes trade and transportation always become more active. March is nearly always the first month showing a heavy movement of merchandise in both foreign and domestic circles. By that time, merchants, manufacturers and traders are preparing in earnest for the year's business. Manufacturers are busy on their orders for spring and summer goods of all kinds; merchants are stocking up their shelves and warehouses; and the railroads are busy moving goods to market. Hence March will be the test month. If railroad tonnage is then light it will mean that the spring trade is going to be small and poor. "If bank exchanges during March are way below normal it will mean that an unusually small amount of new business is being initiated. If imports of raw or crude material are small, it will mean that manufacturers are curbing their output. The business now being done has little or no bearing upon the future. But if March is a poor month it will mean that trade and business will be repressed at least till September, when J. FRANK TITUS, M. D.—Homeopathic physician and surgeon. It will be stimulated by good crops. While the tone of the sugar market is very firm and steady in the east and prices have recently advanced for both raw and refined, the Pacific coast situation is far from being in a good position. With three refineries now bidding for the trade of the Pacific states as compared with one a few years ago, prices cannot be made as unmade at the whim of one party. The fact that the Honolulu Plantation company has recently completed one of the best Sugar Refineries, puts that concern in the front rank as far as price making is concerned. A little more than a year ago the Plantation company made an effort to secure a foothold on the coast but without the proper representation its efforts were futile. Now it's business on the coast is being looked after by one of the biggest brokerage firms in the west and already it is making itself felt in sugar circles. While the sugar market naturally tends toward a higher range of values owing to the sharp improvement in eastern values, there's no telling what may develop in the Pacific situation overnight. Prune Market Holding Steady. Recent attempts to corner the prune crop of California and thereby control prices on the Pacific coast, have proven failures for the reason that Oregon has too great a crop and was not even considered by the parties manipulating the "corner. While prunes are moving somewhat better here, prices are far from satisfactory compared with the ones that ruled previous to the financial flurry. New York advices state that a San Jose packer writes his local correspondent as follows. "The prune situation at this end is as follows: California has on hand about 15,000,000 or 17,000,000 pounds in the Santa Clara valley. Last year, during the month of December we shipped 18,000,000 pounds and during the spring months 20,000,000 pounds more. Up to the present time we have not shipped into the eastern markets one-half the amount we shipped last year up to December 1. The stocks carried on hand through the country will be less than ever known on January 1, therefore we think there will be a heavy demand and a stiffening of prices within the next thirty days, and I would advise you to get in, as you cannot possibly lose. We cannot state anything in regard to next year's crop of prunes at the present time, but should the 'thrip' be as bad as increase proportionately one year and the year before, it will affect the growing crop very materially. Our prices on peaches are 10 1-4c for choice, 11c for extra choice and 11 1-2c for fancy." Oregon Eggs at 30c a Dozen. While in some quarters a fractional advance is sometimes asked over 30c for strictly fresh local eggs, most of the sales are being made at that figure. It is stated that one local house has been offering northern people eggs at this figure. Receipts are decreasing and this may help to cause improved buying but no great advances are at present expected in the price because of the enormous supplies of eastern which are being offered 10c under the local product. Changes remain dull with dealers offering 12c for live stock. Turkeys are not wanted at all and arrivals for the past few days are being held by receivers. Brief Notes of The Trade. Selling of hops continued heavy at country points with most transactions between 5 1-2 and 6c a pound. W. R. Scheurer of Butteville was in the city today and stated that local buyers were paying the full limits as only about 6c net could be obtained by shipping abroad. Creamery butter market is holding its own; two creameries retaining the high figures. On account of the advances of the east and the general better feeling there, local handlers are not so weak in their views. Changed values will be noted in sack and vegetable today. Apple movement continues to increase but values are holding stationary. Rice markets are gaining firmness everywhere but trade was not very brisk during the past week. So say the coast trade journals. Portland Livestock Market. The local livestock market continues steady to strong in all lines at the prices that have prevailed for several days. Cattle—Best steers $3.75 @ 4.25; medium $3.25 @ 3.75; cows $3.00 @ 3.25; fair to medium cows $2.50 @ 2.75; bulls $1.50 @ 2.25; calves $3.75 @ 4.25. Sheep—Good, sheared $4.25 @ 4.75; full wool $4.50 @ 5.00; lambs $4.50 @ 5.25. Hogs—Best $5.10 @ 5.35; lights, fats and feeders, $4.75 @ 5.25. PORTLAND MARKET REPORT Creamery Butter—30c @ 35c.
