CHAMBERLAIN AND GEARIN SPOKE AT THEATRE

(From Friday's Daily Guard.) A large crowd greeted Governor Chamberlain and ex-United States Senator Gearin at the Eugene theatre last night, and while the meeting was perhaps not as enthusiastic as former meetings which the governor has addressed here, he was occasionally interrupted by applause.

The governor was introduced by Attorney Lee M. Travis, chairman of the Democratic central committee, who announced him as Oregon's next United States senator.

The first fifteen minutes of Governor Chamberlain's speech was devoted to a brief review of the rapid development of the state and to a defense of the initiative and referendum and the direct primary law, which embodies the momentous Statement Number One.

"I would rather be defeated working for the plain people than elected by the interests against them," declared the speaker. "Financially, I would be unable to hold my own in the 'Millionaires' Club,' as the United States senate is properly termed, and my only desire for the senatorship is to serve the people of the state which I love better than any other state in the Union."

"Pays Respects to Cake" My opponent, Mr. Cake, was a candidate for the United States senate in 1906, but he did not subscribe to Statement No. 1. Mr. Bourne did and was elected. A great many men say that Mr. Bourne's election was a mistake on the part of the people.

"Before the primaries Mr. Cake declared himself in favor of Statement No. 1, and even urged the defeat of any candidate for the legislature who opposed it. After the primaries, however, he kicked his Statement No. 1 supporters out of the back door and invited his opponents into the front door."

no suggestions to make regarding local candidates for the legislature. I do not believe that the people of Oregon will stand for such equivocation and evasion on such an important issue."

Roosevelt, or Anti? Answering the argument that Mr. "Cake" being a member of the dominant party—Republican—in congress, he would therefore be able to accomplish much more for Oregon than would a Democrat, Mr. Chamberlain said:

"What kind of a Republican is Mr. Cake—Roosevelt supporter or allied with the faction opposing his policies? Roosevelt made himself the most popular man in the country by recommending to congress the measures long before advocated by Bryan, and the interests now opposing Mr. Roosevelt are the same interests that opposed Bryan in the past."

"Now, with regard to myself, I will state with all candor that if sent to the senate I would line up with the Roosevelt in all matters affecting party organization, but in matters affecting the welfare of the nation and the people of Oregon I would wear no party standard. Neither will it be of any concern to me who is president. If he stands for the great principles for which we are fighting he will receive my most earnest support."

What a Democrat Can Do. "It has been charged by my opponents that a Democrat could do nothing for Oregon in the senate," and the governor smiled when he said this. "Do you know that Senator Gearin, a Democrat, and Senator Fulton, a Republican, working together, secured the biggest appropriation for Oregon that the state ever received—a sum in excess of $4,000,000? And now, with a solid Republican delegation in congress, the state cannot get anything—not even the fleet to stop off the Columbia and Willamette rivers, notwithstanding ships are stopping at every frog pond on the journey."

Even the trade for governmental supplies for the Philippines has been transferred from Portland to San Francisco. It's really a detriment to Oregon, to be so solidly Republican, because the party leaders in Washington do not feel that it is necessary to give the state anything to keep it in line. Show me a doubtful state politically and I'll show you a state that is getting all sorts of favors from congress.

There is Montana, for instance. With one Democrat and one Republican in the senate, she got more money for Helena and Butte than did all of Oregon, and Portland could stick both cities in her pocket and walk away with them without knowing that she was carrying anything (laughter and applause). Galveston, Texas, where there is nothing but Democrats, got enough money from congress to deepen its harbor from 12 to 28 feet. I have more confidence in a Republican congress, than has Mr. Cake, and I believe I could do more for Oregon than he by an United States aid of Democrats, as did Mr. Gearin."

What He Favors. In outlining his platform, Governor Chamberlain said that he stood for the following: Purchase of the locks at Oregon City either by the state or the federal government; establishment of postal savings banks; adoption of the Oklahoma banking law; limiting the immigration of Asiatic coolies; enactment of an income tax law; making his own employer liability law national in scope and placing the Indian war veterans upon the same pension footing with veterans of other wars.

Governor Chamberlain called attention to the fact that it was upon his own suggestion that the owners of the Willamette river locks at Oregon City were sued and forced to disgorge some $300,000 due to the state school fund upon a basis of 10 per cent of the tolls collected upon freight.

Senator Gearin's Address. After Governor Chamberlain had delivered his eloquent and vigorous address, ex-United States Senator John M. Gearin followed, giving further reasons why Chamberlain was a better man for United States senator than Cake, and also touching upon the State University, expressing the attitude that he and the governor took.

In the first place he asked that the representatives of the press spread throughout the state of Oregon his opinion and stand upon this momentous question of welfare to the commonwealth. Gearin was born in Oregon, and said:

EUGENE TO EXTEND CORPORATE LIMITS

The Springfield News induces in the following bit of "sassy": The News has been informed that Eugene is intending, in the near future, to extend its corporate limits, taking in Springfield Junction and as far east as the Willamette river. It is the opinion of the News that Springfield will heartily endorse this move and will do everything in her power to encourage her sister city to act quickly.

When the schoolhouse was built on that side of the river our people made a great mistake, but perhaps this can be sold to Eugene. Even should Eugene decide to expand enough to shelter the residents of Springfield under her grander wing, she may find obstacles in her way that will not be easily overcome.

Billie are out announcing the annual Junction May picnic. The date is Thursday, May 28. The county candidates will be there that day and all kinds of speeches will be turned loose. The Brownsville baseball club will play the home team in the afternoon. This promises to be a spirited game and well worth seeing.

There will be a tug-of-war and a baseball game between the two lodges, and numerous other games and sports. There will be something doing every minute.—Leader.

A few days ago The Guard mentioned the fact that the Eugene Planning Mill Company intends to at once enlarge its mill on Lawrence street and increase its capacity by the addition of more machinery. At the same time it was stated that a new partner would soon be taken. The new member of the firm is L. G. Clark, recently from Pittsburg, Pa., who has arrived here and bought an interest in the plant. The improvements will begin as soon as the materials can be secured.

The Seattle Produce Company, which now occupies a room in the Gordon block, is getting ready to move across the street to the new Potts building.

A BABY SEAL AS A PET. An expert swimmer on the Pacific coast recently captured and has tamed the baby seal shown in this picture. The little waif, evidently having lost its mother, followed him when he was swimming in the surf and took kindly to his fondling. It is now three months old and is as cute a pet as one would care to see. The baby seal is never happier than when cuddling in its owner's arms and feigning sleep.

AIRSHIP BURSTS ON TRIAL TRIP INJURING SIXTEEN

Oakland, Cal., May 23.—The Morrell airship, the largest ever constructed, collapsed on its trial trip when about 300 feet above the ground today, and dashed its sixteen occupants to the earth. None of them were killed, but all seriously hurt, suffering from broken limbs and other injuries. It is believed that several will die.

Thousands of people had gathered to witness the trial of the giant ship, which is 450 feet long and 30 feet in diameter, a combination of the aeroplane and dirigible air craft, driven by six gasoline engines generating 200 horsepower. It rose successfully from the ground, and sixteen men in an easy descent. However, when 75 feet from the ground it suddenly shot downward with terrific force, and the occupants were caught under the wreckage.

Among the spectators were many women, scores of whom injured during the descent of the airship. When the great gas bag burst there was a panic in the immense crowd watching the ascension. When the big craft, which weighed five tons, which held the little gas which remained, so that the fumes would not asphyxiate the injured. The heavy engines were responsible for the injury of most of the occupants.

The injured were immediately placed in automobiles and express wagons and taken to the Roosevelt hospital. The Morrell airship was built at a cost of $90,000, and was designed primarily to enter the contest with various aerial craft in the East. The cause of the collapse has not been ascertained, but probably there was a small leak which gave way to the tremendous pressure.

Mondell, of Wyoming, and Messrs. of Tennessee, who signed the report, urged its adoption. Reeder, of Kansas, bitterly opposed it and in the course of his remarks made the following statement: "The people of the West seldom send men here who do not vote for what they want, and I presume men who advocate this bill have hundreds of thousands of acres of Western land and they have the American disposition to take everything that adjoins them."
