

FOR HAY FEVER.

Peruna is Sometimes Used With Excellent Results.

A CASE IN POINT.

MISS MAYME E. SMITH.

MISS MAYME E. SMITH, 444 East Mount St., Columbus, Ohio, writes: "I have used Peruna for catarrh and hay fever. The results being remarkable, I can highly recommend it to all who are suffering with the above diseases. I am happy to be able to say it has helped me wonderfully."

What is known as hay fever is in reality endemic catarrh, a catarrhal condition of the nose, throat, sometimes the bronchial tubes, induced by some local irritant.

The irritation is generally due to vegetable emanations of some sort. Hay has been suspected as being the cause of this malady, hence its name, hay fever. It has been attributed to rag weed and other vegetation also. It is a very capricious disease, coming and going. A medicine that will help one case may not help another. Such treatment has always been very uncertain and unsatisfactory.

Peruna helps some cases without a doubt, although it is not claimed to be an infallible remedy for such cases.

BEVERIDGE AND HUGHES OPEN OHIO CONTEST

Youngstown, O., Sept. 9.—The republican campaign in Ohio was formally opened here today with one of the largest political demonstrations ever held in the Buckeye State. Much enthusiasm was manifested on every hand. The streets were gayly decorated with flags and bunting, and hundreds of visitors were on hand from all parts of the state. Large delegations, many of them accompanied by bands, arrived during the early forenoon from Columbus, Dayton, Cincinnati, Cleveland, Canton and other cities. The parade was participated in by many clubs, and was viewed by a shouting populace.

The big event of the day's program was the meeting which succeeded the parade. A throng of record-breaking proportions heard the speakers. Arthur L. Vorys, manager of the movement which culminated in William H. Taft's nomination for the presidency, was the presiding officer. Mr. Vorys introduced Governor Andrew L. Harris as the first orator. Senator Harris was accorded a hearty reception, and his address was given close attention. The next speaker was Governor Charles E. Hughes, of New York, who was introduced as the chief orator of the day. Governor Hughes spoke at considerable length on the issues of the national campaign. The meeting was closed with an address by Senator A. J. Beveridge, of Indiana. Hughes' Address.

Mr. Hughes said in part: "No one more than I desires to see administration purged of every selfish taint, to have fair and impartial laws faithfully executed, to get rid of every vestige of special privilege at the expense of public interest, to liberate trade from unjust encroachments, to purify our electoral methods and to maintain honest representative government. And it is because of his loyalty to these ideals, because of his broad sympathies and his rare equipment in character, ability and experience, because tested in the difficult fields of judicial and administrative work he has proved his quality by eminent service, because of his varied learning, his acquaintance with affairs, his respect for constitutional government and his capacity intelligently and justly to plan and direct necessary reforms that I most earnestly support the candidacy of William Howard Taft."

Popular Rule. "Twelve years ago the democracy of Tilden and of Cleveland was overthrown in its own house. Under the old name, but with a new alignment and leadership, a desperate assault was made upon the credit of private property and the integrity of the country. It was an attack upon our fundamental securities, and our belief as to the sincerity of the motive serves only to magnify the dangerous character of the attempt and the unwisdom of the leadership which inspired it. A campaign of education followed. Thousands of democrats, more intent upon the safety of the country than upon fidelity to a party name, itself betrayed, supported the republican, or rather the National, cause. Then ensued a great popular victory, the vindication of the conscience, and intelligence of the electorate, and the people ruled in the election of William McKinley. Four years later, after the surprise of the Spanish war, with its entanglement of unexpected obligations, that administration was triumphantly vindicated in popular support. President McKinley, a victim of insensate passion, held down his life-trusted and beloved by all people. To the difficult task then devolved upon him with the problems created by an unparalleled prosperity, came a new leader dear to the people's heart, and determination, and four years ago he received an overwhelming endorsement by the people, and for seven years, with lofty aim and unconquerable spirit, he has labored for the people, and today by virtue of his sincere devotion to their welfare, his valiant attack upon evil in high places, his zeal for the common interest, whether in the protection of the public domain or in insistent upon the freedom of interstate trade, or in the maintenance of high standards of the rights of labor, the recognition of our natural resources, the beneficent and representative leader is testified in the popular imagination in the person of Theodore Roosevelt."

Interests of Labor. The republican party has been zealous of the rights of labor. Mr. Taft is clearly right when he says that "the shadow of moral anxiety government has any other national administration done so much for the cause of labor by the enactment of remedial legislation as has Theodore Roosevelt and the republican congress elected to sit during his term of office." And in support of this assertion he instances the re-enacted Employers' Liability act, the Safety Appliance act, the Government Employees' Compensation act; provision for the investigation of mine disasters and legislation with regard to masters and labor in the District of Columbia. He has exposed the demagoguery of the "injunctions" which should not be issued in any case in which industrial disputes were involved. "A Janus-faced proposal, meaning or in the case of the republican party, has taken a reasonable attitude upon the injunction question. But more important to labor than any benevolent procedure in injunction cases is the opportunity to work. It profits the

to a workingman to be told that he will be given the right to trial by jury in case he is guilty of contempt of court, if those who promise it propose to enter upon a fatuous course of arbitrary interference with trade. The prosperity of the workingman fundamentally depends upon wise, conserving and upbuilding policies; and demands that efforts to reform industrial evils should be carefully conceived and presented without endangering the stability of legitimate business enterprise. Beveridge's Address. Speaking of the opposing presidential candidates Senator Beveridge said: "This is a campaign of candidates even more than of platforms. The question is not which candidate is most upright, patriotic, brave, for both men are equally so. Both mean equally well toward their country. The real question is which candidate will make the best president? Which is the wisest and sturdiest? Which man would you choose as administrator of your estate? Which would you select to manage your business? Which has the best training and most experience?" Mr. Bryan has never handled a single foreign problem. He has governed no Philippines, reorganized no Cuba, built no canal, avoided no alien danger, saved us from no threatened peril. Mr. Taft has done all. It is his genius for the practical and devotion to humanity that took Philippine chaos and made Philippine order; took Philippine hate and changed it, by the alchemy of his tact, to Philippine love. It was his statesmanship that achieved the impossible, and converted an Oriental people into a voting citizenship—laid the foundation for a future which, as God wills, may become a separate nation or a glad and patriotic part of this great republic. It was William H. Taft who set Cuba in order, established her feet in civilization's upward path, and it was he, when so directed by President Roosevelt, who first advised with Mr. Taft, when these children of liberty tore his work to pieces, set up once more the blessed rule of order and liberty and law with a father's patience and a statesman's wisdom. It is he who is commanding enterprise of human history, the building of the Panama canal. Taft the Experienced. It was he whose counsel President Roosevelt sought at every crisis of his historic administration; he who steered our narrow misde would have plunged us into conflict; it was William H. Taft whom our president, when confronted with foreign perplexities and with the awful weight of our ninety millions welfare on his heart, sought for strength and wisdom; and it is William H. Taft more than any other man ever called to the leadership of the American people, who has had the best training, the widest experience and the wisest teaching to fit him for that glorious but serious task. In domestic affairs Mr. Bryan has written not one law, administered not a single department, advised no president, while lecturing all. He is a preacher of righteousness, but not an administrator of affairs. He has never conducted the government of a city, a county, a state or a nation. William H. Taft has been a judge on the bench, a governor of a people, administrator of a department, and has helped to shape most of the progressive laws we have passed in the last seven years, and his great heart and splendid mind are behind every law we propose today. The thought for counselor of three presidents—as different yet as wise as Harrison, McKinley and Roosevelt—Taft has equipped him to be the leader of the people who loved and honored these three chief magistrates. Almost it seems that here is a man prepared by Providence to be the captain of this chosen people. Bryan's Unfit and Unfit Place. Let no man denounce Mr. Bryan. (Continued on Page Eight.)
