

Women as Well as Men Are Made Miserable by Kidney and Bladder Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh, or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy, Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a Home of Swamp-Root pamphlet telling all about Swamp-Root, including many of the most interesting testimonial letters received from sufferers cured.

MICRO ITCING SCALP DANDRUFF AND FALLING HAIR are but outward signs of the evil done in secret by myriads of dandruff germs sapping the life blood of the hair. Micro kills the parasite, soothes the itching scalp, gives lustre to the hair and stops it falling out. A single application gives relief and proves its worth. Save your hair before too late. Micro prevents baldness. It is a delightful dressing for the hair, free from grease and sticky oils. Ask your druggist for free booklet. HOYT CHEMICAL CO. PORTLAND, OREGON

VARSITY SQUAD GETTING EDUCATION IN RUDIMENTS

Two weeks more of preliminary practice is the schedule of the Oregon football squad, from what Coach Forbes said last night after practice. Then hard bucking will begin. Forbes, like most Yale men, evidently believes that thorough work in preliminary training is one of the most essential qualities in the production of a good team.

The men so far, have been running in punts, rudimentary tactics, and learning to handle the ball and themselves properly. The squad, which is doing a very large, averaging nearly fifty every night, and from this number Forbes is gradually sifting the most likely candidates for the team.

The scramble for the position of ends, half back, and quarter, seemed to be particularly lively. As for the most careful observers have had difficulty to see much difference in the aptness and cleverness of the candidates.

Alumni Game. Talk is being indulged in of an Alumni game to be played on October 17. Formerly the first regular game of the year was played with the old graduates, but last year the plan was abandoned, and no place made on the schedule this season. The reason such a contest will be advisable next month, is that the old graduates of the regular schedule is with Willamette. In the past the scores with the Methodist college have not been large, and while prospects at the Salem institution do not seem bright now, it may be that a strong aggregation will be turned out in a case a team of fair strength should come against the united Oregon eleven, there is always the possibility of being beaten in the initiative contest.

Registration 465. Registration at the University yesterday, not counting in the music students, or any side issues, was 475. The total registration last year was 436, and the prophecy is made at the University office that the total for the first and second semester will be about 525.

College News. Don Stephenson and Walter Moore, two engineering graduates of last June, who are in the employ of the Pacific Bridge Company, visited friends in Eugene over Sunday, returning to Portland last night. "Pat" McArthur has been visiting in the city for a few days. As well as a newspaper writer and football authority, McArthur is becoming a politician of some note in the ingredients which make the Multnomah pot still. Dan Kelly did not come to Eugene last week to visit friends, but went from Portland to his home in Baker city. The gymnasium at the University has received some new apparatus for class work. "Lee" Hurd, half-back of the 'Varsity three years ago, is out in a suit, and is making a good showing. He wore the star guard of last year, is trying for end, and with his weight and accustomed speed, is making things interesting for the younger men.

AMERICAN BANKERS STILL IN SESSION

Denver, Colo., Sept. 30. -With an attendance of prominent financiers and business men from practically every State and Territory in the Union, the thirty-fourth annual convention of the American Bankers' Association was called to order in the Auditorium this morning by President J. D. Powers. Bishop Olmsted delivered the invocation and Governor Batehel and Mayor Speer made addresses of welcome. The initial session, following the welcome and responses, was given over wholly to the reports of the officers and standing committees of the association. Included among the reports were those of Secretary F. E. Farnsworth and Treasurer A. A. Crane. Several other committee reports were presented when the convention reassembled after luncheon and the association then took up the program of addresses and discussions on practical banking questions. The two important addresses of the day were presented by B. E. Walker, president of the Canadian Bankers' Association, and Dr. Woodrow Wilson, president of Princeton University. The address of Mr. Walker dealt with the "Abnormal Features of American Banking." President Wilson of Princeton took as his subject, "The Banker and the Nation."

Settled Through The Settlement.

By LULU JOHNSON. Copyrighted, 1908, by Associated Literary Press.

No one watching the line of girls thread its way through the aisles of the museums would have imagined that the serious faced young woman who acted as guide was the rich Miss Moutaire. Indeed, judging from the brilliancy of appearance, the other girls looked far more the social star than did the lady of millions in her severely tailored dress and quiet hat.

To Brookfield, wandering among the antiques on the lower floor, Irma Moutaire looked a teacher conducting her fashionable charges on one of their prescribed educational tours. To him the costly of the girls was real and the costly tailored gown of their self appointed guide a simple and unpretentious garment.

He could not realize that the elegant perfection of cut and cloth was the envy of every girl in the settlement class. The girls would have laughed aloud in their glee could they have seen in Brookfield's thoughts the joy that he felt for their beloved leader.

There was the regular Saturday evening of the settlement club, and Irma took great delight in piloting the girls to the museums and galleries, where she hoped real works of art in time would give them a truer sense of artistic values.

Every week she planned something for the girls, winding up with a little lunch at her home. For the sake of the luncheon the girls endured the art lectures. So both they and Irma were happy.

They passed before a case containing an Aztec collection. The labels were on the opposite side of the case, where Brookfield, who did not require labels, was standing. Antiquities were not Irma Moutaire's forte, and when she innocently ascribed the collection to the Egyptian section Brookfield interrupted with a correction.

Miss Moutaire, seeing that enthusiasm and not a desire to open a flirtation with her charges was his motive, courteously acknowledged the correction, and Brookfield, mounding his hobby, rode it hard and fast.

He had the trick of interesting his hearers, and Miss Moutaire, finding that the girls really were absorbed in his little lecture, thankfully retreated into the background. She, too, found the chat interesting and was very sorry when the last case was reached and they found themselves at the foot of the stairway leading to the art galleries. "Here is where I shall prove useless," he said to Irma, with a smile. "I thank you very much for letting me run on as you have. I love the collection. I was one of the exploration party that dug it up."

had sent away the package, intending to walk home from the museum, so she permitted him to walk beside her. From taking an interest in Brookfield's fad she was beginning to take an interest in Tom Brookfield himself. She found him well worth her interest by comparison with the idle men of her own set. Irma admired action, and though Brookfield had only just passed thirty he had been a worker for half his lifetime.

He had not become a monomaniac on his hobby, but he was a good general talker, and though they met only at the Settlement house or in the museum, a real friendship soon sprang up between them. Irma had a feeling that to invite him to her home would spoil it all, and his dense ignorance of the fashionable and affluent Miss Moutaire was not lifted.

He believed her to be a teacher in a fashionable school who gave a part of her time to settlement work, and they met on a plane of equality which was refreshing to the woman after the fortune hunting she had so often to endure.

One afternoon late in the spring Brookfield came to meet the class and escort them to a private view of a college collection. They had acquired some of his enthusiasm, and he had obtained private views of many collections for them.

Today he came, with a beaming face, and all the afternoon his high spirits were apparent. He never shared the little luncheons which wound up the expeditions, but today he detained Miss Moutaire for a moment. "There is something I would like to say," he pleaded. "May I walk home with you, or do you have to go with the girls?"

"I cannot very well leave them," she explained. "Then I shall have to tell you here," he said resolutely. "I can't keep it any longer. I am to be curator of the Cheeswick collection in the fall and at a salary enough for two. Will you share it?"

Only for a minute did Miss Moutaire hesitate; then she placed her hand in his. "I will share it," she promised, with a radiant smile. "Come this evening, and we will talk it over." She handed him her card with its engraved address and hurried after the girls, while Brookfield beamed upon her from the top step.

But the beam had faded from Brookfield's face when Miss Moutaire came toward him in her reception room that evening. Instead of clasping her in his arms he held her hand an instant and then waited for her to be seated. "You must think me a presumptuous fool," he began, "to ask you to share the paltry salary which this afternoon seemed so great. I did not learn until later who you really were. It seems that I have been very dense."

"You are still dense," suggested Irma. "Do you come to ask me to withdraw my promise of this afternoon?" "You must know how impossible it would appear," he reminded. "I believed you to be a teacher." "You were the teacher," she corrected. "You taught me what love really is. What does it matter that I have more than you?" "I would not be considered a fortune hunter," he said slowly. "And I will not marry one," she retorted. "It is because you are not a fortune hunter, because you love me for myself, that I said 'Yes' this afternoon, and I shall hold you to your promise. Instead of your being curator of the Cheeswick collection we shall have a collection of our own."
