PORTLAND MARKET REPORT.

Portland, Oct. 29.—There was a drop of 2c a pound in the price of local creamery butter today. This put the price of the best product to 34c a pound. While the decline was expected in some quarters owing to the expectation that supplies would increase with the coming of the rains, however, it was not the local production that put the price on the downward move today, the decline being influenced entirely by the easier tone all through the east and the lower prices there and the coast points that consume the Eastern product. Today's price of the best product at 34c compares with 35c on this date a year ago, 32 1/2c two years ago, and 32 1/2c three years ago for this same date.

Various Prices on Eggs.

While those who handle eastern eggs mostly and want to put up values as high in that line, are still securing 40c in a limited way for select Oregon stock, those who do not handle eastern goods and are receiving liberal arrivals of local stock for this time of the year are not able to secure 40c for all their arrivals and are forced to take a lower figure in order to clean up. To those who secure perhaps one or two cases of local eggs at this time, the task of securing 40c is very easy, but it's far from a snarl to the many who secure more than this number. The excellent quality of the outside egg will not allow such a wide difference in price to be charged for local stock, except in limited way. To the man who handles eastern eggs as well as local stock it is quite easy to maintain high values on the latter simply because he prefers to sell eastern goods anyway because the profits are larger. Even though he did not receive 40c for his local eggs he could quite profitably return on that basis because by holding up his local prices he would be able to make a larger amount on eastern goods.

Poultry Market is Firmer.

There is a firmer tone ruling in the local poultry market and prices are being well maintained. Some efforts are being made by a few of the receivers to shove the market higher, but at this time such a move would result in the importation of more eastern stock and thus cause disaster to local values. However, at the moment the market is in good shape.

Several Cranberries Are Rolling.

Several cars of Jersey cranberries are rolling in this direction, according to reports of the local trade today. Local berries are showing better quality last arrivals being far superior to the previous ones. The market is firmer in consequence and some are asking higher prices.

White Beans Are Higher Again.

Owing to the heavy sales of new white beans in California, the market is firmer and prices here are showing an advance of 1/4c a pound. It is stated that fully two-thirds of this year's crop has already been moved. The great demand is due to the unusually small crop in Michigan last season and the throwing of a large part of that demand into the California market. Large and small whites, only, are affected by the shortage.

Potatoes Are Firmer.

The potato market has become firmer and unless some unexpected development occurs, the early winter slump that the growers have feared will be averted. There is not much demand yet from San Francisco, which is being supplied by the heavy crop of Rivers, but Los Angeles buyers are in the market and are picking up what choice lots they can find in the valley at 90c to $1.00 per 100.

There has also been considerable buying by local speculators, who have paid $1 for fancy lots, and are storing them in the confidence that the late market will be a high one. Farmers are also of this impression, and many of them are storing their potatoes against the future. Offerings at present, therefore, and this adds to the firmness.

There is some uncertainty as to just where the late market will go, but that prices should be good is conceded by all. In some quarters it is predicted that potatoes will sell in January, February and March at high prices than have ever been realized here before.

London Hop Market Firm.

No transactions were reported in the local hop market yesterday, but there were plenty of orders on hand. Dealers find increasing difficulty in securing choice goods, even at 8c. J. W. Seavey, who came up from Eugene yesterday, states that only 500 bales are left in growers' hands in Lane county.

The following cable was received by Klaber, Wolf & Netter from London yesterday:

"Choice: Market is clear of stock. Prime: Market is steady at unchanged prices. Lower grades: Market is weak."

The Waterville Times says of the New York state market:

Growers and dealers are still laboring under the disadvantage of continued dry weather. At night the hop house doors are left open so that the hops may gather what dampness there is and in this way a few bales at a time are gotten out, but still very few crops are yet on the market, considering the time of the year. It is reported that a sale direct to an agent of a prominent brewing house has been made in this vicinity at 12 1/2c. A steady business is doing, but the larger and better crops are not yet on the market, and until they are, little can be done. From 10c to 12c may be said to be the general range of prices in this and adjoining counties.

Portland Livestock Market.

There is a firmer tone in cattle and sheep, the former line being all strength except for steers, which remain quite dull, with $3.75 as the extreme top. Arrivals of cattle continue quite liberal, but most of the stuff coming consists of steers which are not wanted. Cows and heifers are still wanted and are finding a good inquiry, with prices well maintained for best quality.

Run of sheep is somewhat better and the market has an improved tone, although price values are showing no change at all from yesterday.

Following is the general range of values on stock ruling in the yards for late shipments:
