SOCIETY

Wednesday evening, at the residence of Hon. T. G. Hendricks, 600 Charnelton street, Miss Ruby Hendricks became the wife of Mr. Ray Goodrich. Promptly at 8 o'clock Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Miss Norma Hendricks, announced the approach of the bridal party. Miss Mary Chambers led the procession as maid of honor, and Mr. T. G. Hendricks gave his daughter away. Mr. L. L. Goodrich was best man, and the Rev. J. S. McCallum officiated. The ceremony was performed under a canopy of clematis and lilies, and the dining room, where the wedding supper was served immediately following the ceremony, was especially beautiful, being done in pink with pink rose buds hanging from the chandelier. Mr. and Mrs. Goodrich were the recipients of many elegant presents. The guests of Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Hendricks at the wedding were: Mr. and Mrs. L. Goodrich and Mr. and Mrs. R. B. ORVILLE CROW'S BAD EXPERIENCE WITH BROKEN LEG

Orville Crow, who lives about one mile east of Lorane, met with a serious accident Thursday morning, and he can thank a good pair of lungs for his rescue. He was going to his work on horseback about 5:30 and as is customary with him when horseback riding, it is said, galloped his horse down hill, which this time proved very unfortunate for him as the animal stumbled and fell, throwing Mr. Crow over his head to the ground, the fall breaking his left leg. He attempted to reach his horse, which stood browsing a short distance away, but could not move, and the pain became almost unbearable. It was scarcely light enough to see and there was no hope of anyone coming along the road for some hours, so Mr. Crow set up a yell that echoed and re-echoed for a long distance, but it was 10 o'clock before his cry of distress reached the ears of W. W. Jackson, postmaster and merchant of Lorane, over a mile distant, and he went to the aid of the unfortunate man, who was removed to the home of his father at Lorane, and Dr. Job sent for. The doctor reached the injured man about 12 o'clock and found him suffering great pain and the limb badly swollen, but he soon made him easy and set the leg.

Touched for $180

A man named Pyburn, who hails from the wilds of Idaho was relieved of $180 in cold cash at the Thompson hotel at Cottage Grove last Wednesday night, and if Pyburn's story can be relied on, Ike Ritchey, of this city, is the man who lifted the Idahoan's wad. According to the story told us Pyburn and Ritchey had been together much of all day Wednesday, and frequently "hit" a bottle the two carried in a convenient pocket, for be it known that Cottage Grove is "dry"—unless you want a drink. Along about 8:30 in the evening the two went to the hotel and to a room, where it is said Pyburn took a "night cap," and soon after his money took a walk, as also did Ritchey. He has been accused of the theft, but denies the soft impeachment, though he is said to have admitted taking Pyburn's knife and corncob pipe, which have been returned. Unless the accused man squeals upon himself today, Officer Snodgrass will make charges against him and have him held for examination. A man with $180 in his pockets ought to have sense enough to refrain from "blind pig" booze.

Will Set Out Orchard

Colonel Blair, of the Hotel Oregon, who recently acquired 60 acres of fine fruit land in the southern suburbs of Cottage Grove, on Fourth street, a part of the Spray place, has men at work plowing thirty acres, which will be set to orchard this fall, five acres to English walnuts and five acres to Comice pears, which will make a total of fifteen acres set out to fruit, five acres of winter apples having been planted by Mr. Spray before he sold his tract to Colonel Blair. Next fall another ten or twenty acres will be set out to walnuts, and other fruit trees, by Mr. Blair, and he will soon have one of the best young orchards in this vicinity, the tract comprising a slight west and south slope, being ideal for any kind of fruit.

Basketball Team

The members of the old Cottage Blues reorganized this week and will commence with regular practice in the armory soon. They have just received fine new regulation basketball suits and have their baskets up and ball now for the season. The line-up for the team this year is as follows: Right forward, Bob Sherwood; left forward, Allen Baker (captain); centre, Elmer Hastings; left guard, Fay Allison; right guard, Chester Baker; substitute, Charles Beals; manager, Mertin Earle. This team has played together with much success for the past two years.

Snow in Bohemia

G. G. Warner returned to this city from the Bohemia mining camp on Tuesday, where he has spent the summer developing his mining properties. He says the first snow of the season came drifting down last week and is now about two feet deep in the higher altitudes. A great deal of development work was accomplished in the camp this season, and one new reduction plant was put in. All indications point to an active season next year, when some of the mines will certainly become actual producers.—Western Oregon and Leader.

WHERE BULLETS FLEW.

David Parker, of Fayette, N. Y., a veteran of the Civil War, who lost a foot at Gettysburg, says: "The good Electric Bitters have done is worth more than five hundred dollars to me. I spent much money doctoring for a bad case of stomach trouble, to little purpose. Then I tried Electric Bitters and they cured me. I now take them as a tonic and they keep me strong and well." 50c at W. A. Kuykendall's drug store.

Fads and Fashions

(Guard Special Service.)

New York, October 24.—Women who love beautiful things—and what woman does not love them—find it more tantalizing to visit the large and fashionable shops this season than ever before. The reason is that never has there been such a bewildering wealth and variety of beautiful material, trimmings and accessories and of finished models exhibited as just now. Those who are in a position to know, say that owing to the stringency of the money market last year a comparatively little was spent for gowns and other things dear to woman. The manufacturers, dealers and dressmakers alike felt the effect of the panic and, to make business brisker this year they combined their ingenuity and efforts and planned effects, both of color and material, they felt sure would prove irresistible. A glance at the display in any fashionable establishment will suffice to show how well they have succeeded.

Not so very long ago simple colors were the style and only the most subtle and harmonious combinations of shades of the same color were permissible in the same costume. Today all is changed. The variety of colors and shades, of texture and finish of materials has become multiplied by a thousandfold compared with former years and there is scarcely any limit to the number of colors that may be combined in the same costume. The most daring combinations, producing an effect of barbaric splendor, are found by the side of the most chaste and subdued combinations. Particularly in colors the variety to be found in the shops is so great that there is no longer an excuse for any woman who does not find exactly the right color best suited to her complexion.

Notwithstanding the fact that colors, even those of the loud and glaring kind, are extremely fashionable this season, there is a grea tdemand for blacks and grays. It may be said that gray is one of the most dominant colors of the season. Apropos of gray a word of warning may not be amiss. Gray is undoubtedly a beautiful and pleasing color, but it is not for every woman. Only too often women of middle age, who are colorless, anaemic and have the "washed-out" complexion of invalids, make the mistake of wearing gray. They should never do so. It merely accentuates their lack of color and gives them the appearance of moving corpses, an effect decidedly undesirable. Gray, even the most lifeless and dead, is suitable for young girls who have a great deal of color in skin and hair, or even for middle aged women of the florid and healthy looking type, but never for the pale and faded women with dark lines under her eyes and wrinkles in her bloodless cheeks.

Blues, browns and greens are extremely popular this season and are to be found in the shops in an endless variety of shades. Of the blues it is characteristic that nearly all the new shades have some green in them. Various shades of a sort of peacock blue are particularly popular and are used extensively for dress material and trimming. But few blues have any tinge of gray. Green serge, which is to be worn a great deal for street costumes this winter, has olive tones curiously mixed with the dusky tones of a damson plum. The wistaria tone of purple is the favorite; but the plum shades from red to gray all go through every purple and make it look like different shades in different lights. The wistaria is the softest shade of purple because it has a gray-green in it and it tones in with hair and complexion better than any of the others.

Of browns there is also a great variety of tones to be found. Citron and bronze are probably the favorites. The latter, particularly, is brilliant and is exceptionally becoming to a woman with brown hair that has streaks of copper in it. Another shade resembles the color of old leather and is much more subdued than the saddle brown so popular last year. Another shade is mustard, which can be made becoming by combining it with some deeper and darker tone of brown and ecru lace.

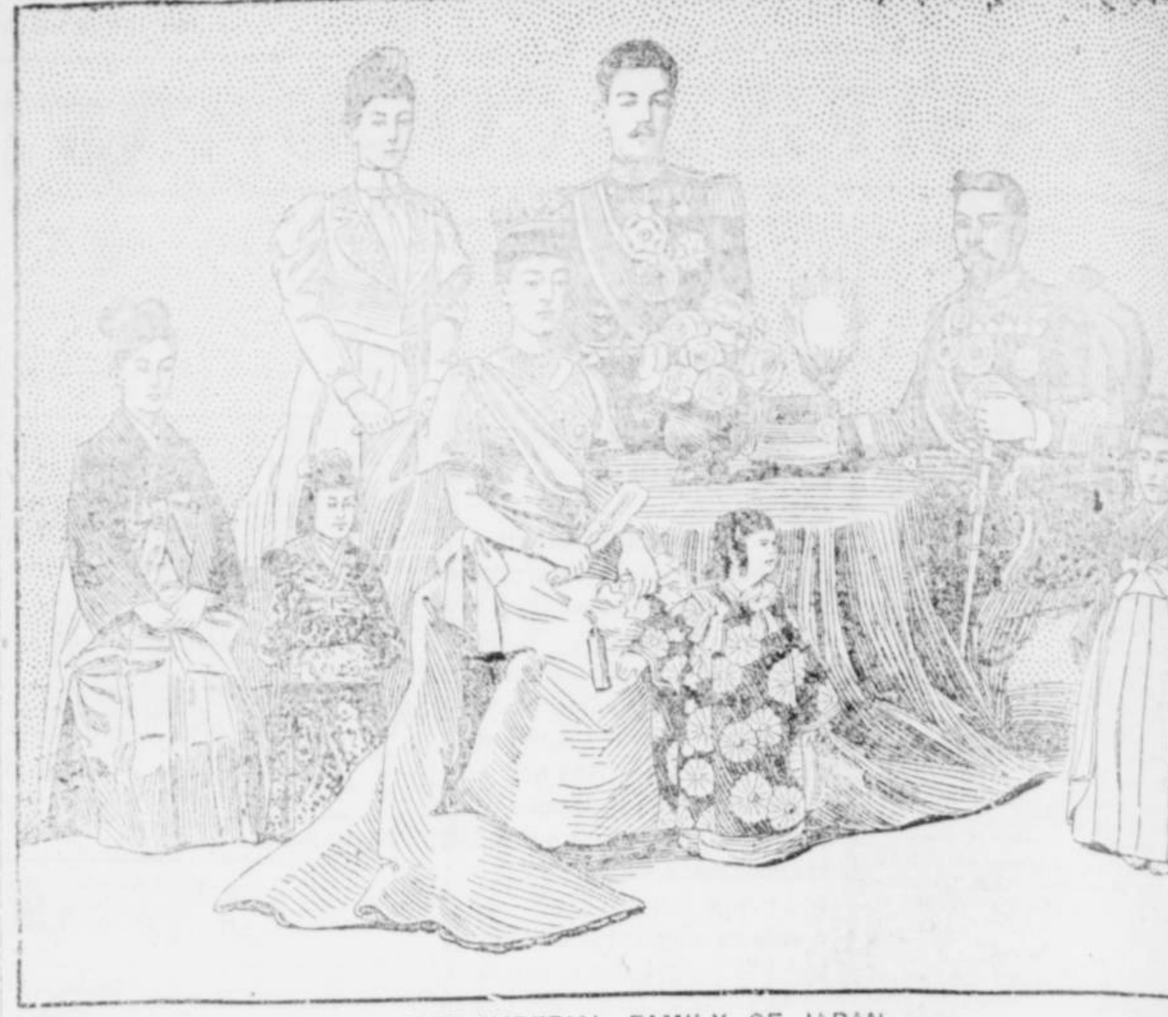
As to texture, it may be said, that ribbed fancy effects in every kind of material are more popular this season tahn ever before. The new ribbed serge brought out this fall is uncommonly handsome and promises to be fashionable. But there are also many other materials in ribbed effects, which have heretofore been shown only in smooth makes. Ottoman silk is probably the most conspicious of these materials. Its ribbing is exceedingly heavy and broad when it is intended for coat suits, for capes or for top coats. For hats it is either broad or narrow. It is used extensively for ornamental purposes on gowns, waists, vests, coats and hats and lends itself to a great variety of uses, as it fits well into almost any combination of materials and colors. It is principally used for facings on vests and coats and as the basis of decoration in large and small hats.

For practical street suits of the modified Directoire type, such as are developed in beautifully finished siciliennes, serges and worsteds, checks and stripes are far more popular than are the plain effects. Many of these fabrics are in two tones of one color, although in some having wide checks and distinctly separated hairlines are seen rather startling contrasts. These are especially notable in the combinations of black, brown and blue, with white.

One of the most attractive features of the present Directoire style is the waistcoat, which is usually made separately from the jacket and may be worn or not, as desired. For these vests are used the beautiful brocaded silks and satins which show figures and flowers in brilliant tints upon groundings precisely the shade of the cloth costume with which they are employed. Or again, they are of satin to match the Directoire scarf, which is often arranged to cover the lower edge of the waistcoat, when it is attached to the outer wrap, as is frequently the case, the girdle passing under the coat at the back, over the waistcoat in front, and then knotted at the left side, below the hips.

A collar that will almost take the place of a fur piece for the neck and one that will assuredly prove a comfort for the first cool days of autumn is the Directoire, a smart confection which almost anyone can fashion. It is simply a wide band of satin, trimmed with closely set narrow bands of any long-haired fur, preferably black marten, and on either edge is set a two-inch wide box-plaited satin ribbon ruche, which may be edged with fur or not, according to taste. The ends are finished with large rosettes of satin ribbon, from which hang long ends. If it is desired to make the Directoire collar a degree more elaborate, a white lace jabot may be substituted for the ribbon ends. This will serve to fill in any space left exposed by the jacket fronts. Some exceedingly pretty collars of this description may be seen among the latest importations from Pairs, now on exhibition in the fashionable shops.

FLORENCE FAIRBANKS.



THE IMPERIAL FAMILY OF JAPAN.

In the illustration the mikado and the empress of Japan are shown sitting at the table. The two persons standing back of them are the crown prince Yoshihito, son of one of the women of the imperial harem, and his wife. The Empress Haruko is childless, and the four little girls standing are daughters of another of the concubines of the mikado.

BLOUSE TO COMPLETE A THREE PIECE COSTUME.

A FEATURE of all the costumes displayed this fall, whether tailor made or dressy, is the directoire idea carried out in some way. By this is not meant the sensational sheath skirt of the summer, but the high waisted effects, the scant skirts, the long sleeves, the draped sash, the broad pointed revers and high collars, all characteristic of this style. One of the new ideas of the season is the directoire coat to complete the popular three piece costume.

Such a costume seen recently was of smoke gray broadcloth trimmed with folds of corded silk and embroidered bands. The bodice was in a jumper design similar to the one illustrated and trimmed with bias folds of corded silk of the same shade. The yoke and undersleeves were of plain gray net, and a band of the embroidery was arranged to outline the top of a second yoke of polka dotted filet net lace. To outline this double yoke and separate it from the bodice bias folds of the corded silk were used, and embroidered buttons and loops of silk to simulate buttonholes were arranged on either side of the bodice where the embroidered band came against it. A band of embroidery finished the mandarin sleeves, and the tight fitting undersleeve was finished with a couple of folds of the corded silk. The skirt was in one of the new close fitting effects trimmed with folds of corded silk and embroidered buttons. The coat was of gray corded silk with long, tight fitting sleeves finished with a directoire cuff and frill, high collar and deep pointed revers ornamented with embroidered buttons and sash girdle arranged on the outside of the coat with the ends of the sash ornamented with fringe and small pendent ornaments. With this costume was worn a beaver hat trimmed with ostrich feathers.

This tucked jumper closes at the back, with the side of the body and the sleeves in one. The pattern is cut in six sizes—from 32 to 42 inches bust measure. To copy it for the average person it requires 2½ yards of material 27 inches wide or 1¾ yards 36 inches wide.
