
SOCIETY

One of the enjoyable features of the week was a series of card parties given by Mrs. T. B. Luckey and Mrs. G. W. Smith at the home of the latter, 808 Oak street. The parlor was attractively decorated with yellow chrysanthemums and greens, while the living room was decorated in ferns and potted plants, the dining room being beautiful in red and green, 'mid a glimmer of cut glass. A delicious luncheon was served by the hostesses.

Monday afternoon Mrs. Smith and Mrs. Luckey were assisted by Mrs. R. S. Bryson and Mrs. S. S. Spencer. The prize was won by Mrs. Titus. The invited guests were: Mesdames Hobbs, Tromp, Frank Hampton, Burden, Hetich, Norton, Hughes, Fields, Frank Chambers, John Kelly, Shelley, George H. Smith, Mink, Leon Edmunson, Travis, J. K. Pratt, Frank Osburn, R. Pratt, Polders Fisher, Geiser, Tidball, Buoy, Abrams, Frank Page, Lilley, Griggs, Boynton, Schwering, Shumate, Bogart, Titus and Prentice.

Tuesday afternoon the hostesses were assisted by Mrs. Shumate and Mrs. Hoffman. Mrs. S. S. Spencer won the prize. The invited guests were: Mesdames York, S. R. Hall, Welch, Mahon, McMorran, E. D. Matlock, Alexander, Rodman, Hammond, Bingham, Vincent, Metcalf, Bristow, McMurphey, Wm. Yoran, Whiteside, Young, Glenn, Duryea, Dearborn, Loomis, Peter, Louis Bean, Darwin Yoran, W. F. Osburn, Laura Harris, S. S. Spencer and Miss Irene Applegate.

Wednesday evening Mrs. Bryson and Mrs. Hoffman assisted. Mrs. T. A. Gilbert won the first prize and Mrs. L. T. Harris the second. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Spencer, Dr. and Mrs. C. B. Willoughby, Mr. and Mrs. David Linn, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Griffin, Mr. and Mrs. Romeo Gilbert, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Gilbert, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Roberts, Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Harris, Dr. and Mrs. Whitson, Dr. and Mrs. Day, Mr. and Mrs. Goldsmith, Mr. and Mrs. Hoffman, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Kays, Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Bryson, Mr. and Mrs. Snodgrass and Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Hardy.

On Thursday afternoon thirty G. A. R. ladies met at the home of Mrs. Lewellyn Hall for the double purpose of giving her an illustrated definition of "surprise" and an expression of appreciation and gratitude for loyal and cheerful service as president of J. W. [illegible] Relief Corps, during the past year. They were given a cordial welcome and the afternoon was joyfully spent in social chat. Just before the parting Mrs. Mary Levermore in a few well-chosen words, presented in behalf of the corps a token which proved to be "just what she most desired" as a lasting remembrance of the object and purposes of the happy occasion. All report a pleasant time.

The ladies of the Presbyterian church held a very successful bazaar and chrysanthemum show in the basement of their church this week. A neat sum was realized from the sale of many beautiful and useful pieces of needlework, while the different varieties of chrysanthemums were greatly admired for their gorgeous coloring and size. It is intended to make the show an annual affair.

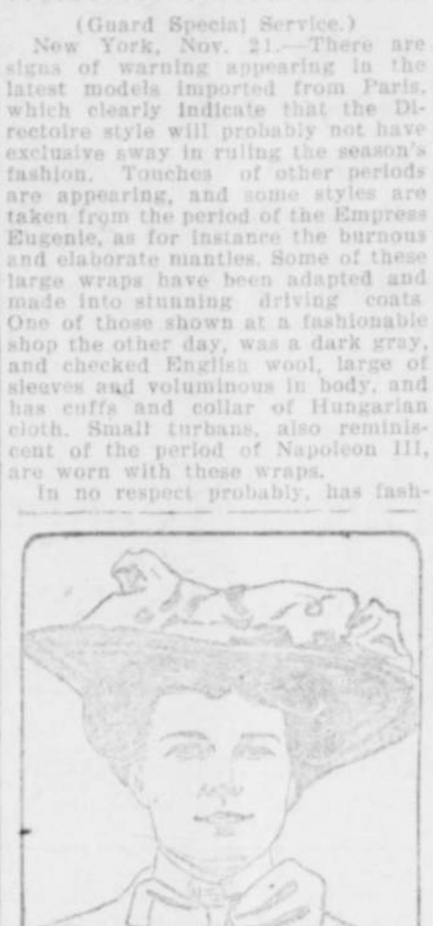
The Beta Epsilon chapter house was a merry scene on Thursday evening, when the Beta girls gathered together for a jolly good time in honor of one of their members, Miss Leone Kays, who left this morning for the East, where she is to be married next Wednesday, November 25. The evening was spent informally with music and dancing, after which light refreshments were passed. Miss Kays was presented with a beautiful gift as a token of love from the girls.

FADS AND FASHIONS

(Guard Special Service.)

New York, Nov. 21.—There are signs of warning appearing in the latest models imported from Paris, which clearly indicate that the Directoire style will probably not have exclusive sway in ruling the season's fashion. Touches of other periods are appearing, and some styles are taken from the period of the Empress Eugenie, as for instance the burnous and elaborate mantles. Some of these large wraps have been adapted and made into stunning driving coats. One of those shown at a fashionable shop the other day, was a dark gray, and checked English wool, large of sleeves and voluminous in body, and has cuffs and collar of Hungarian cloth. Small turbans, also reminiscent of the period of Napoleon III, are worn with these wraps.



ETHEL ROOSEVELT.

On Dec. 28 the second daughter of the president will make her debut in society at a grand function at the White House.

In no respect probably, has fashion changed more radically than in the shape and cut of collars. The law, round collars of the past summer are gone and now all gowns and waists are made with stocks reaching high at the back and sloped to the front, to give as much comfort as possible. The straight collar is not nearly so fashionable as one made in points, the tips of which quite touch the ears. Allover lace, net or strips of insertion sewed together are much used for these high collars and the small guimpe which is a feature of the newest gown. In order to give the correct line to the front of the collar, it is hollowed out as much as needed for the curve of the throat. This can be done by shaping the collar or by having a series of tiny lengthwise tucks crossing the front for a space of two or three inches. If the tucks are small enough, they leave no fullness where they terminate. The material gathered up in the fold can be dwindled to nothing at the sides of the collar. Sometimes a narrow band of velvet or silk is used for the top finish of the collar. It is the fashion to have trimming on the collar, and frequently a color is introduced with pleasing effect.

One of the most striking features in decorations at the present time are ribbon roses, which are so popular as a trimming for hats and are also used in other places. One of the ways in which these roses are employed is to decorate the Empire scarfs which are now so fashionable. Strictly speaking an Empire scarf is a perfectly straight affair, unshaped and untrimmed save by a fringe or embroidery. There are new scarfs, however, which are quite broad and are taken in between the shoulders right to the middle of the back, being pleated together under an enormous rose. The scarf is then drawn around the figure below the shoulders and tied over the bust, where there is another large rose of silk, satin or velvet. The roses are of exactly the same material as the scarf and the latter needs no other garniture.

The large ribbon rose is also quite attractive as a skirt decoration. One each was shown the other day at a fashionable function. It was on a chiffon frock in pale gray. The frock was trimmed with braiding in black soutache. The gown was tucked vertically from the bust line to some distance below the hips. Then there was a plain interval, and beneath this a band of braided chiffon, on which was set a crushed sash of silk, going around the skirt just below the knees and threading under a long black panel of the braided chiffon. The ends of this sash were then brought through the centre of this back panel and formed into a large silk rose.

Now is the time for every mother who has a daughter old enough to "come out," think of the wardrobe of the young debutante. In addition to luncheon gowns, calling gowns, street suits and house dresses, she will need ball gowns. Of course, tradition dictates that the debutante wear nothing too elaborate for her years, that velvets and satins be tabooed and that lace must be scarce and not too handsome; but this year fashion has relented to a certain extent by permitting debutantes to wear satin. However, it must be of the liberty variety and not of the handsomer and heavier kind.

The reason for this modification is, that this year, fashion demands that all dresses, particularly ball dresses, must cling to the figure and drape gracefully, in reviewing the materials one may only find crepe de chine, liberty satin and chiffon that will be suitable for ball gowns. The lines of such a dress for a young girl must be comparatively simple and the gowns should not be quite as sumptuous as they would be, were they intended for an older woman.

For the cool days of autumn and the colder days of winter there is no more useful garment, for young and old, than the sweater. Nothing could be more useful for a little girl than a sweater coat of gray yarn, buttoned down the front and finished with a big pocket on each side. It may be worn under the overcoat. It keeps one warm, is not unwieldy and is invaluable when outdoor games are at their height. For skating days a real sweater is best; only instead of having a high collar, it should have a V-shaped neck. Particularl becoming are skating sweaters of white wool, when they are worn with a white skating cap.

More siutable for grown up women are the kimono jackets, built somewhat on the sweater order. They are made of a sofe two-ply yarn and crocheted in a fancy stitch. Nothing could be warmer or more becoming. Ribbons are run through the stitches here and there to serve as decoration or to hold the jacket together. Some of these jackets are crocheted in a shell stitch and formed of a double thickness of the fabric, thus adding a certain fluffiness. The sleeves are elbow length and therefore less likely to interfere with any work the wearer may have to do.

Black satin girdles give a chic note to any costume. A jet is to be one of the favorites this season, many black girdles will be ornamented with jet fringes. Jet buckles may slide at the joining place of the two ends of the girdle. A yard of satin on the bias will make a girdle which will go with almost any color. Crepe is sometimes used and so is silk.

Corsets that hook on the side are the latest from Persia. French modistes insist that to achieve the desirable "silhouette" effect of new clinging draperies there must be no hint of lumps either at the back or front. So, to present a faultless foundation for closely drawn folds of thin material, the corset hooks are swung around under one arm.

Fans will be extremely fashionable this winter and some of the most beautiful creations in artistic fans have been imported from Vienna and Paris. They are ivory, tortiose shell, pearl and handsome woods, with lace, silk gauze and hand-painted so as to make them veritable works of art. Particularly ivory fans will be popular during the coming season, as will ivory buttons and carved ivory ornaments.

FLORENCE FAIRBANKS.

MUCH MORE PAVING ORDERED BY COUNCIL

At a meeting of the city council last night eleven more blocks of street paving were ordered and ordinances covering the work will be prepared for passage. The streets to be paved under this new order are as follows: Pearl street from East Sixth to East Eleventh, five blocks; Olive street from West Tenth to West Eleventh, one block; West Eleventh street from Olive to Lincoln, two blocks; Oak street from East Ninth to East Eleventh, two blocks; East Tenth street from Willamette to Oak, one block. After these contracts are completed the city will have over 70 blocks of bitulithic pavement.

Other Matters.

Some supplies for the water pumping plant were ordered from the Berger-Bean Hardware Co.

The contract with Frank C. Kelsey of Portland for constructing engineer of the power plant and the transmission line at 2 per cent of the cost of construction, payable at the rate of $250 for each month, before the 10th as the work progresses, was read, and it was referred to the mayor and city attorney to adjust it as they might think right for the city.

The matter of diseased meat and milk being peddled in the city was discussed but no action taken.

The matter of a waiting station on the street railway line at the corner of East Thirteenth and Alder streets was referred to the street committee with power to act.

The contract for establishing a rock crushing plant by Sam Manerud was favorably reported on, and the street committee was instructed to enter into contract after investigating the mater.

The matter to extend the city water mains to Hill Crest addition which was rejected at the last meeting of the council was reconsidered. The motion was declared out of order and the mayor stated that the matter was within the jurisdiction of the water commission. The promise of the Willamette Valley Co. to extend the mains was ordered carried out.

WELCH SYSTEM MAY BE COAST LINE

Chehalis, Wash., Nov. 18.—W. J. Pattison and A. Welch have applied for a franchise to operate a street railroad through certain streets of this city. They ask for a fifty-year franchise and agree to begin work on the line within six months after it has been granted. After the sixth year they are to pay the city $250 per year for twenty years; for the remainder of the life of the franchise, $500 a year.

It is stated that the securing of the franchise here is but a part of a plan to link up the Pacific Northwest with an electric system. It is said to be the intention of the company to continue south toward Portland as fast as the right of way can be secured. The same men who are applying for a franchise have made application to the city of Centralia the purpose being to connect the two cities, which are only four miles apart.

CORTELYOU EXPLAINS NEW ISSUE OF BONDS

Washington, Nov. 19.—Discussing the new issue of $30,000,000 of two per cent Panama canal bonds, bids for which have been asked by the treasury department, Secretary Cortelyou stated the expense of building the canal warranted the issue and the money was needed for the work there. This will be the third issue under the Spooner law, which provided for a total issue of $136,000,000. With the new issue $84,000,000 of the authorized bonds will have been issued.

PRETTY AFTERNOON WAIST.

THERE is no prettier or more stylish model for afternoon wear than the jumper waist. It is a style that is extremely becoming to the majority of figures and a most economical selection, as the guimpe can be changed whenever it becomes soiled without altering the rest of the costume. The princess jumper effects are most favored for dressy wear, as they have the appearance of a one piece costume. The one illustrated is a pleasing design of this kind with the front of the waist at the belt line arranged in a broad box plait that is stitched to the skirt. A soft girdle extends from under this front plait around the waist and fastens in the back.

The cluster of broad tucks at the shoulder, both front and back, gives the waist a pretty fullness, and the plain center, front and back, gives excellent opportunity for needlework. An especially dainty jumper dress seen recently was of dark eggplant satin finished pongee, with the folds to finish the neck and sleeve bands of mirror velvet in a matching shade. On the front and back of the waist was embroidered an effective floral design in light and dark shades of eggplant. Velvet covered buttons were used to decorate the front waist panel at the belt line and at the shoulder on either side of the yoke.

These jumper models are effective when used to complete the three piece costumes which are so popular at present. They furnish a more dressy costume than just a plain shirt waist and yet are appropriate for any occasion where a plain blouse is needed. Such a costume can be pleasingly carried out in a mole gray ottoman silk with fold trimming of the same shade of satin and satin covered molds and simulated buttonholes.

This jumper waist closes in the back. The pattern is cut in six sizes—from 32 to 42 inches bust measure. To copy it for the average person requires 1¾ yards of material 27 inches wide or 1¼ yards 36 inches wide.

BOSTON TO OPEN IDEAL RAILWAY TUNNEL

Boston, Mass., Nov. 21.—What is claimed to be the most complete and perfect tunnel for passenger traffic to be found anywhere in the world has just been completed in this city and will be opened for use during the coming week. It is known as the Washington street tunnel and is designed to relieve the congestion of the narrow and crooked streets of Boston's business section. The tunnel will be used to carry the trains of the Boston Elevated Railway Co. through the downtown section of the city. The old tunnel, known as the Tremont street sub-way, which was the first to be built in America, will be employed exclusively for the so-called surface car traffic. With both tunnels in use the downtown streets will be practically relieved of all street cars.

The new tunnel is 5676 feet long. It is fireproof throughout. All the steel construction is protected by concrete from rust and fire. All the doors and ticket booths and escalator balustrades are encased in sheet bronze. The telephone offices and package rooms and electrician's closets have tiled walls of masonry. The signs are of metal and the seats and benches of cement. There is not a bit of wood throughout the completely fire-proof structure.

The construction of the tunnel varies in different places, being adapted to the constantly changing conditions of the streets and buildings above it. Sometimes a vault is used, held together by ties in some cases, and sometimes the roof is spanned by girders, and in the choice of these methods one factor was the necessity of continuing traffic in the streets while construction was in progress. In accomplishing this the engineers achieved a great success. The tunnel was begun and finished with no disturbances to the traffic overhead.

To insure against the cutting off of the current at any time and thereby plunging the stations into darkness, three different sources of supply are arranged for, each independent of the other, and all so arranged that should the current be shut off from one source it is instanly supplied from another source automatically by an arrangement of the main switches. To keep the tunnel at all times free from water, pumping stations are installed at three different localities. There are four fan chambers to exhaust the foul air from the tunnel.

The walls of the stations are of glazed tile. Where color is used in the tile work, as in the borders and signs, it is of a distinctive color for each station, and the columns are painted of the same color, so that the traveller on looking out of the window recognizes his position by the familiar color of the station. The platforms of the stations are each three hundred and fifty feet long, and are designed to accomodate trains of eight cars. At the principal stations excalators are provided, besides the necessary stairs to the exits and entrances. Each station is provided with packagerooms, news stands and public telephone booths.

The tunnel was built by the Boston Transit Commission, and leased to the Boston Elevated Railway Company for twenty-five years from the beginning of its use. It is built through that section of Boston which contains the highest priced land, with due regard for the best feasible grade and aligment with respect to the narrowness and crookedness of the streets. Its cost, together with the cost of its approaches and equipment, is estimated at over ten million dollars. The tunnel will increase the carrying capacity of the Boston Elevated Railroad Company system through the heart of Boston, it is estimated, about one hundred and seventy-five percent. Its stations are frequent and are in the midst of the shopping and theatre districts.

SAMPSON GETS ONE YEAR IN STATE PEN

Wilbur Sampson, the man who stole a revolver from a room in the Matlock lodging house a week ago, was arraigned in the circuit court this morning on the charge of larceny from a dwelling. He pleaded guilty and was sentenced by Judge Harris to one year in the penitentiary.

Jacobs on Trial

Joseph Jacobs, who has been in the police and justice court several times for violating the liquor law, was up for trial today for violating the local option law. The following jury was selected to try the case: E. S. Prindel, W. J. Canady, E. F. Miller, G. T. Ray, T. A. Gilbert, Geo. H. Bogue, Andrew Bunch, J. W. Seavey, Otho Roberts, J. Atkinson, M. F. Griggs and S. B. Jackson, Jr.

A verdict of guilty was returned.

Other Indictments.

Yesterday afternoon the grand jury returned eight secret indictments and this forenoon five more were returned. As the persons indicted were not in custody, the names were not read in court, at the time, but later it was learned that the indictments were against Ray Littlefield, John Williams and Charles Wilman, charged with selling liquor.

Hyson Smith, Jr., was arraigned in court this morning on the charge of violating the local option law and he entered a plea of not guilty.

John Williams this afternoon entered a plea of guilty. Charles Wilman entered a plea of not guilty. Ray Littlefield will plead at the opening of court in December.

The court adjourned late this afternoon to meet again on Monday, December 1, at 9 o'clock a. m. The grand jury was excused until that time. It has not yet completed its work on the liquor cases under investigation.
