

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Is the best of all medicines for the cure of diseases, disorders and weaknesses peculiar to women. It is the only preparation of its kind devised by a regularly graduated physician—an experienced and skilled specialist in the diseases of women.

It is a safe medicine in any condition of the system. THE ONE REMEDY which contains no alcohol and no injurious habit-forming drugs and which creates no craving for such stimulants.

THE ONE REMEDY so good that its makers are not afraid to print its every ingredient on each outside bottle wrapper and attest to the truthfulness of the same under oath.

It is sold by medicine dealers everywhere, and any dealer who hasn't it can get it. Don't take a substitute of unknown composition for this medicine of known composition. No counterfeit is as good as the genuine and the druggist who says something else is "just as good as Dr. Pierce's" is either mistaken or is trying to deceive you for his own selfish benefit. Such a man is not to be trusted. He is trifling with your most priceless possession—your health—may be your life itself. See that you get what you ask for.

Polly of the Circus

BY MARGARET MAYO

It was nearly dark when she saw him coming slowly down the path from the hill. She lighted the study lamp, rearranged the cushions and tried to make the room look cheery for his entrance.

"She's sick, that's what I say," she said. "Oh, no," answered Douglas absently. "Maybe you'd like Mandy to be serving your supper in here tonight. It's more cheerful."

He crossed to the window and looked out upon the circus lot. The flare of the torches and the red fire came up to meet his pale, tense face. "How like the picture of thirteen months ago?" he thought, and old Polly's words came back to him—"The show has got to go on."

He longed to have done with dreams and speculation, to feel something tangible, warm and real within his grasp. "I can't go on like this!" he cried. "I can't!" He turned from the window and walked hurriedly up and down the room. Indoors or out, he found no rest. He threw himself in the armchair near the table and sat buried in thought.

Mandy came softly into the room. She was followed by Hasty, who carried a tray laden with things that ought to have tempted any man. She motioned for Hasty to put the tray on the table and then began arranging the dishes. Hasty stole to the window and peeped out at the tempting glare of red fire.

When Douglas discovered the presence of his two "faithfuls" he was touched with momentary contrition. "Have you had a hard day with the new gravel walk?" he asked Hasty, remembering that he had been laying a fresh path to the Sunday school room.

"Jes' yo' come eat yo' supper," Mandy called to Douglas. "Don't yo' worry your head 'bout dat lazy husband' ob mine. He ain't goin' to work 'nuff to hurt hisself." For an instant she had been tempted to let the pastor know how Hasty had gone to the circus and seen nothing of Polly, but her motherly instinct won the day, and she urged him to eat before disturbing him with her own anxieties. It was no use. He only toyed with his food; he was clearly ill at ease and eager to be alone. She gave up trying to tempt his appetite and began to lead up in a roundabout way to the things which she wished to ask.

"Dar's quite some racket out dar in de lot tonight," she said. Douglas did not answer. After a moment she went on: "Hasty didn't work on no walk today." Douglas looked at her quizzically, while Hasty, convinced that for reasons of her own she was going to get him into trouble, was making frantic motions. "He done gone ter de circus," she blurted out. Douglas's face became suddenly grave. Mandy saw that she had touched an open wound.

"I jes' couldn't stan' it, Massa John. I had ter find out 'bout dat angel child." There was a pause. She felt that he was waiting for her to go on.

"She didn't done ride today." He looked up with the eyes of a dumb, persecuted animal. "And de gemmen in de show didn't tell nobody why—jes' speakin' 'bout de udder gal takin' her place."

"Why didn't she ride?" cried Douglas, in an agony of suspense.

"Dat's what I don' know, sah." Mandy began to cry. It was the first time in his experience that Douglas had ever known her to give way to any such weakness.

Hasty came down from the window and tried to put one arm about Mandy's shoulders. "Leah me alone, yo' nigger!" she exclaimed, trying to cover her tears with a show of anger that she did not feel; then she rushed from the room, followed by Hasty.

The band was playing loudly. The din of the night performance was increasing. Douglas's nerves were strained to the point of breaking. He would not let himself go near the window. He stood by the side of the table, his fists clenched, and tried to beat back the impulse that was pulling him toward the door. Again and again he set his teeth.

It was uncertainty that gnawed at him so. Was she ill? Could she need him? Was she sorry for having left him? Would she be glad if he went for her and brought her back with him? He recalled the hysterical note in her behavior the day that she went away—how she had pleaded, only a few moments before Jim came, never to be separated from him. Had she really cared for Jim and for the old life? Why had she never written? Was she ashamed? Was she sorry for what she had done? What could it mean? He threw his hands above his head with a gesture of despair. A moment later he passed out into the night.

CHAPTER XIII

JIM was slow tonight. The big show was nearly over, yet many of the props used in the early part of the bill were still unloaded.

He was tinkering absentmindedly with one of the wagons in the back lot, and the men were standing about idly waiting for orders when Barker came out of the main tent and called to him sharply.

"Hey, there, Jim! What's your excuse tonight?"

"Excuse for what?" Jim crossed slowly to Barker.

"The cook tent was started half an hour late, and the sideshow top ain't loaded yet."

"Your wagons is on the bum; that's what! No. 38 carries the cook tent, an' de blacksmith has been tinkering with it all day. Ask him what shape it's in."

"You're always stallin'," was Barker's sullen complaint. "It's the wagons or the blacksmiths or anything but the truth. I know what's the matter, all right."

"What do you mean by that?" asked Jim sharply.

"I mean that all your time's took up a-carryin' and a-fetchin' for that girl what calls you 'Mauver Jim.'"

"What have you got to say about her?" Jim eyed him with a threatening look.

"I got a plenty," said Barker as he turned to snap his whip at the small boys who had stolen into the back lot to peek under the rear edge of the big top. "She's been about as much good as a sick cat since she come back. You saw her act last night."

"Yes," answered Jim doggedly. "Wasn't it punk? She didn't show at all this afternoon; said she was sick. And me with all them people inside what knowed her waitin' to see her!"

"Give her a little time," Jim pleaded. "She ain't rode for a year."

"Time!" shouted Barker. "How much does she want? She's been back a month, and instead of bracin' up she's gettin' worse. There's only one thing for me to do."

"What's that?" asked Jim uneasily. "I'm goin' to call her, and call her hard."

"Look here, Barker," and Jim squared his shoulders as he looked steadily at the other man, "you're boss here, and I takes orders from you, but if I catches you abusin' Polly your bein' boss won't make no difference."

"You can't bluff me," shouted Barker. "I ain't bluffin'. I'm only tellin' you," said Jim very quietly.

"Well, you tell her to get on to her job. If she don't, she quits; that's all." He hurried into the ring.

Jim took one step to follow him, then stopped and gazed at the ground with thoughtful eyes. He, too, had seen the change in Polly. He had tried to rouse her. It was no use. She had

"Star gazin', Polly?" he asked, looked at him blankly. "If she would only complain," he said to himself; "if she would only get mad, anything, anything to wake her." But she did not complain. She went through her daily routine very humbly and quietly. She sometimes wondered how Jim could talk so much about her work, but before she could answer the question her mind drifted back to other days, to a garden and flowers, and Jim

ALFALFA YIELDS FOUR CROPS IN VALLEY UNDER IRRIGATION

A. R. Black, Irrigation Promoter, Has Convincing Evidence from Albany

A. R. Black, the irrigation promoter, is exhibiting a convincing argument in favor of irrigation today. It consists of a shear of alfalfa, cut June 21, on land near Albany, where the government is conducting irrigation experiments, and this alfalfa, which is about three feet in length, was from the second crop this year.

The conclusion is that Willamette valley land under irrigation will produce four crops of alfalfa a year besides probably a splendid fall pasture.

The results obtained already by the government should convince every land owner that the value of every acre he owns has been enhanced many times by irrigation.

PROMISED EUGENE AND BETTER TRAIN SERVICE OTHER VALLEY POINTS

The Southern Pacific Co., realizing that under the new schedule Eugene and upper valley points have very poor train service to Portland, an announcement of another change has just been made at the Portland headquarters.

This change is about as radical as the first one, but this time it is for the better and after the new schedule goes into effect, which will be about next Sunday, July 4, Eugene people will have a better service than ever before.

The Cottage Grove local will be changed to an evening train and will pass through Eugene about 5:49 o'clock, reaching Portland at about 10:30 at night. No. 14, which now passes through at 5:30 in the morning, will leave at 6:30, reaching Portland about 11 a. m. This will give Eugene people a passenger service leaving here at 2:43 in the morning, 6:30 in the evening, 12:22 in the afternoon and 5:40 in the evening.

DATA ON BOHEMIA MINING DISTRICT

The Bohemia mining district, in Lane and Douglas counties, Oregon, is described in a brief report by D. F. MacDonald that form part of the United States Geological Survey's Bulletin 330, "Contributions to economic geology, 1905, Part 1." This district lies on Calapooza Mountain, in a region of bold relief and luxuriant vegetation—a region noted for its timber resources.

The ore deposits are fissure veins that contain free gold, which have been developed by several mines. Mr. MacDonald sketches the general geology, the ore deposits and the mining development of the district, and includes notes on the mode of ore deposition. The report is included in an advance chapter of Bulletin 330 known as Bulletin 330-A, which may be had on application to the Director of the Survey at Washington.

Tell Some Sick One It Is Free If It Fails

Will you do an act of kindness? Will you tell some sick friend of this, my remarkable offer?

Do you know that you have learned of a medicine so certain that its maker dares say to the sick, "It is absolutely and unconditionally free if it fails?"

And you, no doubt, already know of Dr. Shoop's Restorative and its popularity. For 20 years it has been the standard remedy for Stomach, Kidney and Heart ailments everywhere in America.

When the "inside" or controlling nerves of the vital organs begin to fail, it is Dr. Shoop's Restorative that has quickly vitalized and strengthened, and brought these nerves and organs back to health again.

I do not dose the stomach, nor stimulate the heart or kidneys—for that is all wrong. Dr. Shoop's Restorative goes direct to the cause of these ailments—the falling, faltering, inside or controlling nerves. And herein lies the keynote to my success.

When these nerves are again made well and strong, then that is the certain end of all such sickness.

To me it is a great satisfaction that I am the only physician able to say to the suffering sick, "Take my prescription for full 30 days, and if it fails to help you, the entire expense is mine—not yours."

Then why should the sick take any chance on any other medicine, whose maker dares not back it just as I do by this remarkable offer?

I also have a Rheumatic Remedy—and that remedy is covered by the same identical "No help, no pay" protective plan.

Perhaps you are free to consult me just as you would your home physician. My advice and the book below are yours—and without cost. Perhaps a word or two from me will clear up some serious ailment. I have helped thousands upon thousands by my private prescription or personal attention. Please try my offer as your simplest request.

So let me send you an order at once. Take the message to some sick friend. I will post a letter to the opportunity. I will have an honest and trustworthy druggist to whom you can conveniently go for the 30 day test.

But first, ask me for the order, for all druggists remove orders to give the 30 day test. So write me now and save all delays. Remember that tomorrow never comes. Address Dr. Shoop, Box 12, Racine, Wis. Which Book Shall I Send You?

BONNETT BROTHERS WILL ERECT FINE TWO-STORY BLOCK

The Guard has from time to time mentioned the fact that the Bonnett brothers, who owned the old frame livery stable occupied by the Bangs Livery Co., on East Ninth street, and which burned several weeks ago, causing the biggest blaze Eugene has had in years, will replace the building with a brick block. They have finally decided to erect the building this summer and it is understood that a prominent grocer of this city will occupy one of the three store rooms on the ground floor with his store, which is now located on Willamette street. It will be the room next to the alley. Plans for the building are already being drawn and announcements as to its dimensions and probable cost will soon be made. It will be two stories high.

WORKING ON P. E. & E. POWER SITE UP RIVER

"We are now spending $1000 a month at the site of our proposed electric power plant at Martin's rapids, on the M-Kenzie," said A. Welch, vice-president and general manager of the Portland, Eugene & Eastern Railway Co., to a reporter this morning. "We are clearing the site in preparation to build. The plant will call for an expenditure of $500,000, and it will furnish electricity for our proposed electric railroad as far north as Albany."

Mr. Welch is not certain whether or not immediate work will begin on the plant, but if it is decided to go right ahead with the project it will be completed some time this fall. Martin's rapids are 32 miles from Eugene and the site owned by the company is said to be the best on the river for power purposes.

Bridge This Summer. In regard to completing the big bridge across the Willamette at Springfield, Mr. Welch said he thought the work would be done this summer, although there is no certainty of the matter. He and President Storey are conferring in regard to the matter, also in regard to the extension of the local street railway line to the fair grounds.

More Cars. "Another electric car and two trailers ordered some time ago for the local system are long overdue," said Mr. Welch. "When they arrive the service will be much better and we will be able to handle much larger crowds on big occasions than at present. The cars were expected from the factory at Danville, Ill., about the middle of May, but they have not yet shown up and we can get no news of them. We hope that they will be along soon."
