Few people in Eugene are aware of the fact that on the site of the new Osburn hotel, now being completed, stood the first hotel ever built in Eugene. It was built by James Heatherly in 1854, the same year the town of Eugene was laid out, and was for several years one of the most popular stopping places in the Willamette Valley, being the stories high with a full basement and an attic. The Heatherly hotel was built of hewn timber and lumber sawed by hand. The Osburn is built of brick and cement with the most
