GLAVIS' EVIDENCE BACKED UP BY TESTIMONY GIVEN BY SPECIAL AGENT JONES

Washington, Feb. 25.—The Ballinger-Pinchot hearing took an unexpected turn today when Special Agent Horace T. Jones, of the land office, took the stand for the "prosecution" and made a sensational attack upon James M. Sheridan, who was sent by the general land office to Seattle last year to take charge of the government's case in the hearing of the Cunningham case.

Under cross-examination Jones appeared defiant and aggressive, and said he did not care what inferences were drawn from his testimony. Jones was still on the stand when luncheon recess was taken.

It appeared that Gifford Pinchot will not be called as a witness until late today.

Washington, Feb. 25.—When the Ballinger-Pinchot investigating committee resumed its hearing today Attorney Brandeis, for the "prosecution," requested permission to introduce in evidence statements recently made before the senate committee on territories by Stephen Birch and J. N. Steele, officials of the Morgan-Guggenheim syndicate for the exploitation of Alaska.

Chairman Nelson said the statements were not made under oath, but the committee agreed that the men should be summoned as witnesses.

Special Agent Horace T. Jones, who worked with Glavis on the Alaska cases, was called to the stand as the first witness today. Jones, under questioning of Attorney Brandeis, said he consulted freely with Ballinger when the latter was in Seattle in July, 1907.

Special Agent Love was a candidate for United States marshal; that love did not have the proper spirit for an investigator, and Ballinger agreed with him. He said Ballinger asked Jones to make an investigation of all criticism as soon as possible, as he wanted to be in a position to appear before congress to advocate remedial legislation. He wanted to know just what the various conditions were in the various Alaskan groups, so he could speak intelligently about them.

Love said he was very glad Jones had been assigned to the work, for he had been greatly embarrassed by having to investigate people who were his friends. Witness said he had never seen Love's report on the Cunningham case until Glavis showed it to him. Jones corroborated Glavis' testimony as to his efforts to get the Alaska cases taken up by the grand jury at Seattle. Glavis was criticized in Attorney-General Wickersham's report to the president for having done anything toward criminal prosecution. Jones said that at Glavis' direction he went to United States Attorney Todd at Seattle, but that Todd said it was useless to take the cases up at Seattle because Judge Hanford was constitutionally opposed to land fraud cases, and Todd did not want to be humiliated by being turned down. Todd suggested that the matter be taken up with the attorney-general, so that the latter would order Todd to take the matter up.

Jones corroborated Glavis' testimony as to the statement made by Donald A. McKenzie that the reason Garfield was not retained in Taft's cabinet was because of his hostility to the Alaska coal claims.

Jones said McKenzie said this opposition caused powerful pressure to be brought upon senators and others

GORE'S FATHER SAYS DEATH NOT DUE TO HAZING

Clarence W. Gore, of Medford, the University of Oregon student whose death a short time ago was attributed in sensational newspaper stories to injuries received when he was hazed by members of his class here last September, died from natural causes. This is the substance of a letter from Walter S. Gore, father of the young man, to President Campbell, and just made public. In the letter Mr. Gore completely exonerates the University from any responsibility for his son's death. The letter follows: "I have kept silent thus far in regard to matters pertaining to the hazing incident late in September, and which has been given unnecessary publicity through the Medford paper, the Eugene Guard and Portland papers. The letter published in the Medford Mail and copied by others purporting to have been received by my son, Clarence Gore, and turned over by me for publication, was in print before I had received from Clarence a statement of the affair.

"In regard to the later statement that his illness was the result of ill-treatment by the hazers and compulsory work on bonfires, Clarence said he was not harshly treated in hazing; that he felt no serious ill-effects from it, and that on the whole he rather enjoyed it.

"In regard to the bonfire, which I think was built some weeks later, he said it was the custom for the freshmen to build them, but on account of

One shows Paris as seen from the Seine before the flood, with Notre Dame cathedral, the most historic and famous church of France, on the left. The other picture is that of the noted Champs Elysees, considered one of the most beautiful avenues in the world. "TURN THE OTHER CHEEK, ALSO"

"Whosoever smiteth thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also."

Shall we obey this command by making it our business to offer our cheeks for blows? That would at least be very poor business, unworthy of a man.

There are three other things that we may do—First, we may dodge or run away to avoid the second blow. The second way would be to fight, giving blow for blow. Thirdly, we may go our way regardless of the first insult exposing ourselves to more of the same kind if they happen to come our way. The first method is cowardly; the second is cruel; the third is Christianlike. Every brother man with whom I associate intimately has plenty of chances to slap me in the face. When it is done the first time I am astonished and grieved. To return the blow would be to degrade myself in my own estimation as much as he has degraded himself from his company and so never give him another chance to strike me. But we may live in the same city, on the same street or in the same house; our daily work may bring us together. In such a case, which is the case of most people in the society, the duty of any one who has been attacked is to go on as if nothing had happened, treating the unkind brother as a brother still, and thus turning to him the other
