THE OUT-DOOR CRANK

My neighbor sleeps outdoors; he lies out there and snores; and the next day he goes his way the drierest of bores. He tells me tireless tales of how he braved the gales; in peace he slept while torrents swept, and hail came down in pails. The frost was on his nose, and ice was on his toes; he slumbered on until the dawn, serene, though nearly froze. He has a deep disdain for people so insane that they will try to slumber dry, away from snow and rain. This I, of ours is free, and men may fadists be; may join the owls and other fowls, and roost up in a tree. Or they may burrow deep where snakes and groundhogs sleep, or hang on hooks in quiet nooks, or 'neath the stable creep. But when their sleep is o'er, and they have ceased to snore, they should be drowned if they go round their helpless friends to bore.

THE COST OF EDUCATION

Down in old Yamhill even there are dissenters who do not take kindly to the idea of holding up educational appropriations through use of the referendum. One of these writes to the McMinnville Telephone-Register as follows:

"One naturally wonders if the committee of five worthy gentlemen who are canvassing for funds to enable them to hold up the state appropriations for permanent improvements for the Agricultural College, University of Oregon and the State Normal school, realize how little their share of the proposed tax will be in case the appropriations are allowed to stand. One of the gentlemen, one of the county's heaviest taxpayers, is assessed upon $26,390.00, upon which he pays state, county, school and other taxes, $354.68; special school tax, $158.54, and road tax, $131.95, or a total of $645.17. If he succeeds in permanently holding up all of these appropriations, he will save less than twelve dollars per year for the ensuing two years.

"Another member of this committee pays taxes on $1965.00 and his share of the burden of the state appropriations to the three schools will be less than one dollar annually for the next two years. A third member is assessed upon $1635.00 and his share will be less than eighty cents per annum for the same period. And the fourth, who is most eloquent in his denunciation of the state's extravagance, pays taxes on $1475.00 and will enrich himself, if he succeeds in holding up these appropriations, during the next two years to the tune of seventy cents per annum. The fifth gentleman, who is very efficient and highly educated, pays taxes on $320.00 and he expects to be benefitted to the amount of thirty cents, or fifteen cents per annum for the ensuing two years."

OREGON ELECTRIC IS COMING

The Oregon Electric will be under construction toward Eugene within a few weeks. John F. Stevens, the Hill manager in the West, says so—and James J. Hill was never a hot-air artist. An interview printed in the Salem Statesman yesterday says:

"The Hill people asked for a franchise out of the city of Salem for no other purpose than that of using it in their extension of the Oregon Electric south, and we are ready to commence construction immediately when everything is cleared up so we can," said John F. Stevens, president of the Oregon Electric, and head of all the Hill interests in the state of Oregon, yesterday, to a representative of The Statesman.

Mr. Stevens continued that the extension of the Oregon Electric was the one project that the Hill interests were more interested in than any other of all the railroad projects they had in view.

"He emphasized the desire of the Hill interests to begin construction at once, and declared the country which is to be traversed by the new extension is one of the richest in the world and predicted a great era of development in the Willamette valley in the next ten years."

STATE PRINTER'S "FAT" GRAFT

The Gaurd has repeatedly called attention to the graft worked by the state printer, whose net profits are supposed to be somewhere from $20,000 to $30,000 annually. Now comes the new state printing expert, R. A. Harris, an appointee of Governor West, with the statement that had the recommendations of the senate committee on the revision of the senate journal been followed it would have saved to the state one-half the cost of printing and in addition one half the cost of paper.

Mr. Harris contends, and in this he is backed up by the secretary of state's office, that one half of the senate and house journals is made up of what the printer calls "fat," that was put in by early legislatures to pad the bill for printing and which still remains as a relic of the printer's fee system.

The cost of printing the house and senate journals for the 1909 session was $2314.71. The printing of the senate journal cost $1166.90, and of the house journal, $1147.81. The cost of printing the 1911 journals will be more and, according to Mr. Harris, more than $1,000 could have been saved to the taxpayers had Chief Clerk Flagg adopted the form recommended by the senate revision committee, which consisted of Senators L. E. Bean of Lane and Linn counties, Dan Malarkey of Multnomah, and C. L. Hawley of Polk and Benton, and on which Mr. Harris was a clerk.

In order that this saving will hereafter be made Mr. Harris will draw up a bill to be presented to the next session proposing a form for the house and senate journals that will eliminate the "fat" and padded character of the journals in the future and the secretary of state's office will assist Mr. Harris in having the bill enacted into law.

In an address to the Portland Commercial club yesterday John F. Stevens, the railroad man, once chief engineer on the Panama canal, expressed his opinion that the north-western portion of the United States will benefit commercially from the completion of the canal more than any other section of the United States. He estimates the time of completion at January 1, 1915. He also expressed himself strongly in favor of thoroughly fortifying the canal and of giving American ships preferential rights as to tolls, even to the extent of granting free passages.

The Lane County Asset Co. has not gone out of business, and is still working persistently, if quietly, to promote a railroad to the coast. The prospects for success are brighter than ever before, and backed up by the community, the company will carry the enterprise through to completion.

After the demerits get into power at the next session of congress, we anticipate that there will be some slight differences of opinion to overcome before we get the tariff fixed so that it suits all of us.
