CURED BY USING

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"Several years ago, my blood was in bad condition, my system all run down, and my general health very much impaired. My hands were covered with large sores, discharging all the time. I had no strength nor energy and my feelings were miserable in the extreme. At last, I commenced taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla and soon noticed a change for the better. My appetite returned and with it, renewed strength. Encouraged by these results, I kept on taking the Sarsaparilla, till I had used six bottles, and my health was restored."—A. A. TOWNS, Prop. Harris House, Thompson, N. Dak.

JUST TOO LATE.

"Never," said Mr. Parrham. "Isn't that rather a sweeping declaration?" said Miss Glenn, who sat opposite. Mr. Parrham was a rich bachelor, portly, sleek and well to do, and his "never" applied to the great question of matrimony as regarding himself. Kitty Glenn was well, she certainly was not an old maid, but she was 29, with brown eyes and bright chestnut hair and lips fresh and crimson as the earliest strawberry of the season. And Mrs. Parrham, the old bachelor's sister-in-law, had been doing her best to "get up a match" between them.

"No," said Mr. Parrham, "I don't think it is. Marriage is altogether a mistake!" "Oh, Paulus!" chirped Mrs. Parrham, with a tiny shudder. "That's flying in the face of Scripture!"

"How?" demanded Mr. Parrham. "Don't the Bible say, 'It is not good for man to be alone'?"

"Ah-h-h," said Mr. Parrham convincingly, "but we haven't lived up to the Bible ever since. We have degenerated, Sarah. Marriage is a mistake. Any man who sells his birthright of freedom and independence for a wedding ring and a pretty face deserves to be put in bondage. I shall never be such a fool!"

Did Kitty's head drop a very trifling Mrs. Parrham watched her. Nevertheless there was a very perceptible movement of relief in the room when Charley March entered—a tall, young fellow, with laughing eyes and a healthy complexion.

"You don't know what you have lost, Mr. March," said Mrs. Parrham lightly. "What?" demanded Charley. "A dissertation on matrimony."

"Oh, that's a question that I have nothing to do with." And he glanced as he spoke at Kitty Glenn.

"It's too bad," said Mrs. Parrham to Kitty that night. "What is too bad?" questioned Kitty innocently.

"How would have made you such a splendid husband," sighed Mrs. Parrham. "Pooh! That's all past and gone!"

While Mr. Parrham, in his own snug room, unwrapped as it were in the fragrance of a Havana, chuckled to himself as he thought how nicely he had outwitted the scheming clique of women down stairs.

A week afterward and the mental and spiritual climate had changed.

"I'm not going to be very sick, am I?" asked Mr. Parrham.

"Oh, no," answered Dr. Medrick. "It's nothing but a little touch of inflammatory rheumatism! I had a patient last week who's been down with it for seven weeks. Couldn't lift his finger without screaming, I assure you!"

"I can't take care of him any longer, Kitty," said poor little Mrs. Parrham, coming out, pale and haggard, at the expiration of a weary fortnight. "He says I get the gruel too hot and the tea too cold, and I step like an elephant, and rustle my dress as if I were robed in newspapers, and do what I will, I can't please him! And he won't have a nurse—a mere mercenary, he calls it—and what shall I do?"

"There, there," soothed Kitty. "Don't cry! I'll see what I can do." Some people have dewy coolness at their fingers' ends, mesmeric influences in every step or touch. The invalid's fevered impatience subsided as she moved softly about the room.

"If you were to stay and nurse me, I should get well," he said piteously. "Then I'll do my best," said Kitty quickly. "Only, if you are not good, I shall go away."

Mr. Parrham frowned and then smiled. After all, dignity aside, there was something very pleasant in thus becoming a moped, humored child in such beautiful hands as those of Kitty Glenn, and being admonished that he must be "good" by a voice which was as sweet as a bird's.

And the third day, as Mr. Parrham was waiting eagerly for his soup, in came his sister-in-law.

"Where's Kitty?" he demanded dolorously, wrinkling up his broad brow like a 4-year-old about to cry.

"She's gone riding with Mr. March. It's quite an old engagement and she couldn't very well escape it, but she will be back by 4 o'clock."

"Four o'clock! How am I to get along until then?" "I'm sure I don't know," said Mrs. Parrham, who possessed one great disqualification for a sick chamber. "Try your broth, Paulus. It's very nice!"

"It's sea-a-adding," said the invalid. "I won't touch a mouthful till she comes back." "Do, Paulus," urged Mrs. Parrham nervously. "Oh, dear, what will the doctor say?"

"I don't care what he says," growled the sick man. When she came back, Mrs. Parrham indulged in a burst of hysterical sobs. "Don't leave us again, Kitty," she bewailed, "or I shall certainly die! He is such a trial!"

And Kitty laughed and went straight into the sick room with her bonnet still on to scold the patient for his bad behavior. "Kitty," said he one twilight as she stood opposite him, looking very pretty and very graceful, "how can I ever thank you for all you have done? It will take a whole lifetime to express my gratitude!" "I hope not," said Kitty, shrugging her shoulders. "That would be very tiresome to both of us."

"Nevertheless I shall try it," said Mr. Parrham. "Kitty, I've a question I want to ask you."

Mrs Brandt's Trouble.

Rosburg Review: "Matrimonial bliss, at least to Mrs. Brandt, apparently is not all that it is cracked up to be by poets. Although she has twice made the experiment of living in double harness, her life is yet far from a perennial springtime of sunshine.

Her husband Park Brandt, was formerly foreman at the S. P. round house in Roseburg, and shortly after moving to Portland two or three years ago, Mrs. Brandt shot herself with suicidal intent, and her aim was so good that her life hung on a very slender thread for weeks. On Saturday last in Portland her husband was brought into court, charged with threatening to kill his wife. It appears that Brandt had or imagined he had occasion to mistrust his wife. So on Thursday he put in the greater portion of the day shadowing her. He was in disguise, and for several hours followed her and a male companion about East Portland. When he met them face to face he threatened to make it tropical for them. Later in the evening he did cause their arrest but failed to prefer any charge against them. Then Mrs. Brandt had bit arrested for threatening to take her life, and he entered a plea of not guilty.

He had a pistol in his possession when arrested, but it was not loaded. The tale told by Mrs. Brandt would make good material for a novel of the racy school, and if all she tells be true, she is a very much abused woman, says the Portland papers. Mrs. Brandt worked in a printing office in Oakland for sometime before marrying her present husband. Her name was Mrs. Lena Steel then. Brandt is master mechanic in the Portland car shops. Mr. Brandt was tried on the charge in Portland and dismissed. This couple aired their trouble in the Lane county Circuit court at one time. They then resided at Junction.

MILLER'S BURNED HOUSE.—The fire which destroyed Hon. H. B. Miller's fine residence near Grant's Pass last Sunday evening was discovered at 4:55 p.m. and at 8 o'clock the flames had run their course. Mr. Miller's family have resided in Eugene during the past year and his father occupied the house and was sitting around the fireplace in the family sitting room with some company when the fire, which is supposed to have caught in the second story from the due in some manner, was detected. The observer says Mr. Miller soon located the fire and went up stairs with a bucket of water and on opening the door the flames burst through. He succeeded in shutting the door and went out on the balcony but could see no smoke on the roof. All available help was at hand but there was no adequate means to cope with the flames and efforts were turned to the saving of furniture, etc., a portion of which was rescued. The loss for a sum about $5000 and the insurance amounts to only $1500. Mr. Miller who was in San Francisco at the time of the recent fire has been particularly unfortunate. About a year ago the large barn on the place, with carriages, horses, etc., were destroyed by fire.
