Mrs. Rhodie Noah, of this place, was taken in the night with cramping pains and the next day diarrhoea set in. She took half a bottle of blackberry cordial but got no relief. She then sent to me to see if I had anything that would help her. I sent her a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and the first dose relieved her. Another of our neighbors had been sick for about a week and had tried different remedies for diarrhoea but kept getting worse. I sent him this remedy. Only four doses of it were required to cure him. He says he owes his recovery to this wonderful remedy.—Mrs. Mary Sibbey, Sidney, Mich. For sale by Osburn & DeLano.

THE BEST SPRING MEDICINE

Is SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR—Don't forget to take it. The Liver gets sluggish during the winter, just like all nature, and the system becomes choked up by the accumulated waste, which brings on Malaria, Fever and Ague and Rheumatism. You want to wake up your Liver now, but be sure you take SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR to do it. It also regulates the Liver—keeps it properly at work, and your system will be free from poison and all sorts of body invigorated. You get BEST BLOOD when your system is in AT condition, and that will only be when the Liver is kept active. Try a Liver Regulator once and note the difference. But take only SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR—it is SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR which makes the difference. Take it in powder or in liquid already prepared, or make a tea of the powder; but take SIMMONS' LIVER REGULATOR. You'll find the RED Z on every package. Look for it.

Immense Milling Enterprise.

Cottage Grove-Lemati Leader: The long talked of flume which has been such a stupendous undertaking is fast nearing completion.

The bridge to carry it across the Willamette river built by L. N. Roney, has been completed and is a fine piece of work—a Howe truss of over 200 feet in length. The flume is 5 miles and 900 feet in length. In a dozen places the trestle reaches a height of 30 feet and upwards. In four places it reaches a height of 50 feet and upward and in one place it reaches the immense height of 85 feet. In this place it crosses a deep canyon from one ridge to another in order to get over a ridge and tap Gittings creek for a feeder and also to tap the immense body of timber lying tributary thereto. The last mile on the west end of the flume, the trestle is from 15 to 40 feet in height. This was rendered necessary by reason of the ground being lower near the foothills than at the river bank, and also in order to give it the necessary fall. At the juncture with the R. R. it has a dump of 10 feet above the level of flat cars on the track. The high trestle shows a very intricate and skillful piece of civil engineering. It reaches with a varying height of from 12 to 85 feet a distance of 1500 feet (over one-third of a mile) in a compound horizontal curve, and the grade also has a vertical curve joining two grades; one 22 per cent the other 2.4 per cent. There has been about one and a half million feet of lumber used in the construction of the entire flume. This alone gives a good idea of the magnitude of the enterprise which has cost Mr. Jones somewhere near $15,000, which speaks well for his enterprising and pushing business abilities. This is a new venture in this part of Oregon, the only one of its kind on the upper Willamette, but it will not be long before flumes will thread the streams and canyons of the surrounding hills along Row river, Coast Fork and the McKenzie and millions of millions of valuable timber be brought to market. After the flume is built the expense of putting lumber to market is almost ended. It goes itself; and there are many locations near here which will soon be booming with just such enterprises as this one which Mr. Jones has had the tenacity and pluck to accomplish. In the flume lies the value of the mill, the timber, the wood, piling, fence posts, shingle timber, and in fact everything surrounding it. It is transportation economizing to a minimum and Mr. Jones deserves great credit for his pluck which enabled him to launch into an enterprise of such proportions, which must necessarily be an experiment, but which is now no longer an experiment but a verified fact, and a source of vast revenue to the community. The mill is 200 feet long and 40 feet wide and will soon be supplied with a 150 horse power engine and two boilers of 125 horse power each. The two engines and boilers now in use will be moved to Jones to run the planers and other machinery at the end of the flume. This enterprise takes over 2500 acres of the finest fir timber that grows. Soft yellow fir over 200 feet long and the mill will cut logs 72 feet long. There is an unlimited demand for lumber shipped to California, Utah and Nevada at good prices besides the vast amounts as well as piling and posts used by the railroad company. Mr. Jones has one of the finest dams built in Oregon, 35 feet high 200 feet wide and will hold one million feet of logs, built by W. R. Johnson. The whole enterprise speaks well for Mr. Jones who conceived and planned the work, Mr. Johnson who built the mill and dam, Mr. Todd the engineer who surveyed and planned the flume and Mr. Chas. Raymon who built it. The whole expense of the mill, dam and flume construction has cost Mr. Jones near $40,000, but he will soon get his money back with profit. The town of Jones is building up rapidly and promises moving in nearly every day and as soon as the flume is completed which will be in a few days houses will spring up like Jones' gourd.

Receiver Clark Returns.

Charles Clark, the only successful receiver of the late O. P., has returned from his Eastern trip and been in Corvallis for several days, says the Times. He is still receiver of the O. P. property so far as any suits that were pending during the period of his administration, and is the person to whom the California court directs payment to be made of the $23,000 recently awarded to the Oregon Pacific, as the proceeds of the sale of the steamer Willamette Valley. Mr. Clark's visit to Corvallis pertains particularly to the transfer of the funds, of which he expects shortly to be placed in possession. By Mr. Clark it will be turned over to Judge Fullerton's court, and from that court it is likely to be paid over to Bonner & Hammond, unless some legal move ties it up for further litigation, or turns it altogether into other channels.

A Steamboat Accident.

ALBANY, July 12.—The steamboat "Albany," which is being run by the Oregon Central and Eastern Railroad Company, left Albany this morning and when down the river about three miles she struck a rock or something that shook her up pretty badly. A steam pipe blew out and filled the cabins full of steam almost instantly. The captain ran her on shore. The passengers were temporarily alarmed, but none were hurt.

The boat is not injured materially and will be running again in a few days if the stage of water will permit, though it is now very low.

Where are you going to spend your vacation?

The thermometer registered 82 degrees this afternoon.

The Slushaw stage took out two passengers this morning.

The country roads are said to be unusually dusty for this time of year.

Edna Lyall.

Edna Lyall contributes to Good Words an article entitled "How I Became a Novelist." She says she was "born a coward" and should never have ventured to publish "Doreen," her first story, "while home rulers are regarded as disloyal separatists" had it not been for the courage imparted to her by her mother. Her first tales, she says, were written because "it was impossible to resist the craving to describe the beloved heroes and heroines." While still a schoolgirl she was an admirer of the celebrated Welsh singer, Edith Wynne, and weaving a romance about her in her imagination wrote a story from which "Doreen" was afterward constructed. "From those past days up to the present there has always been a story on hand, and writing has become so much a part of my life that it is difficult quite to understand what life without a vocation would be like or how people exist without 'dream children.'"

A Woman Soldier.

Mrs. Christians Davis, who was born in Dublin in 1807, received a pension after having served many years in the British army. She married Richard Welsh, and her husband having enlisted in the army, she assumed a man's attire in the hope of following him with greater facility. Unsuccessful in her quest, she enlisted herself in a regiment of foot, and when her term of service as a foot soldier expired she, in 1792, joined the cavalry, serving in the Second dragoons (now the Scots greys), under Colonel Lord John Hay. After the battle of Blenheim she fell in with her husband, made herself known to him and passed for his brother until detected. After serving in the army as a nurse she returned to England after the treaty of Utrecht and was allowed by Queen Anne a pension of a shilling a day. She died on the 7th of July, 1789, and was buried in the graveyard of Chelsea hospital with military honors.

Keeping the Baby Too Warm.

Many young mothers seem to think that the apartments in which baby spends the most of his time must be kept very warm; the thermometer must indicate a figure in the eighties. Well, the mercury records a temperature of 85 degrees, and some day the mother wakes up to the fact that baby has taken cold and exclaims: "I don't see how he could take cold. I haven't had a door or a window open, not even a crack, and I have bundled him up in flannels, and, see there now, he is in a beautiful, soft perspiration." And no wonder; he is rolled up in blankets and flannels and comfortable until he is the most uncomfortable bit of humanity imaginable. To live through such treatment is nothing less than a miracle, for the poor baby is constantly in a feverish condition and breathes over and over again the foul air of a nearly airtight chamber and is literally becoming poisoned through his whole system.

A coloring for white flannel or other goods to be used for rugs or hangings may be easily obtained by gathering from stone walls or rockwork the thin moss that grows there and boiling it with the goods in an iron kettle. It will make them a tan color.

To test a ham, stick a sharp knife under the bone. If it comes out clean, with a pleasant smell, the ham is good, but if the knife is smeared and has a disagreeable smell do not buy it.

In Memoriam.

Died, at Arlington, Oregon, June 2, 1896, Mr. Lucien Parker. He was sick only a few days, being taken on Thursday with appendicitis, and as a last resort, on Sunday an operation was performed. But it was of no avail and he grew steadily worse and died Tuesday at 3 p.m. He was buried at Arlington under the auspices and with the beautiful ceremony of the Woodmen of the World, of which society he was an honored member. He was also a member of the United Artisans, Masons and Odd Fellows.

He was born near Trent, Lane county, Oregon, February 1, 1865, being a son of Mr. and Mrs. James Parker, of Goshen, and is the first taken from their family of 11 children. There is a vacant chair in that family circle now, a link broken from the chain that can never be replaced.

He leaves a wife and two little daughters to mourn their irreparable loss.

He was an upright and honorable man, always striving to do what was right, and doing to others as he would have them do to him, and made warm friends wherever known. His loss is deeply felt in Gilliam county by a large circle of friends and also in Lane, where he was loved and respected by all who knew him.

A FRIEND.

PLEASED WITH THE MINES.—Salem Statesman: Horace L. Hotchkiss, a millionaire of New York, who is largely interested in the Quartzville mines, was in Albany Friday on his return from a trip to the mines. He is well pleased with the outlook at the mines and speaks in terms of highest praise and confidence of Mr. Lawlor's management of the properties. He says the volume of gold bullion that is being taken out every day is highly satisfactory, and the company will double the capacity of the Quartzville mining plant this season. Mr. Hotchkiss is delighted with Oregon and says he considers the mines now being worked by the Lawlor company the richest in the United States and said he would not even except the African mines. Mr. Hotchkiss is an earnest promoter of the Nicaragua canal and says the completion will mean millions to the Pacific coast. He left for a short visit at Yaquina.

Silver Men of Spokane.

SPOKANE, Wash., July 11.—Fifteen hundred people attended the mass meeting of the free-silver republicans at the Auditorium tonight. Five hundred more were turned away because there was no room. The crowd cheered enthusiastically every mention of free silver. Attorney-General Jones, Hon. George Turner, Cyrus Happy, John R. McBride, P. H. Winston and others addressed the meeting. Five hundred silver republicans signed the roll to organize a free-silver republican party, the object of which is to unite all forces on the free-silver candidate.

Interviews today with leading populists develop the fact that the delegates from Washington will go to St. Louis primed to support the nomination of Bryan. No definite plan of action was decided upon, but strong pressure will be brought to bear upon every delegate from the West to further the candidacy of Bryan.

Florence West, Wm. M. Casterline and Edith Phelps were married last Wednesday at the residence of the bride's parents in Glenada, Mayor Wilson officiating. This being the first ceremony of the kind ever performed by the mayor, he appeared a little shaky but made no mistakes.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Vincent possess a dove of the wild species which is quite docile. The bird was captured while young and now shows a very tame and loving disposition, often perching itself contentedly on one's shoulder.
