The Morphine Habit Increasing.

It is stated by prominent physicians that the number of morphine fiends is increasing. Owing to their delicate nervous organization, the habit finds the greatest number of its victims among women, although men too are not exempt. They take the deadly stuff whenever they feel depressed or have a slight ailment, and before they realize it they are in the grasp of a disease which can but end in the grave. This morbid craving comes from a run down condition of the nervous system and blood. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters taken faithfully will tone up the system, strengthen the stomach and make the blood pure, and it will help the liver and kidneys to do their work. It is good for every one, especially at this time of the year.

The Old, Old Story.

It is high time there were game warden in Alaska, or shortly there will be no deer, says the Skagway Alaskan. One hundred were brought up from Wrangell before yesterday, which shows that they are killing animals in the breeding season. Over 2,000 deer have been brought from Wrangell through Skagway during the winter. They are a drug on the market there, selling for $1 each or less.

Some of the results of neglected dyspepsia of the stomach are cancer, consumption, heart disease and epilepsy. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure prevents all this by effecting a quick cure in all cases of dyspepsia. Vincent and Co. Corner Drug Store.

MANILA STREET SCENES

An American Volunteer's Observations in the Philippines.

MENDICANTS SEEN EVERYWHERE.

They Face Well at the Hands of Our Free Handed Soldier Boys—Begging Reduced to a Science—Manila's Great Abattoir—Water Buffalo, Ponies and Dogs Used For Food.

Manila life has many sides, and every side is of intense and absorbing interest. No matter where one goes or which way he turns he is continually coming unexpectedly upon something new and interesting. I have traversed the same streets many times, and yet every time some new things of interest are revealed.

Manila has some fine clubs, and its places of enjoyment, while probably not up to our standard, are modern according to Spanish ideas. It is doubtful whether there is another city of the same size in the world so much given up to enjoyment and so utterly devoid of ambition in business lines, but American enterprise is now working a marvelous change.

No picture of Spanish life in the city of Manila would be complete without the beggars, who intrude themselves upon all strangers and give them a cordial and continuous welcome. The beggars are really one of the great plagues of the islands, and one cannot but wonder at the great number of these mendicants. It has been said that there is a suspicion that the church and saints have had a good deal to do with it, for they expect every one to give alms to the church and make it one of the first religious duties. The beggars of Manila are found upon every street, at every bridge and gate and church door, in the markets and other business houses. The professional beggar is up at daybreak and stations himself on the street or elsewhere in a squatting position, with his hands extended and eyes closed, uttering a pitiful singsong wail. This promptness in the morning is to catch the ladies on their way to mass, as they seldom pass without dropping a few centavos into the palm of the beggar's stretched hand. The church door is a special location for the beggars to lounge.

The female beggars are pitiable looking hags, and the men are mostly maimed and mutilated specimens of humanity. During the first month or two of our occupation many of the escaped lepers were found engaged in begging, but when the search for these began they hid away, and the other beggars were given a better chance. Among the beggars are many attractive children, and the passer can't help admiring the coal black eyes and listening to the pure accents of these children. Their innocent pleadings will make one give them something, for it is hard to resist such appeals. Besides these beggars who station themselves along the streets, there are others who go among the crowds and solicit alms. It is a common sight to see a blind man or woman being led through the streets by a child and soliciting alms from the passersby and from the crowds in the shops and saloons. No other city in the world has so many mendicants who ply their lowly calling with such consummate craft.

I have seen enough incidents of this peculiar feature of street life in Manila to fill a volume. The other day I saw something I shall long remember. It was down in the Juapio district. There in the street a venerable beggar had sunk down on the sidewalk and leaned his weary back against the wall, he was eating a bit of cold meat and a crust of bread given him by a soldier. He was not alone, he was accompanied by a child, as many beggars are. His only companion was a dog which put his long nose up between his master's knees in sign of expectation. Nothing could shake his faith, as he knew that his master would not forget him, and he did not. The poor mendicant divided his scanty lunch with his dumb companion.

Another scene which I shall never forget was one witnessed in the outskirts of the city only a few days ago. As I was passing along a street I saw a poor, miserable woman sitting on a stone with an infant in her arms. As I passed she arose and intercepted me, holding out her hand for money. When I hesitated a moment her pleadings were incessant, and although I understood not a word of the Tagala language, the appeal was most eloquent, but not to be compared with her thanks when the solicited coin was given.

buffaloes is all collected in one vessel, and this mixture is made into a kind of jelly. It is amusing to see the natives skin the animals. They make a bungling job of it. With the hide the outer layer of meat is taken off, and afterward native boys strip this from the hide. Next comes the work of disemboweling, and after the entrails are removed they are taken to another room and there prepared for food by native women. Every part of the animal is used. Even the hoofs are taken to vats and the gelatin extracted. After the carcass is quartered and hung upon the hooks it is taken off the bones and sent to the native market houses. About 200 animals are slaughtered nightly.

To Americans horse meat is something new, but to the Spanish and natives, who endured the sieges when rats sold for a peso, this meat is a luxury. Most of the ponies slaughtered are old and unfit for any service. They bring only about 10 pesos at the matadero. It is amusing to watch the processes of butchering a pony. With the Chinese horse meat is a favorite. Dogs are killed on a different plan. Of the smaller animals which enter the slaughter yard the pig is the only one which can make any pretensions to being fat. Such are the scenes about the place where is prepared the meat eaten by the 500,000 people of Manila, but this is only one of many queer and interesting institutions to be seen in the capital of the Philippines.
