HE KNEW HUMAN NATURE.

And Had No Trouble in Disposing of the Old Stock.

In Dearborn street is a haberdasher—time was when they answered to a less formidable name—who counts a genius among his employees. This "favored of fortune" is a youth who once clerked in a general store in the country, and his present proprietor wonders if there are any more like him running at large in the provinces.

There had been a stock of cheap collars and cuffs on the shelves for years. Once in awhile, usually just before involving these articles had been brought down, carefully dusted, tied with new baby ribbon, arranged in orderly fashion in the window and marked "9 cents" for the cuffs, "5 cents" for the collars. But patrons would none of them. Occasionally a man would come along and toss them over, attracted by the price, but that was all. They would not sell.

The country youth waited till the first hard rain. Then he took an armful of the goods and dipped them carefully in a pail of water so that about half of each article was moistened. Then he dried them in the sun at the back door and next morning heaped them in the window with this marking:

Collars, 10 Cents.
Cuffs, 20 Cents.

And they went before noon. It was all the genius from the country could do to get subsequent armfuls soaked and dried fast enough to supply the demand.—Chicago Post.

STRONG ROOMS.

Remarkable Expedients Adopted to Save Some Fabulous Fortunes.

The Bank of England's strong room is one of the largest in the world. The foundation, 66 feet below the street level, is a bed of concrete 20 feet thick. Above this is a layer seven feet deep and above that thick plates of iron specially manufactured to resist both skill and force. Any one attempting an entrance from above would find a similar bed of concrete, a similar like and similar plates of iron. The walls are impervious, while the doors are one foot thick, weigh four tons each and are made absolutely undrillable.

Mr. W. W. Astor's valuables are stored in the office of the Wall Mail Gazette in one of the most remarkable strong rooms ever erected. It is steel throughout and covered with half an inch of solid concrete. The door, also of solid steel, weighs over two tons and has the most remarkable lock which the ingenuity of Chubb has ever constructed. The whole cost a fabulous sum, but this is not surprising when we are told that Mr. Astor locks up about $8,000,000 worth of valuables and money in this room.

The Imperial Ottoman bank, Constantinople, had a marvelous steel fort built upon a water bearing rock, and on top of the rock foundation is a four foot bed of concrete. The height is over 36 feet, length 40 feet and width 24 feet. The steel walls are surrounded by masonry and concrete six feet thick throughout, while the whole comprises nearly 30 tons of steel.—St. Paul Globe.

Sure of Water.

Sir Joseph Prestwich had bought in 1804 a small estate near Sevenoaks, on which he built a residence, but which was high up on a dry and treeless chalk down. Where was water to be found? "So confident was Prestwich in his respect of water supply that he at once engaged an old well digger to sink a well 108 feet deep. The boring proceeded, but when a depth of 100 feet was reached the two workmen went to the city and sought an interview with their employer, whom they found at his desk. They explained that they had no sign of water and that in their opinion it was useless to bore to a greater depth. 'Go on,' was the quiet rejoinder, 'you will come upon water to-morrow. You are within two feet of it.'"

"Next day it proved exactly as Prestwich had foretold. And over after, among many of the denizens of the valley, he had the reputation, much to his amusement, of not being quite 'canny.'—Life and Letters of Sir Joseph Prestwich.

A Victim of Overconfidence.

"This bill isn't what I had a right to expect," grumbled the man who had stepped up to the cashier's window at the gas company's office. "Two dollars, boy?" said the cashier, glancing at the bill. "That doesn't seem so very exorbitant. What was it the month before?"

"Four dollars!"

"You didn't kick on that, did you?"

"No."

"Why is this so much smaller?"

"The house was shut up half the month."

"Then what are you complaining about? Isn't $2 about right?"

"Yes; but, blame it, I made a bet of $5 the other day that the bill would be as big as usual!"—Chicago Tribune.

A Warning Phrase.

"What made you break off the argument so suddenly?"

"Didn't you hear what he said?" asked the cautious citizen.

"Yes. When you left, he had just said, 'Let us talk this over calmly and reasonably.'"

"That's why I went. Whenever a man says 'Let us talk it over calmly and reasonably' you may depend on his being so angry it won't take more than three words to make him fight."—Washington Star.

PLEA FOR THE CODFISH.

A Chef Who Says This Fish Is Not Appreciated at Its Real Worth.

"If codfish cost a dollar a pound," said the chef, "it would be more universally beloved. I tell you, it is the best dinner fish known. I have tried the codfish all over the world, but the codfish is king of them all and is not appreciated at its real worth. Cook him in any way you like and he is delicious. Even the dried codfish, picked up and served in cream for breakfast, is a fine dish. Put him in a bag, sew him up tightly, and let him boil, or bake him carefully, well stuffed, and he is delicious."

"Let me tell you that when you make fish cakes you should not drown out the fish with potato. Put as little potato or other substance in the cakes as possible, and if you want them as fine as they can be made, wrap them in a blanket of eggs, and do not be sparing of the egg. You can make a tasty dish of codfish cakes if you will follow my advice. Fish cakes are considered a very democratic dish, of course, but my patron, who pays me a huge salary, is as democratic as he could be in his younger days. When I came down to an order for fish cakes for the next morning's breakfast, he says he wants Mosechut's fish cakes, with egg. That is the order, and he is thinking of his younger life when he was once told me, in a basement on Broadway he used to get the finest better cakes and fish cakes he ever tasted, 'excepting yours, chef,' he adds always. But I know that dimes in those days were as $1,000 bills are to him now and his appetite was keener and more appreciative."—New York Sun.

SAUCY, BUT SELF RELIANT.

Such Is the Typical East Side Girl of New York City.

"The typical east side girl of New York," writes Charles T. Brodhead in The Ladies' Home Journal, "is a product of her environment. She is surrounded by the good, bad and indifferent. She is in an atmosphere in which no girl should be reared. Her eyes and ears are closed to many disagreeable things around her. And she shuts them simply because she does not care to see and hear. Yet the east side girl is no saint. Far from it. The typical girl of that section is self-reliant, saucy, impertinent, slangy, quick tempered, ready to fight with the tongue, and even with fists if necessary. She will dance all night and work all day, repeat it three or four times a week, then declare she isn't tired and look bright and fresh all the while. She will upbraid her mother, whom she calls 'me ole woman,' and abuse her father, referred to by her as 'me ole man,' cuff the ears of her younger brothers; have a hair pulling match with a sister; yet if any one should dare utter a word derogatory to the members of her family, 'Miss East Side' would go at them like a wildcat. She flirts outrageously with motormen, conductors and the like and will laugh derisively at or slap the face of the well dressed man who presumes to become acquainted with her on the street; remain tight after night at the bedside of a girl friend who is ill and follow a begging cripple half a block to give her last cent for charity."

Evarts' Pans.

William M. Evarts, secretary of state under President Hayes, made perhaps his best and his worst puns from railway platforms while traveling with the presidential party.

They had ascended Mount Washington by the steep cable road, and other tourists, gathered there from all parts of the country, called for a speech.

"We are not strangers," said Mr. Evarts genially. "We have all been born and brought up here."

At another time, when traveling through Tennessee, Mr. Evarts laid a wager with the young people of his party that he could make a pun upon each town through which they should pass. As they reached Chattanooga the crowd clamored for a speech. Mr. Evarts pleaded that as the train would stop but a moment he could only make a few Chattanooga remarks!

The unexpected element which characterizes a pun was marked in all the wit of Rufus Choate. "I can't endure X," he once exclaimed of another famous Bostonian. "I should not care if I should never see him again." Then half remorsefully, "Well, I should not care if I should see him in a procession."

Making a Child Too Quiet.

Play is the proper and natural outlet for a child's thoughts. To restrain his motion is to drive back his living fancy into the recesses of his mind, and this results in his confusion and unhappiness. Some children who are forced to be still and passive when they are longing for action find relief in whispering over stories to themselves, but it is an unsatisfactory substitute for dramatic action. And it is also morally injurious. For the necessity of concealing one's ideas destroys after awhile the ability for fluent expression and brings about timidity and distrust of our friends.—Florence Hull Winterburn in Woman's Home Companion.

The Masons kindly proffered the use of their large and commodious hall for the occasion, and although the reception was gotten up in haste, after the arrival of the president on Saturday morning's train, a large number were present. A short program was rendered, consisting of solos by the Misses Alice Landis and Maggie Phyl; recitation by Miss Addie Hutchinson; addresses by President Strong, W. T. Wright, Prof. Conklin, Judge Eakin, and L. J. Davis, solo by Rufus Wright, and a male quartet, after which the remainder of the evening was spent in social converse."

Robbed the Grave.

A startling incident, of which Mr. John Oliver of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: "I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite—gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately a friend had used trying 'Electric Bitters' and to my great joy and surprise, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks and am now a well man. I know they saved my life and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50 cents, guaranteed, at Linn's Drug Store.

REPTON, New Zealand, Nov. 23, 1896. I am very pleased to state that since I took the agency of Chamberlain's medicines the sale has been very large, more especially of the Cough Remedy. A Mother's Plain Words

"I suppose you will be astonished when I tell you that six years ago I was in a most dangerous condition with bronchitis and lung trouble, because you can see how well and strong I am now. The attack at that time caused terrible suffering. Someone advised Aker's English Remedy, and I thought I would try it, although I had little faith in it. The first bottle gave great relief, and the second bottle made me the healthy woman I am today. My husband's lungs are weak also, and he cured himself with the same grand old remedy. Our boy and girl have both been saved by it from death by croup. I know this is so, for when they were attacked in the night I had a bottle in the closet, and by acting quickly that fatal malady was easily overcome. We always give it to the children when they have a cough or cold, and we would not be without it for anything. My sister will tell you also, if you ask her, that it is a medicine that can always be depended upon for all the troubles of the breathing organs. I tell all our neighbors about Aker's English Remedy whenever I get a chance, and there are plenty of people around me who would not think of going to bed at night without a bottle of it in the house that they would of leaving their doors wide open. As I look at it, parents are criminally responsible when they allow their children to die under their very eyes with croup, because here is a certain remedy that will conquer the terrible monster every time."

A Sure Sign of Croup.
