GOSHEN AND CRESWELL

Played Good Football With a 5 to 5 Score.

A very interesting game of football was played at Creswell Saturday between the Goshen and Creswell teams. Goshen was confident of victory as the Creswell team had not at any time a full team for practice. The Creswell team played a very strong game, losing the ball but once, and then on a fumble. Stewart, Love, Dunn and Edmundson put up a good game for Goshen.

The game resulted in a tie with a score of 5 to 5, touchdowns being made by Ford and Stewart. The line-up was as follows:

CRESWELL.	GOSHEN.
Scott	C
Hunter	R G
Marlin	L G
Stanton	R T
Howard	L T
McDaniel (capt)	E E
Casteel	L E

O. O. Glee Club.

The University of Oregon Glee Club, says the Oregon City Courier of Dec. 20, gave a most excellent entertainment at the opera house Wednesday night, and the frequent rounds of applause with which they were greeted, was complimentary to their efforts. The entertainment was in every way complimentary to the high standard of training received at the state university. The club shows marked improvement since its first annual tour two years ago.

Professor Glen, the director and soloist, is an old time Oregon City favorite. The reader, Allen H. Eaton, brings down the house as a reader and impersonator, while Arthur L. Fraser, the very talented pianist, made a decided hit as the impersonator of Parthenia. J. B. Winstanley, the successful manager of the club, serves without compensation. Two members of the club, Beattie and Norris, are Oregon City boys. The club gave a high class entertainment.

MAY COME TOO LATE

Delay in securing English Partridges for the Valley.

Engadina.

The sportsmen who contributed $500 to introduce the gray or English partridge into the Willamette valley are not certain whether they will be able to have the birds here in time to turn out next spring or not. They were made the victims of misplaced confidence by a man who went over to Europe a few months ago and promised to secure the birds and bring them back with him, and who, after writing that he had arranged for the birds, and would start with them on a certain day, returned without them. The only comfort the sportsmen have under the circumstances is that they did not place any of their money in the hands of this man. They are now endeavoring to negotiate with people in Europe to bring the partridges over here, according to pay $5 per pair for 100 pairs landed here.

The partridges remain about farms and cultivated grounds, and will fill a place which the native grouse and pheasants of Oregon leave vacant. The ring neck pheasant, introduced into Oregon from China by Judge Denny a number of years ago, and which have thrived and increased so wonderfully, made themselves perfectly at home around farms, contesting with the domestic fowls for the privileges of the barnyard, as long as they were protected by law, but when shooting of pheasants was allowed, they soon learned to hunt over, and now take to the brush as readily and display as much skill in concealing themselves in trees as the native pheasants.

Two Pointed Questions.

What is the use of making a better article than your competitor if you can not get a better price for it?

Ans—As there is no difference in the price the public will buy only the better, so that while our profits may be smaller on a single sale they will be much greater in the aggregate.

How can you get the public to know your make is the best?

If both articles are brought prominently before the public, both are certain to be tried and the public will very quickly pass judgment on them and usually the better one.

This explains the large sale on Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. The people have been using it for years and found that it can always be depended upon. They may occasionally take up with some fashionable novelty put forth with exaggerated claims, but are certain to return to the one remedy that they know to be reliable, and for coughs, colds and croup there is nothing equal to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. For sale by W. L. DeLano.

AT LAST.

"I'll not have her in the house; I tell you I will not—and with that helpless little baggage whining around her too! Where would he be my quiet and comfort?"

"Horatio Heath?"

The pale faced woman looked up—one stormy night. They were a strange pair, this brother and sister, living alone, far out from the busy, gossiping village. There had been a younger brother, long ago. A fair haired, blue eyed boy, the pride and pet of the family, and to him the partial father was going to leave his farm and money. The elder brother, Horatio, was strong, rugged and miserly. He already owned a good bit of land and was claiming his wages regularly every year.

Hannah, the one daughter, was provided for by being the heiress of a maiden aunt, and so old Farmer Heath, whose practical, hard working wife had died when the little Edward, Everett, was born, made an idol of that fair haired baby; loved and petted him beyond all reason, had him educated in the best schools, and, as a crowning piece of extravagance and folly, actually brought home a second-hand piano and would sit for hours listening to Everett's low, nasal voice and simple accompaniments as he sang and played in the twilight.

Presently the boy announced that he was going to be married.

Within a year the father died suddenly, and neither will nor money could be found in the house. There was a thorough but useless search made.

Horatio and Hannah chose the appraisers, and all the real and personal estate was divided into three parts and appraised according to law.

Everett was to take his portion and leave. And thus it came about that Everett and his young wife were launched upon the world with only a few hundred dollars between them and absolute want.

Ten years went by, and a rumor reached the old Heath farm that Everett was dead and his wife and child were coming back to the village for assistance.

"I suppose they might come here," said Hannah doubtfully, and that provoked the grumble with which this story opens. They did not live happily together, this stern faced sister and quarrelsome brother.

Horatio Heath went down to the long meadow alone to see if the fences were in order, so that he could turn the cattle in without fear of their finding their way out to the railroad.

"That pesky wall and bank," he grumbled, "is altering a-crook in, and I have it to mend, for they never think of touching it. I wouldn't mind it if it came down on the track some day and stopped the trains for awhile, long enough to let 'em know their duty."

Even as he spoke the treacherous bank, shaken by a heavy spring rain, came sliding down, and a heavy log-chuck striking him unexpectedly threw him on his face.

"Help, help!" he screamed, writhing about and trying to rise in vain. "Help, help!" he called again, and a bright light face peered over the crumbling, shivering bank.

"Are you hurt?" asked a childish voice.

"Yes, I'm awfully hurt," he groaned. "Go for help, do, and get me out of this."

"Oh, dear me, there comes the train!" piped the little voice. "I can see it slowing up at Meadow station. Where's a stick?"

"I must have a stick. Let me have your coat."

And, snatching off her little red petticoat, she tied it to the stout walking stick the farmer had dropped and went flying up the track in the very face and eyes of the advancing engine.

Fortunately they saw her in time to stop the train, and a strong armed fireman picked up the little creature as she stood trembling with excitement and exhaustion and just ready to fall.

"She's down in the village," said the doctor soothingly, not quite sure if his patient was sane even then.

"I have seen her bright eyes looking at me day and night," said the man. "I want to see her. I'll give her armfuls of gold, whole armfuls."

"I'll bring her here if you would like to see her," said the doctor.

"Oh, I would be so glad—so glad!" muttered the sick man. "I believe I can't die without seeing her once more."

So the next day the little girl stood, hushed and frightened, in the sick room.

"Tell the gentleman what your name is," said the doctor.

"My name is," said the reply.

"Lucy Heath! Mother's name! Who are you?" questioned the sick man wildly.

"It's your brother's daughter," the doctor said, answering for the child.

"But your father is dead," persisted the sick man, "and you are very poor."

"My papa was a teacher, and he's not dead a bit," was the ready reply.

Horatio Heath had met with a change of heart while he struggled between life and death with the horrible sound of the coming train ringing in his ears. And he would not be satisfied until he had brought his brother back to the old place and shared his wealth with him.—New York News.

Conts to Fit Hunchbacks.

A curious illustration of the advance of the cutter's art is shown nowadays in the making of clothes for hunchbacked men. Forty years ago, as middle aged persons can recall, the coat of a hunchback man was likely to fall more or less loosely from him, while now his coat is made to fit him, as far as fit goes, as well as any man's. While the tailor overcomes many ordinary defects of man in fashioning his clothes he cannot, of course, overcome this one, but he can cut garments that will make the least of it and will fit the wearer with the same appearance of trimness as that which characterizes every garment designed with care, and that is what he does.—New York Sun.

PLAYED OUT.

Dull headache, pains in various parts of the body, sinking at the pit of the stomach, loss of appetite, feverishness, pimples or sores, are all positive evidences of impure blood. No matter how it became so, it must be purified in order to obtain good health. Aker's Blood Elixir has never failed to cure Scrophulous or syphilitic poisons, or any other blood diseases. It is certainly a wonderful remedy and we sell every bottle on a positive guarantee. For sale by W. L. DeLano.

For Nearly Two Years Unable to Lay in Bed

"In my capacity as druggist, in Buffalo, N. Y., I have the best opportunity to judge of the merits of many different remedies. I am in close touch with the sick, who come into my store for medicines, and most of them tell me how they are getting along. Of all the hundreds of preparations which I sell, not a single one begins to give as much satisfaction as Aker's English Remedy for Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma, Pleurisy and Consumption. I sell it on a distinct guarantee that it will cure, or the purchaser's money will be returned. This is a perfectly safe guarantee, because the remedy does cure. Nobody wants his money returned. Its cures are nothing short of marvelous. Take the case of Mr. A. H. Gilbert, for instance. He lives at No. 5 Carey street, Buffalo, N. Y. For more than three years he had a bad case of asthma, and had been unable to lie down in bed for nearly two years. He came to my store and asked me what to do. I said: 'Take Aker's English Remedy.' He said he had tried other remedies and didn't think this would help him. But he thinks differently now. Three bottles fixed his asthma all right. He could sleep, after taking them, as well as when a boy. He was cured several months ago, and is well yet, so I am certain his trouble is gone for good. You can write to Mr. Gilbert himself, if you doubt my word. He will go further than me in praising Aker's English Remedy." (Signed) S. B. THORNTON, druggist, Buffalo, N. Y.

Sold at 25c, 50c, and $1 a bottle, throughout the
