SOME JOINT POLITICS.

The Roseburg Review refers to the candidacy of a Roseburg man for the Lane and Douglas joint senatorial nomination, on the Republican ticket, as follows:

Now, Roseburg has the district judge and district attorney, the latter expiring to be renominated by the republicans, and Lane county feels that she should have at least the joint senator. Several candidates are already out for the place, including S. H. Friendly, of Eugene, and S. L. Moorhead, of Junction City, and they do not receive kindly the information brought home from Roseburg. Neither are George Brown and his friends very anxious to see a Douglas county man pushed into the arena for joint senator, believing that it would completely shatter his chances for renomination. To sum up the situation, it seems to be a case of not enough offices to go around.

PORTLAND'S LEFT HANDED PROSPERITY.

Oregonian Jan. 13.
The Oregonian fully agrees with Mr. Goldsmith in his statement that "the assessor it not to blame for what is called his arbitrary reduction. It reduced itself, as far as town lots are concerned, and had reduced itself ever since 1893, though the unreasonable assessments were kept up till 1899."

HOPES TO PREVENT PARTITION.

The empress dowager of China has issued a warning address to governors of provinces in which she shows a becoming appreciation of the danger which threatens the empire from foreign aggression, and holds them to strict responsibility for immediate defense of their respective provinces, should attack be made upon them.

The various powers, she says, are casting upon us looks of tiger-like voracity, hustling each other in their endeavors to be the first to seize upon our innermost territory. They think that China, having neither money nor troops, would never venture to go to war with them.

Latest mail advices from India aver that the famine situation grows darker every week. Three millions are working on government relief works. The sale of children by starving parents is becoming common. Families are being broken up, each member for himself in search of food. Abandoned children are found with frequency. There is a famine of water as well as food. Cattle are dying off by thousands, and no rain is expected until June.

It is no little satisfaction to the friends of the late Robert Clow that the receiver of the warehouse and milling property owned by the deceased found the wheat stored there in practically intact. The men who knew Mr. Clow intimately could not believe there was the least semblance of wrongdoing on his part, and will welcome the complete vindication of the man of whom the memory alone remains.

It is thought the germs of the bubonic plague were carried from Asiatic ports to Honolulu in merchandise. No other solution of the problem of the appearance of the plague in the islands may be given, as a strict quarantine was enforced while the first cases appeared among native population.

The point of taxing the dead seems to have been reached in the Port Townsend case where the bequest left a priest for the purpose of saying masses for the repose of the soul of the deceased was held subject to provisions of the internal revenue law and required stamps.

Quay went into politics a poor man. Now he owns real estate in Pennsylvania, Washington and Florida, and has a lot of stocks and bonds besides. The plum tree seems to have borne well for him.

While boasting of the boom in the steel trade, why omit all reference to that of coffins. A single Pennsylvania corporation has shipped two thousand of these to the Philippines.

Look out for squalls when the "end-of-the-century" controversy reaches Kentucky.

Headache may be called a woman's ailment. Some men suffer from it. But almost all women have to endure its pain with each recurring month. This fact points at once to the intimate relation between the health of the delicate womanly organs, and the general health of the whole body. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription banishes headache by banishing its cause. It cures the diseases which irritate the delicate womanly organs, fret the nerves and waste the strength. It increases the vitality and builds up the nervous system. "Favorite Prescription" contains no opium, cocaine or other narcotic.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG AND SICK WOMEN WELL.

SUMMONS.

In the Circuit Court of the State of Oregon for the County of Lane.
Gertrude M. Thomas, Plaintiff, vs.
Harvey S. Thomas, Defendant.
IN THE NAME OF THE STATE OF Oregon, you are hereby required to appear and answer the complaint filed against you in the above entitled Court on or before the 17th day of March, 1900, and if you fail to answer, a decree against you dissolving the bonds of matrimony now existing between plaintiff and defendant, and also that plaintiff's name be changed from Gertrude M. Thomas to her maiden name, Gertrude M. Davidson, and such other relief as to the Court may seem equitable. This summons shall be by order of said Court, published for six consecutive weeks, and the first publication thereof is in the issue of the Eugene Daily Guard of January 18th, 1900. And the date of the order of publication of this summons is the 13th day of January, 1900.

This summons is published in the Eugene Daily Guard by order of Hon. E. O. Potter, Judge of the County Court of Lane County, Oregon, made in chambers the 15th day of January, 1900.

E. K. SKIPWORTH, Attorney for Plaintiff.

NOTICE TO CREDITORS.

Notice is hereby given that the said signed has been appointed by the County Court of Lane County, Oregon, administrator of the estate of E. J. Simmons, deceased. All persons having claims against said estate are notified to present the same to me with the proper vouchers at Eugene, Oregon, within six months from the first publication of this notice.

Dated November 28, 1899.
ALMON M. BECKWITH, Administrator.

OPPORTUNITY.

Let her not pass, but grasp her while you may. Today is yours; tomorrow may not be. And who knows what his time must pay? The bitter penalty. Do we not see how swift the months and years are slipping by? Wherein life's battle must be fought and won? How can we waste a moment, you and I, when so much lies before us yet undone? Who might have been well past beyond our ken if we neglect her, for on golden wings she quickly leaves us desolate and bring. Our faults and failings only sorrow bring. —Good Housekeeping.

IN THE APPLE ORCHARD.

How a Professor Made Love and a Mistake at the Same Time.

Fedora, in her long, white apron and big sun hat, color box and palette in hand, strolled out into the orchard and sat down under the shade of an apple tree. A little breeze stirred the branches, and the sunlight gleamed on her hair and face, and countless seeds of love drifted from limb to limb, and the professor's heart was stirred.

He looked at her with interest and admiration. She looked at him with a sudden inspiration. She felt a glow from her box and a shadowy frown on her face. She looked at him with a sudden inspiration. She felt a glow from her box and a shadowy frown on her face. She looked at him with a sudden inspiration. She felt a glow from her box and a shadowy frown on her face.

"If you are too busy," he began, looking down at her, a little dubiously. "Oh, no," she broke in quickly, smiling up at him as she spoke. "I am never busy." Fedora smiled and looked at her with a sudden inspiration. She felt a glow from her box and a shadowy frown on her face.

"Charming," returned Fedora, surveying him with a smile. It had suddenly dawned upon her that the professor was a singularly good looking man to be so old—almost 40. And in spite of his two-score years she found herself looking with approval, almost admiration, into his deep, clear eyes, above which the thick masses of brown hair waved back from an intellectual forehead. (All professors have intellectual foreheads.)

"I don't like to interrupt you," he said, with a doubtful glance at the impatient sketch and Fedora's small paint stained fingers, "but there is something I wanted to say," he went on, tugging at his watch chain. "Really?" She gave a little cough and turned her eyes expectantly upon him.

"It's—it's important," faltered the professor awkwardly, meeting her gaze. Fedora broke into a little soft laugh, and two dimples came into her face. "What's the matter?" he said, looking at her in astonishment, a suspicion arising in his mind that he was being treated with unnecessary levity.

"You looked so—so serious," she replied, with such a charming little grimace and a look so profoundly innocent that the professor immediately dismissed his suspicion as unworthy. "If you don't mind, though," he pursued, a little uneasily, his eyes on her face, "I would rather you would not—that you would be a little serious."

"Yes, certainly," assented Fedora, with alacrity, pulling a straight face, but with a glimmer of a smile showing about her mouth. Then the professor cleared his throat and went on with a slight hesitation:

"I have a proposition. He stopped short and looked at her in a helpless sort of way. "Ah, I see!" she exclaimed, with a merry laugh. "And you want the—hypothetical?"

"Precisely so," returned the professor, his face brightening. He thought that his task would not be a difficult one with such an appreciative young woman.

"And now to the point," he continued, giving her a serious look. "A point indicates mere position and has no magnitude," interposed Fedora flippantly.

"I suppose not," replied the professor with slight sternness. "But it is not a point in geometry this time," he concluded, the glint of a smile hovering about his lips, his voice calm.

"Oh!" exclaimed the girl with wide eyes, as she folded both hands in her lap and fixed upon him a look of grave attention.

He shifted his position a little, pulled at a tuft of grass, then looked across at her with sudden resolution and poise. "Suppose—that a man—"

The professor stopped short and cleared his throat again in a disconnected sort of way.

Fedora met his gaze with a mischievous smile and chewed the end of her long paint brush.

"Well?" she said, dropping her chin into one small hand.

"That a man is—"

"Yes?"

"Well—in love, you know," he blurted.

WOOD WANTED.

Bids will be received at the office of the secretary of the board of regents until Saturday, February 3, 1900, at 12 o'clock M. to cut and deliver to the University of Oregon on or before August 15, 1900:

300 cords big body fir, 4 feet.
200 cords grub oak, 4 feet not less than 3 inches nor more than 10 inches in diameter.

JOSHUA J. WALTON, Secretary.

REPAIRING TROLLEY WIRE.

Each road has two or three trouble wagons, one at each car shed. The horses are trained like those of the fire department. The crews are always in readiness. Along the line, at intervals of a few blocks, are signal boxes. When there is trouble along the line, an alarm is turned in, and the wagon, manned by skilled electricians and wire repairers, hastens to the scene. There are 24 of these wagons, manned by nearly 100 men.—St. Louis Post Dispatch.

Having a Great Run on Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

Manager Martio, of the Pierson drug store, informs us that he is having a great run on Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He sells five bottles of that medicine to one of any other kind, and it gives great satisfaction. In these days of the grippe there is nothing like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy to stop the cough, heal up the sore throat and lungs and give relief within a very short time. The sales are growing, and all who try it are pleased with its prompt action.—South Chicago Daily Calumet. For sale by W. L. DeLano.
