SCIENCE OF DREAMS.

Results of a Series of Experiments by a German Professor.

Sleep is not "the brother of death," as the poets have said from Homer to Shelley; but, on the contrary, "sleep is the brother of life." So Professor Baschide asserts, who, in an article in the Naturwissenschaften Rundschau, gives an account of his "experiments upon 36 dreamers." His subjects were of various ages, from 1 year to 50 years.

In some cases his observations were continued during the whole night and in others for a great part of the night. He watched and recorded every change of physiognomy, every movement of the limbs and every speech or sound uttered by the unconscious dreamers. The depth of the sleep was also carefully measured, while from time to time the dreamers were awakened, but without their own perception that the awakening was intentional.

The professor obtained, as he writes at length, the following results: (1) We dream throughout the whole of our sleep, even in that deepest sleep which we imagine to be "dreamless." (2) There is an intimate connection between the depth of our sleep and the character of our dreams. The deeper the sleep the further back travels the retrospect into the past experiences of life and also the more remote are the contents of the dream from reality. In a light sleep, on the contrary, the subject of the dream relates to the experiences and excitements of the day and has a character of probability. (3) In a comatose sleep the professor thinks there may perhaps be no dreaming. (4) Persons who assert that they do not dream "are the victims of physical delusion." (5) Dreams of a moderate character remain longest in the memory. The wilder the dream the sooner it is forgotten.—London News.

THE STONE OF GRATITUDE.

An Old Roman Legend That Treats of the Topaz.

The topaz is called the stone of gratitude, and the old Roman books record the following legend from which the stone derives this attribute:

The blind Emperor Theodosius used to hang a brazen god before his palace gates and sit beside it on certain days, hearing and putting to rights the grievances of any of his subjects. Those who wished for his advice and help had but to sound the gong, and immediately admission into the presence of Caesar was obtained.

One day a great snake crept up to the gate and struck the brazen god with her coils, and Theodosius gave orders that no one should molest the creature and bade her tell him her wish. The snake bent her crest lowly in homage and straightaway told the following tale:

Her nest was at the base of the gateway tower, and while she had gone to find food for her young brood a strange beast covered with sharp needles had invaded her home, killed the nestlings and now held possession of the little dwelling. Would Caesar grant her justice?

The emperor gave orders for the porcupine to be slain and the mother to be restored to her desolate nest. Night fell, and the sleeping world had forgotten the emperor's kindly deed, but with the early dawn a great serpent glided into the palace, up the steps and into the royal chamber and laid upon each of the emperor's closed eyelids a gleaming topaz. When Emperor Theodosius awoke, he found he was no longer blind, for the mother snake had paid her debt of gratitude.—Exchange.

Doesn't Travel For Fun.

Far from being the great autocrat, the arbiter of things of magnitude, the president of a railway system, he is great or small, is a dealer in trifles, with a consideration for everything. Every accident, large or small; every occurrence by which the road is to lose a dollar or to make a dollar, comes to the notice of the president. The successful head of a railroad is the one who considers the details. He is the man who makes the profits, and he is the man who has to face the music at the directors' meeting.

When you see the bright, smooth running traveling palaces of the railway president trailing along behind the long string of passenger coaches, you can be safe in the opinion that the occupant has not the softest snap on earth. You can also rest assured that if he is a success in his sphere he is not traveling for fun.—Omaha World-Herald.

A Question In History.

Some strangers, apparently hailing from the far west, were looking at the statue of Robert Fulton, the inventor of the steamboat. Said one of them: "So this is the man who got up the steamboat, eh? Well, it only goes to show how a fellow can be mistaken. Now, out in Punkin Ridge we always thought St. Jones fixed up the first steamboat ever run, in the year 1873. The whole county was out to see the Nancy Ann pass the Ridge, and everybody about there said as how St. had surely made himself famous by building the first boat ever known to run."—Washington Times.

THE SILVER LAKE GRIZZLY.

A Daring Hunter Drove Him From His Den.

Lake County Hunter, March 29.

For years a grizzly bear, the last of the species in Lake county, has roamed the mountains by day and the valleys by night, in the vicinity of the Silver Lake country, in this county, leaving havoc on his trail among stock of the county.

Rewards have been offered and hundreds have sought his life. Many have found him but his terrible size and ferocious appearance had always intimidated hunters into retreat. He foraged upon domestic animals, killing at his pleasure, and seemed to possess a charmed life.

On March 16th, Geo. Small, Wm. Vandervort and Jeff Howard rode the Silver Lake mountain range and located his trail. On the 17th the same parties accompanied by Earl Small, Wm. Ball and J. C. Conn went to pursue and capture him if possible.

On the 18th, the hunters found his different trails in the snow leading in the same direction, and it was thought by them that the trails would converge at a common point which proved to be the case, for by following his trail he was located in a cave in a ledge of rocks in the mountains about 20 miles south west of Silver Lake, near the headwaters of Silver Creek. Through a crevice in the rocks large enough to admit him he had entered by sliding down a shell rock which stood at about 45 degrees slant, and then by passing through a small cave to the right had entered the main cave through an entrance only large enough to admit his body.

The parties sought to smoke him out, but he refused to come forth. Then two of the party entered the first and small cave and jabbed him with a pole 12 or 15 feet long, which had the desired effect and with a terrible roar he started to pursue and the parties in the small cave, and they barely had time to retreat and take a possible position on the ledge above, from which a well directed shot made a good bear of him.

He proved to be a monster plantigrade genus bear, and a conservative estimate placed his weight at 1200 pounds. Others thought he would weigh considerably more. His skin, which was prime, weighed 60 pounds and was eight feet in length. He cut 4 inches of solid fat on the back. One of his claws—the middle one—measured 5 1/2 inches in length and one inch in width.

This monster has been the terror of the range in this section for 12 or 15 years, and has often been pursued by hunters, but always eluded their best efforts. His claws were as sharp as Damascus steel, and when he grabbed a bullock he tore him down easily.

No Right to Ugliness.

The woman who is lovely in face, form and temper will always have friends, but one who would be attractive must keep their health. If she is weak, sickly and all run down, she will be nervous and irritable. If she has constipation and kidney trouble, her impure blood will cause pimples, blotches, skin eruption and a wretched complexion. Electric Bitters is the best medicine in the world to regulate stomach, liver and kidneys and purify the blood. It gives strong nerves, bright eyes, smooth, velvety skin, rich complexion. It will make a good looking charming woman of a run down invalid. Only 50 cents at W. L. DeLano's drug store.
