Sothern's Recitation.
Sir Edward Russell knew E. A. Sothern, the actor, intimately and in his book, "That Reminds Me," tells many stories of him.
He was dining at Portsmouth or somewhere at a regimental mess to which the officers had asked him with every show of the highest admiration and with no appearance of social superiority. After dinner, as the party sat at wine, one of the officers asked Sothern to give them a recitation. Now, Sothern abominated that kind of thing. He wouldn't tolerate being treated as an entertainer when he was by way of being treated as a gentleman. He coldly declined. They pressed him. He hotly declined. Still they pressed him. He expressed his feelings. Perhaps the officers were a little affected by wine. At all events they persisted. They would take no denial.
At last he said in a manner which showed that he was nettled, but yet yielding: "Well, if you won't let me off I must. I'll give you the dinner scene from 'David Garrick.'"
He did. He had never acted it better. They were delighted until, springing to his feet, he made his wild, tipsy exit, just as he did on the stage, and dragged the cloth off the table and with it all the regiment's prized desert china and decanters and glasses, etc. Great was the smash. The actor did not wait to be applauded or to improve the occasion. The lesson was, indeed, a rough one, and probably only a man with some roughness in his darling humor would have given it, but it was quite deserved.

How Hard Bees Work.
Darwin after close observation found that a bee would often visit as many as 27 flowers in the course of a minute, though with other plants in which the honey was difficult to extract the average would be as low as seven. Striking a mean between these two figures, one may say that an ordinary working bee visits 15 flowers a minute, or 900 an hour. Considering the late hours to which a bee works, it is probably no exaggeration to say that it is busy for eight hours a day, allowing for intervals of rest. This would make it visit 7,200 flowers a day, or 648,000 in a period of six months.
Mr. A. S. Wilson in a recent paper showed the enormous amount of labor gone through by bees in making even a small quantity of honey. He found that approximately 125 heads of red clover yield 15 grains of sugar, or 125,000 heads about two pounds. As each head contains some 60 florets, it follows that 7,500,000 distinct flower tubes must be sucked in order to obtain two pounds of sugar. Now, honey contains, roughly speaking, 75 per cent of sugar; therefore the bees must make, in round numbers, 2,500,000 visits for one pound of honey.

Question Is Unanswered.
A certain grocer on the hill has for some days been looking for the owner of a voice that claimed his attention at the telephone one busy morning. When he finds the man, the meeting will furnish material for an interesting item, and the following dialogue explains itself:
The Voice—Hello, there! Is that you, Charles?
Grocer—Yes.
The Voice—Have you any salt fish?
Grocer—Yes.
The Voice—Is it fresh?
Grocer—Yes; it's in this morning.
The Voice—Cod or pollock?
Grocer—Got both. Which do you want?
The Voice—Well, I don't know. Is the pollock good and dry?
Grocer—Yes.
The Voice—Well, why don't you give it a drink, then?
At this point the grocer brought the colloquy to a sudden termination with a remark that would be out of place in polite society and therefore unfit for publication.—Portland (Or.) Argus.

Mice as Food in China.
The first thing which strikes the traveler in China upon his entrance into any of the many cities of the Celestial empire is the strings of dried mice which hang from the roofs of the houses suspended by their tails, just as sausages are hung in front of butcher shops in France.
The Chinese hunt these mice with a long, sharp pointed knife, which they plunge into the animals' throats. Then the mice are suspended by the tails until the blood has dripped out, when they are skinned, drawn and smoked.
Another favorite dish with the Chinese is dogs' feet. The feet of black dogs are considered more of a delicacy than those of any other color, and white dogs are rejected as being tasteless. Dogs' feet, prepared in a special manner, is looked upon as a repast fit for a king.

Going to Bed in India.
Going to bed in India is a very different process from going to bed at home. To begin with, it is a far less formal process. There is no shutting of the door, no cutting yourself off from the outer world, no going up stairs and finally no getting into bed. You merely lie down on your bed, which, with its bedding, is so simple as to be worth describing. The bed is a wooden frame with webbing laced across it, and each bed has a thin cotton mattress. Over this one sheet is spread, and two pillows go to each bed. That's all—Scottish American.

It Still Worked.
"No," she answered coldly, "I can't marry a man who carries a rabbit's foot for luck."
For a moment he contemplated her in intense silence, but only for a moment. "Who," he exclaimed, "now can doubt the efficacy of the rabbit's foot after this?"
Then he left her forever, pausing only to laugh the wild, mirthless laugh which was suitable to the occasion.—Detroit Journal.

THE REGENT DIAMOND.
It is acknowledged the Most Perfect Brilliant in Existence.
The "Pitt" (or "Regent," as it was afterward called) is the most perfect brilliant in existence, and its history is also very remarkable. It is said to have been found by a slave in the Particular mines in 1701, who to retain his treasure cut a hole in the calf of his leg, in which he concealed it, although it is more probable he secreted it among the bandages. The slave escaped to the coast with his find, where he encountered an English skipper, whom he made his confidant, offering, indeed, to bestow upon him the stone in return for his liberty. The man, apparently consenting to the slave's proposal, took him out to sea and when there drowned him, after obtaining possession of the diamond. Disposing of the gem to a diamond merchant for £1,000, it is said the man afterward hanged himself in a fit of remorse.
Mr. Pitt, governor of Fort St. George and great-grandfather of the illustrious William Pitt, became the next possessor of this valuable stone, weighing 410 carats, for £20,000. He sent it to London, where he had it very skillfully cut at a cost of £5,000, the process occupying two years. Pitt appears to have found his diamond no very enviable possession, for, after refuting the calumnies of his enemies, who had charged him with having obtained it by unfair means, he was so haunted by the fear of being robbed that he never slept two nights consecutively under the same roof, never gave notice of his arrival in or departure from town and went about mysteriously disguised. He must necessarily have felt greatly relieved when he parted with the diamond to the Duc d'Orleans, regent during the minority of Louis XV, king of France, in 1717 for the sum of £135,000.—Chambers' Journal.

MINERS AND MORPHINE.
A Necessary Custom Which Is Not Pleasant to Contemplate.
"When I was in the northwest," said a gentleman with some money invested in mines, "I employed a prospector to go out into the mountains looking for properties which had been recommended to me. One day he was to have gone from our camp over into a very rough and rocky district, but when evening came he reported that he hadn't made the trip.
"Why not?" I inquired.
"Because I didn't have my morphine with me," he responded in a very matter of fact manner.
"Morphine?" said I in astonishment. "What has that got to do with it? You are not a morphine fiend, are you?"
"Not as much of a one as you are a tenderfoot," he laughed and proceeded to inform me that every prospector who knew his business always carried with him enough morphine to kill a man easily and that he did so in order to end himself quickly in case of an accident which would disable him far away from assistance. There were many instances of prospectors falling over cliffs and crippling themselves or breaking a leg in a hole among the rocks or rendering themselves helpless in some other way, and death was sure to follow by starvation or freezing or in some sections by being devoured by wolves or other wild animals. In order to prevent such a horrible death as any of these the prospector stilled matters by always carrying a little packet of morphine, which not only quieted the pain of the hurt he had sustained, but put him to sleep pleasantly to wake no more on earth. It struck me at first as uncanny, not to say wicked, but I got over that feeling after a narrow escape or two, and I carried my little tin box just like a veteran would."
—Washington Star.

He Knew Human Nature.
Three young men were walking up Riverside drive the other morning, when a gamy looking race horse jogged by, drawing a natty trotting rig.
"Isn't that a capital animal?" exclaimed one of the young men in cheery, admiring tones, pausing to gaze at the trotter.
"The driver's eye sparkled, and his chest expanded. He had heard the compliment. Wheeling his horse around, he brought it alongside the pavement.
"Wouldn't you like to try a brush behind him?" he said courteously.
In a jiffy the young man was seated in the buggy, and the two were disappearing down the drive at a pace that justified the compliment of the pedestrian. His companions watched him enviously. Then one of them said:
"Bill is a judge of horseflesh."
"And an artist on human nature," added the other. "I've seen him do that before."—New York Mail and Express.

He Missed His Slippers.
When a young man, the late John Lewis, R. A., went to India and Egypt and was away about 18 years. When he returned to his mother's house in Portland place, he almost immediately pulled off his boots and commenced to hunt about at one end of the parlor fender and seemed terribly put about. His mother of course asked him anxiously what he wanted.
"My slippers," said he. "When I went away, I left them just down there. Now, where are they?"—Tit-Bits.

Well Regulated Parents.
"Our little Dick makes very clever conundrums—really very clever."
"Can you guess them?"
"Oh, we never dare do that. Little Dick wants to tell the answers himself."—Indianapolis Journal.

Corvallis Times: It is given out that a mill for the manufacture of plow beams, spokes, hubs, axle-handles, and other material for agricultural implements and machinery, is to be operated in Corvallis. The output is to be made from Oregon hard wood. Mr. Strong, of the saw mill, and others are behind the scheme. A new building for housing the establishment is now in course of erection on the lots just south of the saw mill. The building is 48x30, two stories in height. A portion of the machinery comes from the S P railroad station. To this plant is to be added new machinery, yet to be purchased.
Robbed the Grave.
A startling incident, of which Mr. John Oliver, of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: "I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite—gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately a friend advised trying Electric Balm, and to my great joy and surprise, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they saved my life, and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50 cts, guaranteed, at W L DeLano's drug store.

DIED.—Mrs C A Rhea, wife of C A Rhea, president of the First National Bank of Heppner, Marrow county, died at that place Saturday, May 12, aged 62 years. Mrs Rhea was one of the pioneer women of Eastern Oregon, having settled with her husband, on Rhea Creek in 1868. She was the first white woman on that creek. She was born at Kirksville, Mo., and came to Oregon with her parents in 1865, settling in Lane county, northward of Eugene. Mrs Rhea's maiden name was Emeline S Adkins, and she was the mother of eight children, all now living. She lived on the old homestead on Rhea Creek until two years ago, when the family established a home in Heppner.

The ancients believed that rheumatism was the work of a demon within a man. Any one who has had an attack of sciatic or inflammatory rheumatism will agree that the infliction is demonic enough to warrant the belief. It has never been claimed that Chamberlain's Pain Balm would cast out demons, but it will cure rheumatism, and hundreds bear testimony to the truth of this statement. One application relieves the pain, and this quick relief which it affords is alone worth many times its cost. For sale by W L DeLano.
