HIS VISIT TO VESUVIUS.
And What He Thought as He Gazed Into the fiery Pit.
An American who detests sight-seeing upon principle loafed for six weeks at Sorrento without stirring in the direction of places most travelers would have thought it criminal to omit. His only dread was the cross questioning of kind friends when he got home. To confess that he had deliberately staid away from all those celebrated spots of interest would bring down no end of scorn and denunciation upon him. But sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof, and the American resolved to trust to inspiration to get him out of such possible scrapes. The first person he met after leaving Sorrento was an American woman on the train, and the first thing she wanted to know was if he had climbed Vesuvius.
"I did," said the American without a quiver.
"Oh, tell me all about it!" cried the woman. "How interesting it must have been! My husband never would let me go up, but I'd just love to hear your experience."
The American, having heard the whole story many, many times, plunged into it with much detail. He described the long drive from Naples to the foot of the mountain and the steep-ness of the inclined railway and the way the women of the party squealed and all the rest of it. From time to time the woman interrupted with some searching question, but so well did he know his lines that never once did she catch him napping. At last, after a realistic account of how, after leaving the train he had plunged his way on foot through the hot, powdery lava to the crater's very edge, the American paused for breath.
"And what," asked the woman,
"were your sensations as you gazed down into that fiery pit?"
"Madam," said the American, "I thought of the fate that awaited all fiars."—New York Sun.

DANGEROUS MAN EATERS.
The African Crocodile is a Swift, Silent and Fatal Foe.
"The most dangerous foes we have to meet on the Congo," says Stanley, "are the crocodile, the hippopotamus and the buffalo. On my last visit to the Congo three of my men were killed by crocodiles, one by a hippopotamus and one by a buffalo. There are herds of hippopotamuses along the Congo and its tributaries and thousands of crocodiles. The latter are the worst foes, because they are so silent and so swift.
You see a man bathing in the river.
He is standing near the shore, leaning back on his hands, laughing in the keen enjoyment of his bath. Suddenly he falls over, and you see him no more.
A crocodile has approached unseen, has struck him a blow with its tail and seized him instantly.
"Or it may be that the man is swimming. He is totally unconscious of danger. There is nothing to stir a tremor of apprehension, but there in deep water, under the shadow of that rock or hidden beneath the shelter of the trees yonder, is a huge crocodile.
It has spotted the swimmer and is watching its opportunity. The swimmer approaches. He is within striking distance. Stealthily, silently, unper-ceived, the creature makes for its prey.
The man knows nothing until he is seized by the leg and dragged under, and he knows no more. A bubble or two indicate the place where he has gone down, and that is all."

One of Harrison's Jokes.
"Benjamin Harrison once played a mean trick on me at Miami university," said William F. Fishback. "We boarded with a widow in Oxford, and there came to be a discontent among the boys about the food not being sufficiently generous in supply. A meeting was held in Harrison's room to arrange a formal protest. Lots were cast as to who should present the case at the breakfast table. The ballot box was stuffed, and I was elected. I spoke at the breakfast table and stated that the boys objected to paying so much for so scant a menu. I expected to be supported by the others.
"Benjamin Harrison spoke and, to my dismay, said: 'We don't know how Mr. Fishback has been living at home —he may have been a pampered son of luxury—but as for the rest of us, we have no complaint to make.'
"And that disposition of fun and humor never left Benjamin Harrison."

Warmth of Birds' Blood.
The blood of birds offers some data for thought not found in the blood of any other class of animals. The blood corpuscles are shaped differently, being oval instead of round. But this is not the difference to which I refer.
Birds' blood is several degrees warmer than that of other animals. To man such a temperature of the blood as birds possess would be a fever. This high temperature causes molecular changes in the tissues and brain to take place more rapidly, which would cause the consumption of more food, and brain activity would be more intense, so that for the same amount of work a smaller brain would meet all the requirements, which at a lower temperature would require one of greater size.

Where Genius Comes In.

high degree of intellectuality to be able to write poetry?

The Disappointed One.
A severe and elderly woman passed by with one of her kind. We caught only this fragment: "It seems to me eneum."—Boston Journal.

An Epidemic of Whooping Cough.
Last winter during an epidemic of whooping cough my children contracted the disease, having severe coughing spells. We had used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy very successfully for croup and naturally turned to it at that time and found it relieved the cough and effected a complete cure.—John E.
Clifford, Proprietor Norwood House, Norwood, N. Y. This remedy is for sale by W L DeLano.

artist looked listlessly at the children playing and nurses gossiping.
Suddenly he pulled the check string.
Why should he be mewed up in the coupe? Why had he not ordered his saddle horse? Ah, only because he had not known what he was doing or saying since yesterday. This was no day to sit cooped up in a carriage. At least he could walk. The exercise would be a relief. Telling his man to await him at the entrance to the Bois, Henri strode into a shady path that bespoke solitude and wandered on, while repeating in his mind over and over again the scene of yesterday. At last a sense of weariness caused him to rest on a bench. There he sat brooding and absorbed till his reveries were broken by the voices of children.
Abstractedly Duval looked up and watched them at their play—a boy of some 8 years and a girl of perhaps two years younger. Gradually his mood changed, and he became conscious of the radiance of the day, the deep blue sky and the autumn tints that glinted and glowed in the sunlight. The air was as wine to his thirsty lungs, and life grew full of possibilities again, and his thoughts took a new course. Why could he not paint a soul as well as a body? He would win Blanche yet. He would not make any effort to see her now, but would work and wait. His life should prove his right to win her love. He would paint a picture that even she would praise. A hundred subjects presented themselves to his busy brain as he sat there watching those two children who stopped in their play and were crossing the roadway. Hand in hand they came, the boy leading his younger companion, now running, now halting, to avoid a passing carriage, until they reached a graveled footpath. There they lingered again, playing on the grass bordering the path. Both had on blue aprons and little wooden shoes. They were without hats and typical children of the poor. Presently, quite unconsciously, the little girl fell into a pose beneath a slender tree whose leaves autumn had turned with Midas' touch to pure gold.
The breeze blew her short curls about her forehead; her apron was full of colored leaves the boy had thrown to her. Just then a rustling above caused her to look up, and a shower of golden leaves descended upon her dark curls, blue apron and little sabots.
"Ah, sweet child Danee," cried Duval, "thou art an inspiration!" A year of work brought forth the picture that made him famous. It was a simple subject—a child with wind tossed locks holding open her blue apron to catch the golden shower of leaves sent dancing down upon her by the autumn wind.
The public raved over the beauty of the child's eager, upturned face, the blue of her sky and the gold of the trees, but Blanche read the message of the soul in the innocent eyes and gave her heart into the keeping of the artist who had painted "A Little Danee in Sabots."—Exchange.

The Future Population of Siberia.
This is a question upon which much has been said and written, some writers taking the stand that Siberia is to have a population of 60,000,000 or 80, 000,000 within the next 100 years, while others hold this view is a gross exaggeration.
A writer of the latter belief, Arminius Vambury, using The Pall Mall Magazine as a medium, has this to say on the subject: "With regard to the future colonization of this outlying portion of the empire of the czar, there is no doubt that an unmistakable gain will be derived, for the growth of the population in Siberia, where an area of 13,400,000 square miles is inhabited by only 7,100,000 souls and where the extraordinary wealth in minerals, woods and arable land still awaits exploitation, will certainly proceed with greater strides than heretofore.
"Without giving implicit faith to Russian official statistical data, it may fairly be assumed that owing to the particular care the government has always taken to further colonization, the eminently agricultural Russian will probably avail himself of the offered facilities and that the population in the hitherto empty lands will considerably increase. It may be objected that Russia, the most thinly populated country in Europe, will hardly find a surplus to provide for the newly opened territory; but it must be borne in mind that the Russian peasant is noted for his migratory propensities."

Past and Present Acting.
With regard to the art of acting, who shall say whether it is better or worse today than it was 60 or 100 years ago?
"The old playgoer" always tells us that it was better. But is not "old playgoer" simply the young playgoer grown old, and with a jaundiced desire never to have those first impressions disturbed? If one talks of the actor of today, the playgoer of a past generation speaks of Macready, Charles Kean and Phelps.
People living in the times of those three great actors would surely bark back to the Kembles and Mrs. Siddons, and when these great artists were in their prime they no doubt underwent disparagement at the hands of veterans who had sunned themselves in the glory of Garrick. But Pope, friend and admirer of Garrick as he was, lauded Betterton to the skies. "I ought to tell you at the same time," he candily admits, "that in Betterton's time the older sort of people talked of Hart being his superior, just as we do of Betterton being his now."

Robbed the Grave.
A startling incident, of which Mr.
John Oliver, of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows:
"I was in a most dreadful condition.
My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite—gradually growing weaker day by day.
Three physicians had given me up.
Fortunately a friend advised trying Electric Bitters, and to my great joy and surprise, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they saved my life, and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50 cts, guaranteed, at W L DeLano's drug store.

Very Unusual
It is very unusual for a regular physician of good reputation to publicly endorse a proprietary remedy. We have often heard of cases where doctors have secretly prescribed Acker's English Remedy, but it is most gratifying to receive the following voluntary letter from C. F. Smith, M. D., the most successful physician of Olean, N. Y.
"Messrs. W. H. Hooker & Co., New York City: I wish to add my professional testimony to the value of your English preparation known as Acker's English Remedy for Asthma, etc. In several instances, after I have tried my utmost to give even relief, I have prescribed your remedy, and it has acted almost like a miracle, not only relieving, but permanently curing every one of the patients. I endorse the preparation as one of the most valuable additions to the practice of medicine."
Such a frank endorsement as the above is phenomenal. Coming from so distinguished a member of the medical profession, it carries with it an assurance which the public will be sore to avail themselves of. It recommendations like this which make it possible to give the broad guarantee that is a part of every sale of Acker's English Remedy for Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronchitis and Consumption. It must either do all that is claimed for it, or your money will be refunded. Do you know of any other medicine sold on those terms? Do you know of any other medicines which prominent doctors regularly prescribe in their own practice as being better than prescriptions they write themselves?
These facts are well worth considering.
