A NEWSPAPER EPOCH.

Fifty-nine years ago, April 10, the New York Tribune issued its first number. The anniversary was observed last week, says Newspaperdom.

Horace Greeley's No. 1 was of only four pages, each about half the size of the present seven-column page. Its birthplace was the site of the present home of the Tribune.

The Tribune's career spans a period of marvelous development in the means of communication that have done so much for the newspaper press. In 1841 there was no telegraphic communication with any part of the world. Only one line of railway was in operation between New York and Washington, and that was owned by three different companies. The journey that now requires but six hours then took fifteen hours to accomplish. Mails and passengers were carried to and from Albany, the state capital, by stage coaches. From twenty to thirty days were consumed in the voyage across the ocean, in a packet ship, so news from the old world was at least twenty days old when announced through the extras that were immediately issued upon the receipt of important information from the other side.

No one needs to be reminded of the enormous changes effected in the single matter of newsgathering, during these nearly three score years, through means of the telegraph, cable, railway, ocean steamship and telephone, and in delivery by the automobile.

COMMENDED TO THE "PROSPERITY" EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN.

R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review of Trade, of New York, May 30, says:

"Business is not what it was a year ago, but men do not agree on defining the difference. The working forces are now decreasing, work stopping to relieve excessive output in paper, cotton, wool, leather, and some forms of steel, while prices are suddenly reduced in lead, wire and nails. All this seems to some 'merely' spring dullness," others think it the "beginning of reaction."

"The remedy for one difficulty does not fix the other, and there is more need than usual for close attention to the meaning of events."

In place of the wild speculation in securities which swelled exchanges a year ago, there has come such liquidation that twenty preferred industrial stocks have sold this week at prices averaging $83.14 per share, though the same stocks sold in April last year for $99.66 per share, and twenty common have sold this week for $38.49, which sold last year at $76.99, double the price.

The Boston Transcript is responsible for the story that ex-President Cleveland avoids Washington City as if he had a hatred of the place. On his trips south he ordinarily passes through the national capital two or three times a year, but habitually refuses to go anywhere about the city, remaining in the Union depot or in his private car while waiting for an outgoing train. Perhaps he is afraid that if he goes out he would come in contact with some fractions of congress.

Notwithstanding Admiral Dewey's very frank offer to take the presidency on trial and run it in battleship style, slick and clean, was treated with quasi contempt, the Admiral is swinging about the circle in a quiet kind of way. His last appearance, with his wife, was at Columbus, Ohio. The telegraph does not bring any account of his reiterating the offer to do the presidency job.

The battleship Kentucky is the recipient of a six thousand dollar silver service from the citizens of Louisville on behalf of the bourbon state. Of course envy will prompt residents of other commonwealths to suggest that a silver keg, with a faucet of kind, should hold a prominent place in the service.

Swift & Co., the big meat firm of Chicago, send out men with electric automobiles to advertise their meats, lard, cotonet, etc. They give exhibitions with the electric wagons in towns and cities, and have handsome displays of their meat products.

Bryan's nomination has been ordered by the unanimous vote of every convention that has thus far been held. The tribune of the people will be nominated by acclamation.

Affection

Breathes from children as fragrance from flowers. The little lips are always puckered to give or take a kiss. In homes where there are children, love reaches its fairest and sweetest proportions. In childless homes the kiss of wife and husband grows formal, and presently is neglected; the springs of love in the heart become choked for want of use and exercise. Childlessness is a great sorrow to many women. It is like a curse from Nature, who bids all creatures to be fruitful. It is not a curse but a misfortune. Often the conditions which cause childlessness are removable. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has brought joy to many a woman by giving her the happiness of motherhood. It gives to the woman organs vigor and vitality, removes local obstructions, and practically does away with the pains and pangs of maternity.

Story of a Slave.

To be bound hand and foot for years by the chains of disease is the worst form of slavery. George D Williams, of Manchester, Mich., tells how such a slave was made free. He says: "My wife has been so helpless for five years that she could not turn over in bed alone. After using two bottles of Electric Bitters she is wonderfully improved, and able to do her own work." This supreme remedy for female diseases quickly cures nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, headache, backache, fainting and dizzy spells. This miracle working medicine is a godsend to weak, stinky, run down people. Every bottle guaranteed. Only 50 cents. Sold by W. L. DeLano, druggist.

SAVING AN OLD PAINTING.

Ingenious Method by Which It Was Transferred to New Canvas. "Did you ever hear of transferring an old oil painting to a new canvas?" said a well known art connoisseur of this city. "One would declare at first blush that the thing was absolutely impossible, but I saw it done with a picture over eight feet square, and the operation was a perfect success. The painting to which I refer had been a fine example of the early Italian school, but it had lain forgotten in a garret for many years and had become so incrustated with dirt and grime that it was impossible to distinguish any of the details. Ordinarily it could have been cleaned without trouble, but the damp and mold of two centuries had rotted the canvas until it was ready to fall apart at a touch, and scrubbing was, of course, out of the question.

"That was the condition of things when it was taken in hand by an expert restorer from Belgium who happened to be in the city. The first thing he did was to glue a huge sheet of thick manila paper firmly to the face of the picture. He then turned it over carefully and picked off every particle of the old decaying paint itself. It was a busy job and required no end of patience, but the last thread was finally removed, and nothing was left but the fragile shell of pigment. That he covered with the strongest fish glue, and a new sheet of canvas was spread over it and pressed down.

"In a few hours it was perfectly dry, and the painting was as firmly attached to its new foundation as if it had been there from the start. Nothing then remained but to take off the manila paper, which was readily done with hot water. After that the surface was thoroughly cleaned, and the picture is now almost as bright and clear as it was when it left the painter's easel. The owner could hardly believe his eyes. It seemed to him that a veritable miracle had been accomplished."

ANATOMY IN RHYME.

An Easy Way to Memorize the Membranes of the Body. A recent writer in an Australian paper teaches anatomy in verse. The rhymes are not all perfect, but they "will serve."

How many bones in the human face? Fourteen, when they are all in place. How many bones in the human head? Eight, my child, as I've often said. How many bones in the human spine? Twenty-four, like a clustering vine. How many bones in the human chest? Twenty-four ribs and two of the rest. How many bones in the shoulder blade? Two in each one before, one behind. How many bones in the human arm? In each arm, one; two in each forearm. How many bones in the human wrist? Eight in each, if none is missed. How many bones in the palm of the hand? Five in each of every one's hand. How many bones in the human foot? Twenty-eight, and there are no more. And now, if you reckon the bones on a slate, They count, in a body, two hundred and eight. Then we have in the human hand, too, Teeth, upper and under, thirty and two. And now and then there's a bone, I think, That forms on a joint or to fill up a chink, A sesamoid bone, or wormian, we call, And now we may rest, for we've told them all. —Success.

England's Boy Choir.

Julian Ralph, writing of "The Choir Boys of England," in The Ladies' Home Journal, says: "Small boys are much preferred, for the reason that they develop into manhood later than big, stalwart children, for it is at the coming of manhood that their voices break and they are obliged to stop singing until their adult tones are reached—a matter of years. A boyish treble in as delicate as the bloom on a peach, and its possessor must lead an orderly and innocent life, which is why so many choirs are made up of boys taken from their homes and boarded and taught in church institutions. These, sometimes, are able to sing until they are 17 or 18 years of age, though between 14 and 15 is the usual period when their voices break."

Gold Lined Geese.

According to the United States consul at Chung-King, China, in the department called Yung-pel, Chih-I Ting, gold is found in abundance by washing in the valley near the city. The inhabitants of the neighborhood keep large flocks of geese to work the gold fields for them. When the geese are found to be very heavy, they are killed and their maws emptied of the gold contained therein. A flock of geese is sometimes worth a good deal of money, but geese dressed ready for eating are very cheap indeed—from 15 to 20 cents each.

Usurped a Right.

Professor John Snelling Popkin was professor of Greek at Harvard some years ago, and he was not without a nickname, which he accepted as a matter of course. From the students, but hearing it on one occasion from a man of dapper, jaunty, unacademic aspect, Professor Popkin exclaimed: "What right has that chap to call me 'Old Pop?' He isn't a student of Harvard college."

The Real Thing.

Last fall I sprained my left hip while handling some heavy boxes. The doctor I called on said at first it was a slight strain and would soon be well, but it grew worse and the doctor said I had rheumatism. It continued to grow worse and I could hardly get around to work. I went to a drug store and the druggist recommended me to try Chamberlain's Pain Balm. I tried it and one-half of a 50-cent bottle cured me entirely. I now recommend it to all my friends. F. A. Babcock, Erie, Pa. It is for sale by W. L. DeLano.
