An Epidemic of Whooping Cough

Last winter during an epidemic of whooping cough my children contracted the disease, having severe coughing spells. We had used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy very successfully for group and naturally turned to it at that time and found it relieved the cough and effected a complete cure.—John E. Clifford, Proprietor Norwood House, Norwood, N. Y. This remedy is for sale at W. L. DeLano.

The Colonel's Romance.

"Colonel," said the romantic girl, "tell me how you got that scar upon your left cheek. Oh, I just know it must be a thrilling story. Was it made by a bullet or a saber thrust? I prefer a saber thrust. It seems so much more like the knighthood of old. You can't see a bullet coming, and there is no way to escape it or combat it, but when your enemy rushes at you with his uplifted saber there is the possibility of parrying his blow and cutting him down. That seems much more manly, even if the victor in the fray does receive a wound or two, than to just be laid low or to lay the enemy low by a bullet that cannot be seen. There is no bravery in shooting a man, but there is something knightly in meeting another face to face with a sword. Your scar looks like one that was left by a gleaming blade, and I know that your enemy must at least have been rendered hors de combat. Tell me all about it, colonel—when it happened and how. I am so interested in war stories."

"Yes," he replied, "I agree with you fully about the sword and saber business. There isn't much bravery in shooting a fellow, and there is something knightly about standing up and thrusting and parrying with a blade. But I got this wound while acting as an innocent bystander at a Chicago strike riot. It was a brick."—Chicago Times-Herald.

The Soldier and His Heart.

Very few soldiers who have seen much service escape what is called battle heart.

The ordinary state of the heart in healthy people is one of irritability, but in the soldier of five or six years' service the irritability is so great that it constantly affects his temper.

The soldier wears such tight clothing that his heart has not room to beat freely, and the perpetual struggle to do its work under difficulties injures it. The soldier's trousers are tight at the waist. His coat is buttoned as tightly as possible and very often he squeezes himself with a belt.

Then when on the march his chest is compressed by the weight of his knapsack, canteen, gear coat and heavy cartridge belt.

If you watch a company of soldiers when they are doing a long march, you will observe that most of them have flushed faces, red ears, red noses, swollen necks—showing that the heart is greatly overtaxed. Some, on the other hand, are pale, which proves that their hearts are not equal to the work thrown on them.

When, after a very long march, the men have to deploy into fighting order, and perhaps rush a hill, a very large number break down altogether. Their overtaxed hearts never become really strong and healthy again.—Answers.

Cut Their Sentences Short.

Many people in every walk of life, and particularly traveling men, seem to have a craze for abbreviation. On almost every page of the hotel register may be found some unique freak of abbreviation.

Two abbreviations that have been noticed are "X. O." and "Z. O." Anywhere but in the residence column of a hotel register they would be very puzzling. Of course it is easy to understand that the "O." means Ohio, and there is but one town in that state that begins with "Z." Zanesville, and but one the name of which begins with "X." Xenia. It is easy to understand the abbreviations, and they save a lot of time and ink.

"I know it is not so easy to understand perhaps, but when 'Kansas' is written after it is easier. Another puzzling abbreviation is '10,' but when it is 'Chattanooga, 10,' it is not hard to read. Columbus is usually written 'Colo.' and Chicago 'Chgo.' The final 'h' in the old fashioned way of spelling Pittsburgh, which has been almost entirely dropped elsewhere, is usually used in the abbreviation which most Pittsburghers write ('Pgh.') nowadays.—Chicago Chronicle.

Peace at Any Price.

Two old ladies were next to each other in a station bus. One of them wished to have the window shut, the other to have it open; the conductor was called to decide the question. One said if it were open she would catch cold and die; the other said if it were shut she would die of apoplexy.

The conductor did not know what to do, when an old man, who had been sitting quiet in a corner, said:

"Open the window, friend; that will kill one of them. Then shut it, and we shall be rid of the other and have some peace."—London Answers.

More Than a Hint.

As a gentleman was having his luncheon in the coffee room of a small hotel he was much annoyed by another visitor, who during the whole meal stood with his back to the fire, warming himself and watching him partake of his repast.

"At length, unable to endure it any longer, he rang the bell and said: 'Waiter, kindly turn that gentleman round. I think he is done on that side.'"

The hint was taken.—London Standard.

Artful.

"Stupid fellow, that Bliggins," said one young man. "He's a natural diplomat."

"How did you find it out?"

"I asked him to lend me a dollar."

"And he got away from it?"

"No. He said he hadn't a dollar, but he'd lend me five. I might forget about $1. But he could remind me of $5."—Washington Star.

A Financial Star.

They haven't been married long, and they are as loyal and devoted a young couple as ever made the confidant bachelor search for a new argument against matrimony. She has pronounced and original ideas upon domestic economy, and in this and other ways she strives to make her husband's home a perfect Utopia.

There was a love lit smile upon her pretty face when hubby came home from the office the other evening.

"What is it, dear?" he asked, observing the glow of enthusiasm that shone through the soft, peach blown cheeks and sparkled in the Kohlmoor-like eyes.

"I made 15 cents today," said she, and her rosy lips parted in a prideful curve.

"That so, dear? How did that happen?"

"Why, I sold 9 cents' worth of mugs—and 3 cents' worth of bottles—and let me see?"

"Yes, that's 12 cents. Where does the other cent come in?"

"Oh, yes—yes—now I remember—an old pair of your trousers for the other penny."

No Napoleon of finance ever looked more satisfied or smiled with so much self complacency after a successful monetary deal than did this fair young wife when she had related her little commercial accomplishment. And she looked sorely grieved when he smiled audibly. It was really their first misunderstanding.—Detroit Free Press.

The Claqueurs.

The work of the "claqueurs" is not, as will be readily seen, intellectually of a very high order. The chief is supposed to have taken voluminous notes at the rehearsals of the play they are seeing performed, to have consulted with the manager, to have chatted with the author—in short, to have made a close study of the entire work on which his "brigade" is to be engaged. He is the spring of the claque. The men under his orders, scattered here and there under the chandelier, are merely parts of the machinery, and they would no more think of applauding on their own account than they would think of dying.

Once upon a time there was a daring claqueur who did not wait for the signal, but his short connection with the profession—he was immediately relieved of his faucon for breach of discipline—hardly entitles him to the honor of mention in the same company with eminent claqueurs. The part he played happened to be the only good scene in the whole play. His sense of art, unfortunately, was stronger than his idea of duty. Seized with uncontrollable enthusiasm, he, the only man of taste among the claque, turned the house ring with applause. He is now one of the most eminent dramatic critics in Paris.—Wide World.

The Great Seal of England.

The seal consists of a large mass of sterling silver, measuring about 6 1/2 inches in diameter by 1 1/2 inches in depth or thickness. It is in two parts, both smooth on the outer side, but elaborately engraved within. These two surfaces are impressed upon a lump of wax attached in an ingenious way to any document to which her majesty as sovereign gives her royal assent. The weight of the seal is 185 ounces. Each seal is engraved during the reign of the sovereign whose name it bears, and the collection presents a curious and accurate epitome of English history.

All lord chancellors have taken the greatest care of the seals in their charge and have contrived ingenious and elaborate devices for their safe custody. One of them in the reign of Charles II. actually slept with the seal under his pillow and by this loving precaution saved it from thieves who one night broke into his house and carried off the mace belonging to the house of lords and other valuable property.—Chambers' Journal.

He Doesn't Mean It.

When you hear a young man say, "I don't believe in a woman having anything to do but sit and read or manure her finger nails all day, I don't want my wife to be busy about anything," why, of course, you know that the young man is simply talking against time. He doesn't mean a word he says, and it is safe to warrant that he is the first man who would be bored to death by such a girl. This young man may like to fancy that he is a believer in such false sentiments, and perhaps he does believe in them for the moment of saying. But this way of protesting against the wave of energy which the girlhood of today is responding to, out of which perhaps may come salvation even to man. Or else, possibly, there is nothing more than sly method in his old school assertion.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

His Obstacles.

Harry—Did you ever undertake to write poetry?

Dick—I did once, and I got along fairly well too. The only trouble was that I couldn't rhyme very well, and I couldn't think of anything to write about. But I was all right with the capital letters at the beginning of the lines.—Boston Transcript.

Boarding House Plessantry.

"Will some one please chase the cow down this way?" said the funny boarder, who wanted some milk for his oatmeal.

"Here, Jane," said the landlady in a tone that was meant to be crushing, "take the cow down there where the calf is bawling."—Chicago News.

A Life And Death Fight.

Mr. W. A. Hines of Manchester, Ia., writing of his almost miraculous escape from death, says: "Exposure after measles induced serious lung trouble, which ended in consumption. I had frequent hemorrhages and coughed night and day. All my doctors said I must soon die. Then I began to use Dr. King's new Discovery for Consumption, which completely cured me. I would not be without it even if it cost $5.00 a bottle. Hundreds have used it on my recommendation and all say it never fails to cure Throat, Chest and Lung troubles." Regular size 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at W. L. DeLano's Drug store.
