He Certainly Was a Friend.

The stage was rolling along the canyon trail when suddenly the horses reared back on their haunches as a lone highwayman with a Winchester appeared on the scene.

"Step out of the horse, gentlemen, and hands up!" he ordered.

One by one they climbed out, with elevated hands.

The highwayman relieved the party and several times was forced to remind one nervous little man to keep his hand from his pocket.

"What's the matter with you?" he finally roared. "You make another move like that, and I'll pump the slugs in you!"

"Please let me," pleaded the little man as his hand again slid toward his pocket.

"Please let you?" roared the desperado. "Please let you perforate me? You're imposing on my generosity, sonny. Look out! Look out! Keep your wit away from that pocket, or by the Eternal—"

"But it won't hurt you!" protested the little man. "It won't hurt you at all! Stand just as you are now and keep your rifle leveled. There! That's it!"

And while the highwayman was recovering from his astonishment the little man had flashed his kodak and snapped the button.—Indianapolis Sun.

Love and Thrift.

The late Professor Shuttleworth of London was particularly fond of telling how, when he once acted as locum tenens in Devonshire, he had to proclaim the banns of marriage of a young yokel and a village maid. A fortnight later the young swain called at the professor's lodgings.

"You put up the banns for me," he said.

"Yes, I remember," replied Mr. Shuttleworth.

"Well," inquired the yokel, "has it got to go on?"

"What do you mean?" asked the professor. "Are you tired of the girl?"

"No," was the unexpected answer, "but I like her sister better."

"Oh, if the original girl doesn't mind, you can marry her sister."

"But should I have to be 'called' again?"

"Certainly, that's necessary," answered Mr. Shuttleworth.

"But should I have to pay again?"

"Yes, it would cost you three and sixpence."

"Oh, would it?" rejoined the yokel after reflection. "Then I'll let it remain as it is." And he did.—London Telegraph.

They Eat Themselves.

From various causes, such as anger and fear, many animals eat their own flesh. Rats, when caught in a trap by the leg, will gnaw off the captured member, and mice in captivity have been known to bite off their tails. But there are some creatures which go much further and actually eat parts of themselves if left for too long a period without food.

A hyena belonging to a menagerie was kept by the proprietor without food in order to tame it. One morning he was horrified to find that the ferocious creature had actually eaten part of its own leg.

An eagle in the zoo a few years ago was noted for the fact that it would now and then pick pieces of flesh out of its own legs and eat them.

Certain caterpillars and loads devour their cast off skin. This may be due to fear, but it looks like economy.

There is just a trace of this characteristic in human beings. Children when in rage sometimes bite their own hands and arms, although it must be admitted that they desist when it begins to hurt.

One Way of Getting Even.

"There is a fellow in our office who is a chronic borrower," said a young man employed in a large market street establishment recently. "He got into nearly everybody in the place before we all made up our minds to stop lending. He has owed me $2 for nearly a year, but I'm nearly square, although he has never paid me a penny of it. That sounds queer, but it is the truth. I'll tell you how I've worked it."

"Every once in awhile one of the fellows will say, 'I'm going to make $2.00 and so give me what he owes me next pay day or know the reason why?'"

"That's my chance, and I casually remark, 'I'll bet you a quarter you don't get it.'"

"Usually the fellow takes me up, and when pay day comes he says, 'In small bets of quarters and dimes, luncheons and cigars I have nearly got back the amount I originally loaned to the chronic borrower.'"

Philadelphia Record.

It Came in Handy.

Poet—I left a poem here the other day. Do you think you can use it?"

Editor—I have already. It came in so handy, I simply had to.

Poet (gasping joyfully)—Ahl!

Editor—While I was writing my last editorial I ran out of copy paper; your poem, being written on one side of the paper only, just helped me out.—Catholic Standard and Times.

A Triumph of Photography.

Of course it was a Missourian, one of the "you've-got-to-show-me" type, who remarked to a companion as they examined with awestruck interest a picture in which there was seen the faces of all the presidents of the United States. "Say, Bill, how in thunder did the photograph man ever get them men all together at once?"—Kansas City Journal.

A Writer's Aspirations.

They were looking through the library "if you had the divine gift what would you rather write?" asked the roomy young woman.

"I'd," replied the timid young man, "write a book."
