MONDAY - JULY 1

WHY SHOULDN'T HE?

George Miller has leapt into prominence by pulling down the flag at Skagway—the British flag. It waved above the stars and stripes and his patriotism, perhaps some thought of notoriety, prompted him to haul the Britisher down. We know that Miller is cool-blooded, will fight if necessary, and his snap is apparent on the red ensign does surprise us. Under the above "Why Shouldn't He?" the Telegram remarks:

Miller, a Eugene, Oregon, has pulled down a British flag in Skagway the other day, that it seems was floating over the American flag, which act, it is stated, "caused intense excitement," and on account of which the Canadian Government will demand an apology from Uncle Sam.

Unless the flag was flying over a British consulate, a residence, why shouldn't an American citizen lower it from a position of honor over the American flag, on American territory? Or has the Administration secretly given the site of Skagway to Canada, as it gave the Porcupine district on the southern edge of Alaska? Since when has Skagway become a Canadian town? And has the United States any territory left that is of value, and that Canada covets up in Alaska?

It appears that the Canadian officials have been gradually encroaching on United States territory until they have audaciously squatted down in Skagway itself, where they have no more official right than they have in Tillamook. Hurrah for George Miller, of Eugene, Oregon! He is a true-blue American.

A SIDEWALK NUISANCE.

There are many miles of sidewalk in Eugene, and it is not surprising that the dry weather finds many defective places that in winter are swollen tight from the rain.

This is the time to repair them—in a new stringer or a few new boards and nail down the loose ones.

The street committee and commissioner should co-operate in the work of repairs. Notice should be given, also, to owners of property where walks are defective.

There is no excuse for the rattling spring-board sections of walk that are to be found in many places. If the property-owner lacks pride in his premises the city should compel the necessary repairs. It costs little but will add largely to public comfort.

EMOTIONAL INSANITY DEFENSE.

A New Jersey judge in his charge to the jury on a murder trial used good logic as to the emotional insanity defense. He said in part: The suggestion that a person can be entirely sane in immediately before and immediately after the doing of some particular act, and yet be insane at the instant that the act was committed, may well serve as a psychological problem to interest the ingenious and daring speculations of the alienists, but it has no recognition in law, and the courts of this state have repudiated this species of insanity as constituting a defense to a criminal prosecution.

Nitro-glycerine would make a fatalist of any man. It is a substance that is likely to do almost anything except what is predicted for it. A ten-quart can of it has been dropped off the roof of a house with no disastrous results, while it is on record that a man, in passing a can that had been emptied and that was lying beside a forest path, struck it with his walking stick and was promptly blown into a neighboring tree-top. Instances are numerous where workmen have "thawed out" the erratic fluid by standing the cans on top of a hot stove and have continued to eat three meals a day, and yet the dropping of a piece of hot iron into a tub of water in which some such cans had been standing wrecked a building and an adjoining oil derrick.

Here are some sorrowful figures: A bluebook on India just issued by the British government shows that £18,390,000, [$99,000,000], was expended for the relief of famine sufferers during the year 1899-1900. The mortality from the plague for the five years ending March, 1901, was nearly 600,000. The census completed in March, 1901, shows that the increase in population during the past 10 years was only 5,000,000 to 6,000,000, instead of the normal 19,000,000. The loss represents deaths and a stoppage of the natural increase in consequence of the famine.

The Way He Kills It.

How to destroy fern is a question that puzzles many a rancher, on both new and old land. Col. F. J. Parker, editor and farmer, writes the Homestead his experience along this line on his ranch in Lincoln county. At the risk of being laughed at he submits the following recipe for destroying fern, and it appears to be all right:

"Fern can be killed on level or any ground a roller can run over. First thing to do is to cut the fern and burn it (fall preferred), then plow and let it remain until what little frost we get touches it, but really this part is immaterial. After letting it lay for a few weeks harrow it thoroughly and plow again, sowing as early as possible oats or rye; the grain comes up before the fern, but to kill the fern beyond a peradventure along this line on his ranch in Lincoln county. At the risk of being laughed at he submits the following recipe for destroying fern, and it appears to be all right:

LOOKING BACK

To the time when she was plucked from the very grasp of death, the natural impulse of the womanly heart is thankfulness for the means which saved her, and a desire to help other women in like case. These are the motives which prompted Mrs. Riva Burnett to write the accompanying testimonial to the curative power of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This is only one cure out of thousands. No one would dare say that the average woman was not as truthful as she is good. And it is the truthful testimony of the average woman that "Favorite Prescription" cures womanly diseases when all other remedies fail. It establishes regularity, drives the germs which weaken women, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness. It tranquilizes the nerves, restores the appetite and induces refreshing sleep.

"I have intended for some time to write to you," says Mrs. Riva Burnett, of Russellville, Logan Co., Ky., "and give a testimonial in regard to your medicine. I have done for me. My baby came in July, 1900, and I had congestive child, and I was able to look for ten long weeks. I was in a dreadful condition and had six of the best doctors of the city. After everything had been done and I had been given up to die I asked my husband to get me a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. He had no faith in it, but he got it, and when I had taken it two weeks I was able to walk to the dining room to my meals, and by the time I had taken three bottles I was able to look for my family of four. I can never praise Dr. Pierce and his medicine enough."
