Editor S A Brown, of Bennettsville, S C, was once immensely surprised. "Through long suffering from dyspepsia," he writes, "my wife was greatly run down. She had no strength or vigor and suffered great distress from her stomach, but she tried Electric Bitters which helped her at once, and after using four bottles, she is entirely well, can eat anything. It's a grand tonic, and its gentle laxative qualities are splendid for torpid liver." For indigestion, loss of appetite, stomach and liver troubles it's a positive, guaranteed cure. ## A CROUPIER'S STORY.

She drew his stakes away and said: "Come, Phil; we must go." He yielded to her smile, and they moved away. I smiled grimly to myself. I knew he would return. The man was bitten fiercely. The gambling fever was in his blood.

I was right. In half an hour they were back, and he won steadily. Once she snatched his 20 franc piece from the red and put it on the star. He was like a madman and struck her on the back, not meaning to hurt her, but because he was beside himself with joy.

She shrank from him a little and grew pale at his loud laugh. "Come away, Phil. Indeed you've played enough," I heard her whisper.

"In a minute," he said, shaking off the little hand laid so gently on his arm.

Her eyes flashed and with a swift movement, she snatched his stake and swept his money away from him.

"Hang it, I should have won!" he cried fiercely.

"Oh, Phil," was all she said, but her tone, so hurt, so surprised, recalled him to himself.

They walked away a few steps, and I could hear them talking.

"Don't play any more, Phil; please don't," I heard her say.

"Just once more," he urged, "and then I will go."

"Oh, Phil, I'm so tired. Please take me home. Don't leave me here alone," said the pleading voice.

"Just a minute, Dolly." And he came back to play.

There she stood, alone. About her surged the crowd, a motley one. Curious looks were cast upon the fair young English girl. One man spoke rudely to her, but she heeded not.

She did not hear him. She heard only the beating of her heart. Across her face swept every emotion. Such a proud little face! I read it like a book.

Cut to the quick she was that he should neglect her. Wounded pride, annoyance, affection, all were battling within her.

But the woman's love, which is stronger far than pride, conquered. I saw her turn and look at him, too, for he was playing high—100, 200, 300 franc stakes—and losing everything.

She murmured to herself, "Oh, Phil, I didn't think you would have done it!" Then she drew off her gloves, and upon her pretty, slender, jeweled fingers I saw a wedding ring. Perhaps she remembered the "for better, for worse," with which that ring was placed there, for she kissed it furtively, then came swiftly to him. "Phil," she said, one hand upon his shoulder.

He turned, not quite deaf to that voice yet. He was like a man in a dream, his ruddy face white and drawn, his eyes like black coals. The gambler's passion quivered in every line of his figure.

"Phil," that sweet voice, full of love and pleading, said again, "when I show you this"—her finger on her wedding ring—"you will come with me, won't you?"

He looked irresolute.

Just then she caught my glance, full of pity. She drew up her proud little head like a deer at bay. She was game to the backbone and wouldn't be pitted by me, a croupier.

"You never refused me anything before. It is I—Dolores—who ask you. Come!"

Her eyes looked into his, and her great love forced him to yield.

"Just this once," he said hoarsely, flinging down a 200 franc note.

I saw her lips move. She prayed he would lose. She was right. It was the turning point. Had he won then he would have played on and on until the end, and then—who knows what then?

"Come, Phil," she said again.

And as if dazed he let her lead him away.

Then the play stopped, and as I turned to go I saw them again. He was seated upon a bench, his head on his hands, totally unmanned. She stood beside him with almost motherly kindness.

"Poor old fellow! Never mind. You have my still," she said.

He looked up at her, and if there was ever worship in a man's eyes it shone in his.

"Yes," he said tremulously. "Thank heaven, I've got you still, my salvation! I don't deserve your love, Dolly, but, please heaven, I will."

Once afterward I saw them. He looked well and better, somehow, and she, well, I'm not good at expressing things, but I think she never forgot that half hour all alone. Some things kill a woman. She loved him a lot, and forgave him all, but I think the joy of loving him died within her soul that day.

She seemed older and had a look in her face like a madonna.

That is all my story, but until I die I shall admire that woman's pluck. Why did I let him play? How could I help it? I am only a croupier.—Spare Moments.

Friends.

"It is the edge of the world," said the man—"and the world laughs with you; weep and you weep alone." Friends are many when the purse is long, but when care and affliction come—ah, how is it that I should know this sad truth, that in such times as these friends are indeed few! The loyalty of friendship is something I have long consecrated in my inmost heart of hearts. One should be free with all possessions, but should be miserly of his friends. Make friends as you tread life's earlier path. Keep constantly fortifying your stock of friends, or the latter will soon pass from you. The friends of our youth are no doubt the best of all, enduring through life without thought or need of change. As Thackeray said, "We are so much alone in this world; you who have anything to love hold that friend to your heart and thank God!"—Exchange.

Every 10th bicycle purchaser gets a solar lamp free. 170 was Roy Taylor, 180 was T O Keady, 190 was J W Harris, 200 was F B Dillard, and 210 will come soon. Who will get it? F L Chambers.

Told by Pain

If you have pains you should look after them quickly. Pain shows something is wrong. The sharper the pain the more danger there is in delay. There are thousands of women today who are bearing awful pain almost continually, rather than tell a physician about the shooting pains in their lower abdomen, about the agony of falling of the womb and the distress of leucorrhoea. They let the months pass and their trouble becomes harder to cure and more distressing. But modest women can secure exemption from the embarrassment of a private examination. When pain tells them of danger they can cure themselves by the use of in the privacy of their homes. You can be cured without distressing publicity. With these facts before you there is no reason for the delay which is increasing your misery and wasting the days of your life. Why not stop the pain today?

WINE OF CARDUI

Belen, Miss., March 9, 1903.
I have used one bottle of Wine of Cardui and one package of Theodor's Black-Draught. Before I began to take your medicines I had pains in my back, hips, lower bowels and my arms. Sometimes I thought I would go blind. My head ached and I was so weak I could hardly walk across the door. Now I can only feel a little of the pain in my side and I am going to use your medicines until I get cured. For I believe they will certainly cure me. I have been married twelve years and am the mother of seven children. I thank you for your wonderful medicine and what it has done for me.
