A CLOSE CALL.

Traveling one day on the Hudson River railroad with a friend in the army he related to me a personal experience which is to say the least harrowing.

The conversation of my friend converted the tediousness of the journey into enjoyment, and before we had supposed ourselves at Peckskill we were surprised at the shout of the brakeman announcing the station, "Garrison!" "Do you not stop here for West Point?" I inquired.

"No," replied the captain. "I am going to Hudson to dine."

Immediately after passing Garrison the train steamed through the long tunnel which takes its name from the station. My friend was silent for several minutes after, when, turning to me, he said, "I always feel chilly when I go through that tunnel."

"For what reason?" I asked.

"I was caught in it one night," said the captain, "and I think I never so narrowly escaped death as on that occasion."

I begged him to relate the particulars, and he obligingly described the occurrence as follows: "You have lived long enough in Cold Spring," said the captain, "to know that the Saturday dinners of Mr. — are exceedingly delightful. Well, on one occasion I was present at one of these Saturday evening reunions, and there was that unusual amount of enjoyment that time flew by with double its ordinary rapidity. General Scott had taken his seat at the whist table, and, having been beaten, he could not bear to abandon the game until he had had his revenge."

A group of West Point professors watched the players with deep interest, and I myself became so absorbed in watching the game that when I at last remembered that I had agreed to meet Livingston at the depot and go with him to Garrison I found, on looking at my watch, that I had but seven minutes to get to the train. I made my adieu hastily and walked rapidly to the station, but arrived too late. The train had gone.

"The night was delightful. The stars were brilliant, and the moon was nearly full. I felt unusually well, and being an excellent walker I at once resolved to walk to Garrison, for the distance was about three miles only and I had on several occasions walked over that portion of the railroad. I examined my time table and saw there were no trains due for some hours. I did not at that time know it had been that day changed.

"After picking my way over the long bridges on piles and crossing the draw-ers of a willow at all over the draw-bridge I reached the mouth of the tunnel. It looked darker and more forbidding than I expected, and I paused a few moments before I resolved to go through it. I had not gone far when I was in perfect darkness. Knowing that the train ran on the right hand track, I took the one on the left, in order that I might not be overtaken in the rear and could see the engine light if approaching me in front as soon as possible. I had reached about the middle of the tunnel when I heard the distant rumbling of a train. I listened attentively and felt satisfied that the cars were coming from the direction of Cold Spring.

"I therefore continued on the track I had taken. Presently the sound of the engine whistle reverberated in the dismal passage, and I was startled with the singular effect, for at one instant I was sure it came from the north, while a second sound seemed to come from the opposite direction. In fact, I soon became so uncertain as to the way the train would approach that I stood still and watched both entrances. In a very few moments I saw the bright light of the locomotive sweeping around the curve near the northern mouth, and I felt relieved, for the train was on the other track. But the unearthly noise of the rapidly moving cars was enough to terrify even a stout heart.

"While watching the passing train I suddenly became aware of another train entering the tunnel from the opposite direction. Escape seemed impossible. Both tracks were occupied, and I knew if I lay down upon the middle of the track the cowcatcher would inevitably tear me to atoms.

"I thought of the trench outside of the track and sprang across the rail to throw myself down on it, but as the beam of the engine light came rushing toward me I found that there was not room. Why my wits did not desert me has always been a wonder, for I felt that I had but a second or two to live and would be killed in a most horrible manner, but a merciful Providence directed my eyes to an unusually large cavity in the wall, caused by a blast near a seam, and with the rapidity of thought I sprang into it and pressed my back against the rocks.

"The cars rushed by and so close that the wind caused by their motion blew off my hat, and a few that were an inch or two wider than the rest rubbed my clothing, as I afterward saw by the marks. Oh, my friend," said the captain, placing his hand, which was like ice from agitation, upon mine, "if you knew the agony of those moments—the suspense, the hope of escape and the terror lest some car a little wider than the rest should drag me from that shallow cavity and crush me, the bewildering rushing, crushing noise of that fearful train and the interminable time it seemed to take to pass by—you would not wonder that I cannot even now pass through that tunnel, although safely in my car, without a shudder and a prayer of thankfulness to Providence for not forsaking me in those trying moments."

A BARGAIN.—646½ acres of land; 100 acres in cultivation rest in open prairie, well seeded down; plenty of running water year around; timber abundant; 9-room house, and barn that holds 100 tons of hay; place 2 miles from depot; postoffice and good public school; $12.50 per acre; for further particulars inquire of I. ### Baby's Coming

McDonald, Ga., July 16, 1901.
I desire every mother to take Wine of Cardui while I was going with my other children I was come of the working end of a card at a time, but this Wine of Cardui saved me and my baby. I have taken Wine of Cardui and my baby has been born healthy and happy. I am expecting every day to be cured. My husband thinks Wine of Cardui is the best medicine in the world. He takes a dose of Cardui's Black Draught every night and gives some in the morning. He has not lost a day from work this year. He tells his friends about my wonderful recovery and I tell my lady friends to take Wine of Cardui.

Mrs. G. B. LEE.

WINE OF CARDUI

There are thousands of women who shrink in terror at the thought of the baby's coming. But childbirth is one of the working end of nature and it is not intended to imply torture and agony to the heroic mothers of the race. The woman who suffers torture during pregnancy and at childbirth has usually, by some irregularities leads to ovarian pains, falling of the womb and leucorrhoea, and the period of pregnancy is necessarily distressing and unhealthy. Wine of Cardui will regulate the menstrual function perfectly and eventually make the generative organs strong and healthy. Pregnancy and childbirth have no terrors for the woman who takes this pure Wine. A strong and healthy woman need not fear childbirth. Wine of Cardui completely cures all these troubles familiarly known as "female diseases" and equips the sensitive generative organs for pregnancy and childbirth. It will save any mother much pain and suffering. All druggists sell $1.00 bottles.
