STRUCK OIL.

Well Drilled Down to Wealth at New Whatcom.

New Whatcom, Wash. Jan 8.—This afternoon, at a depth of 955 feet, the drill of well No 3, of the Pacific Oil Wells Co, entered into an oil body, the extent of which is not known. The baffle brought to the surface was half filled with a paraffine base oil of superior quality.

A Deep Mystery.

It is a mystery why women endure backache, headache, nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, fainting and dizzy spells when thousands have proved that Electric Bitters will quickly cure such troubles. "I suffered for years with kidney trouble," writes Mrs Phebe Cherley, of Peterson, Ia, "and a lame back pained me so I could not dress myself, but Electric Bitters wholly cured me, and, although 73 years old, I now am able to do all my household work." It overcomes constipation, improves appetite, gives perfect health. Only 50c at W L Delano's drug store.

"SPOTTERS PLENTIFUL"—Ashland Tidings: "Spotters" have been playing havoc amongst the brakemen during the past week. Several employees have already lost their positions and more are liable to go, so it is reported. These "spotters" are quite numerous both north and south of Ashland, wending their way in either direction. These men, in the employ of the company, impersonate the hobo element and when they are successful in gaining a ride or in tipping the employees they report the occurrence. Many of the trainmen can easily spot the "spotter" and he sometimes gets ditched in a very desolate region, and too, he takes chances on getting worse treatment.

PAY FOR SAMPLE ROOMS.—Democrat: The hotel men of Albany have agreed to charge for sample rooms in the future, and this seems proper. The hotels have to pay rent for the rooms, and besides they are expected to furnish free lights. These things cost money and those who require the accommodations must expect to pay for them.

WHITCOMB'S COYOTE DOG.

Whitcomb killed his dog-kicked him, I suppose. That was 18 years ago at Sunday, a small settlement on Pepper creek, in the then Dakotas. We curiously looked at the dog to ascertain what effect this particular kick would have on him, for it was at least the one thousandth he had received from his master in the course of three years of troubled life. Usually this dog took the kick, dropped his tail, slunk into a corner and watched his master out of a single eye until the latter's good humor was restored. This afternoon he did not do this. He turned away without a yelp, set his scarred body on the trail to Portland and temporarily disappeared.

Whitcomb was the deputy sheriff of the county, stationed at Sunday. He regarded himself as master of anything and everything in the town. Men that kick dogs usually carry that opinion with them. Whitcomb in Sunday stood for the law and his own ends. When the two conflicted, the law went fishing. But it was a singular thing that while Whitcomb carried so much authority and imposing presence around he never met a man who dared to defy him but what he immediately became his best friend. Men that kick dogs have that peculiarity also. It was singular, too, that the only thing in Sunday which Whitcomb ever outrageously abused was his coyote dog. This he kicked at every opportunity—kicked so hard that Watson, the freighter, looking into the dog's bloodshot eyes one day, said sentimentally to Whitcomb: "He'll turn on you some day."

The dog came from nowhere. He drifted in out of the wilds of the buttes one day and immediately attached himself to Whitcomb. Perhaps he had a cross of coyote in him; more probably he did not. But he was long, lank, heavy fanged, big of muscle, marvelous in endurance—he ran one day 60 miles behind Whitcomb's gray Indian mare without a sup of water. He minded his own business strictly, even as to other dogs. The few of his own race that disturbed him were killed so quick they did not realize he was at their throats.

Why he took to Whitcomb no one could explain, but he did, and, although kicked from pillar to post, beaten with pistol butts and cut with quirts, he was loyal to his first choice—that is, he was loyal until this particular day when he was kicked for the last time. When he trotted away from Whitcomb's office, although he did not know it, he forever severed himself from that individual.

Watson, coming across the trail with provisions, met him at Grass Butte, a mile from town. He was high up the gorge, perched on a shelf, looking far into the west. Watson whistled to him, and he came down, dragging his big but bruised frame after him slowly. He licked the freighter's hand, sniffed at the horse and then returned to the vantage point he had occupied, only this time he faced the east, looking toward Sunday.

Watson was not a superstitious fellow, but when he rode into town and passed Whitcomb's office he called out: "Going over Grass Butte way tonight?"

Whitcomb nodded. Watson shook his head.

"That dog of yours is out there, and he's waiting for trouble."

Whitcomb laughed, shook himself and remarked:

"I reckon he'll never bother me. He's just a bit sulky."

"All right," answered Watson, "but I know those coyote dogs, and I know your dog, and he's waiting for you. You just remember that."

Whitcomb paid no more attention to him, and the rest of us forgot Grass Butte and the dog. About 8 o'clock that evening Whitcomb rode out of town with a young fellow by the name of Owens. He was paying attention to Owens' sister, and she was living at the ranch in the meadows five miles west of Grass Butte. It was dark when the two cleared the town, but they were headed straight for the butte. When his shape rose out of the blackness before them, Whitcomb suddenly thought of his dog and said to Owens:

"I wonder if that beast is waiting for me?"

Owens could not tell him, so when they came to the butte Whitcomb dismounted and whistled. He was evidently anxious to call the dog to him and show anew his power over it. Something rustled on the mass of shale above him.

Owens told the rest of the story later. He said:

"Whit called to the dog and then whistled again, and then I saw something big come through the darkness as if it was shot out of a gun. Whit ripped out an oath, and then he fell down, and the big thing was on him, and I thought it was a lion or something else, and I came back to town as fast as I could for help."

Watson was the first to get into the saddle for rescue. The rest came hurriedly after him. Grass Butte was very quiet, and so was Deputy Sheriff Whitcomb. He was lying by the trail, face to the stars, his throat torn open and the life gone from him. One hand was on his gun, but he never had strength enough to pull it.

As for the coyote dog, he was not to be seen, but the next day his trail of blood was followed westward for miles and miles, but his pursuers never caught up with him. He had gone on to safety, leaving the mark of his vengeance at the base of Grass Butte.—Chicago Record-Herald.

It Girdles the Globe.

The fame of Bucklen's Arnica Salve as the best in the world, extends round the earth. It's the one perfect healer of cuts, corns, burns, bruises, sores, scalds, boils, ulcers, feline, aches, pains and all skin eruptions. Only infallible cure. 25c a box at W L DeLano's.

Perils of Our Presidents.

All our presidents have been in the habit of mingling freely with the people, usually without any particular precaution being made for their safety. The danger of this has been so generally only noticed out in the last few months that wise statesmen suggest that the old plan be discontinued. There is also cause for great danger in many of the so-called remedies advertised for stomach, liver and bowel complaints. The safest medicine to take is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. It has been before the public for fifty years, and has always been found safe and reliable in cases of nervousness, insomnia, indigestion, dyspepsia and biliousness, fever and ague. It therefore occupies the foremost position in the list of household remedies, and no family should be without it.

Thousands Sent into Exile.

Every year a large number of poor sufferers whose lungs are sore and racked with coughs are led to go to another climate. This is costly and not always successful. Beauty is Health.

Wanted Lady, Ark., June 2, 1900. I thank you for the benefit I received from your advice and the Wine of Cardui I took in my terrible condition. My life was no pleasure to me at all and I was of no use to anybody. After receiving your advice and medicine I commenced taking it and began immediately to improve. The pains left me and the nervousness, which came at the correct time, continued three days. I have gained strength and my weight has increased. My husband says the medicine has made me better looking than ever before. Mrs. LIZZIE MANNELL.

Womanly health means bright eyes, rosy cheeks, clear complexion and elasticity of form. This is the youth unmeasured by years—the beauty of perfect womanhood. Beautiful women are happier and get more out of life than their sisters whose faces indicate suffering. Wine of Cardui made Mrs. Mannell "better looking" and infinitely happier because it cured her of those terrible pains. But she is no exception.

WINE OF CARDUI

is giving thousands of women health, beauty and freedom from the dragging pains which made their lives so miserable. Worn faces, haggard eyes and emaciated forms are the results of suffering. What suffering can compare with the torture of irregular menstruation, leucorrhoea and falling of the womb? Beauty flees quickly before the ravages of such disease. The sharp pains of falling of the womb deepen the crow tracks in the face. Menstrual irregularities rob the eye of its fire and the complexion of its transparency. Leucorrhoea drains the body of its strength, but Wine of Cardui restores the natural beauty, brightens the eye, clears the complexion, rounds out the figure and brings back the vigor of health. Every druggist in this city handles $1.00 bottles of Wine of Cardui.
