A SOUTHERN PACIFIC IDEA.

The Portland freight and passenger agent of the Southern Pacific railroad has an "idea," and it is a good one. He publishes monthly bulletins for distribution, giving a list of products that may be had at the various points along the line of the Southern Pacific, the kind of produce available and the approximate selling price of the same. Then information is secured as to where a shortage of any of the products exist and the bulletins are put into the hands of prospective buyers.

As an instance of the advantage derived thirty-five carloads of onions and potatoes have been shipped from the lower valley this week to California points, principally Fresno and Stockton. The buyer and the seller are brought directly together by this means without the aid of middlemen who would necessarily absorb a good per cent of the selling price. It is a good scheme, and practical.

Astoria Budget: The Portland Telegram, one of the staunchest gold standard papers on the coast, is beginning to own up that the contention of the Democrats in 1896 and 1900, that more circulating medium was necesary to create prosperity, was a correct theory. In a recent editorial on this subject the Telegram said: "More subsidiary silver coin is needed, and the bill introduced by Representative Hill is commendable insofar as it provides for an increase of 'change.' But whether it would be well to stop the coinage of legal tender silver dollars, as he proposes, is doubtful. The increase during the past few years in the world's output of gold has made the coinage of a great quantity of silver possible, and thus the volume of our currency has been much increased, until the circulation per capita is now greater than ever before, and this fact has undoubtedly been a large factor in bringing about and maintaining the present period of prosperity."

Of course the railroad magnates Hill and Harriman of the Northern transcontinental lines claim that mergument does not kill competition. No? Why then should they consolidate their interests? Is it to give the public better service and better rates, or to make more money for railroad stockholders through holding transportation charges firmly? The critical, unprejudiced public will incline to the latter view, however the railroad presidents may protest.

When the GUARD received a telegraphic dispatch from Seattle the middle of yesterday afternoon that they had a blizzard in the morning we were congratulating ourselves that our country was not like their country. With the thermometer only a dozen degrees above the zero point early this morning we have less conceit.

France is "affronted" by Venezuela. It is singular how easily these big "powers" get affronted at the little ones. When an equal in guns and fighting men affronts another, smooth-tongued diplomacy is called into requisition. A fighting ship or two does the business when the offender is a little fellow.

It does seem like a big price, but any price is not too large to get this incident closed—to use a diplomatic term. The telegraph brings the news that the carriers are on their way with Miss Stone's ransom, $72,200. After the ransom then the lecture platform.

Portland has an interesting batch of smallpox at the city pesthouse—22 cases Friday morning. Most of the men are transients, having evidently been sent to Portland on the first symptoms of the disease.

This morning was a "swinger" from a Webfoot point of view. The sudden fall of temperature of twenty degrees during the night, away down into the freezing points is unusual for this valley.

A MUSCULAR PREACHER.

Monroe Minister takes a Hand in a Fight.

This is a story of a preacher who can punch as well as pray. The tale is told by one who ought to know. The incident happened at Monroe last week. Two young men of the town were engaged in a hand-to-hand scrimmage. The minister, who is pastor of a Monroe church, advanced to separate the combatants. A bystander undertook to pull him out of the fighting line when the pastor promptly knocked him down. Again the minister moved up to the battle line to stop the mill, and again the bystander sought to pull him off. This time the minister lost his patience and with a quick motion he planted a blow that sent the meddling bystander at second time to the grass and rolled him off the sidewalk.

At this point in the narrative the wires went down. It is supposed that the auxiliary fracas so interested the principals in the battle that they stopped to watch proceedings and that peace thereafter reigned.

It is perhaps needless to add that nine cases out of ten public opinion will plant its approval on the side of the spunky preacher.—Corvallis Times.

"I wrote Dr. Pierce regarding my case, and received a prompt reply, free."

"I endured nearly four years of suffering," writes Mrs. I. L. Myers, of Washington, W. Va., "caused principally from improper medical attention after the birth of a child, and female weakness, resulting in a complication of diseases. Had a terrible cough and an incessant pain and soreness in lungs. Was reduced in flesh from 184 pounds to about 100 pounds in eighteen months. I had no appetite, and became so weak and nervous I could scarcely sit up. I doctored with our home physicians for two years with no benefit, I was finally induced to try Dr. Pierce's medicines. I wrote to Doctor Pierce regarding my case, and received a prompt reply, free, advising the proper medicines for my case. After taking four bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and four of his 'Golden Medical Discovery,' three doses each day, also taking one bottle of Dr. Pierce's Compound Extract of Smart-Weed and some of his 'Pellets,' I ceased coughing, and am now enjoying splendid health and have gained thirty-five pounds in weight. I again feel like my former self, thanks to Dr. Pierce and his great medicines."

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter FREE. All correspondence strictly confidential and all women's diseases guarded by strict professional secrecy. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

The Magnet Rock.

BY WILLIAM J. LAMPTON.

"When I was prospecting in Colorado," said the stranger to a group around the hotel stove, "my partner and I started out from Denver with a burro load of provisions and tools and with our minds made up to find a fortune or let the burro die in the attempt. Well, we lost our bearings. I didn't know where we were, and my partner didn't, and as like as not the burro didn't, but we had heard plenty of stories about animal instinct and the cat coming back, so we concluded to leave it to the burro and see if he could pilot us to some point or other that we knew.

"There wasn't much to do but to give him his head, and he kept knocking along in the direction of somewhere to us unknown.

"One night he got loose and wandered off, leaving his load for us to carry or to cache where we were likely never to find it again. Then we went hunting for the burro instead of hunting for our way out of the wilds, and we divided up his load and took it along with us.

"The hunt had continued a week, when one morning we spied the burro about half a mile ahead of us, apparently standing on a piece of rising ground, surveying the landscape.

"He saw us as we approached and whinnied and showed all sorts of signs of joy, but he didn't move a peg. When we got to within 50 feet of him, we noticed that the rising ground on which he stood was in reality a huge black stone standing up from the ground to about three feet at its highest point.

"As soon as we struck the stone, going to the burro, we found that it was all we could do to lift our feet up, and we hadn't gone more than three or four steps till we fairly stuck to the stone. We thought we were paralyzed at first and were scared half to death, but in my efforts to walk I pulled one of my feet out of its shoe, and when I put that foot down on the stone I found I could use it all right.

"Then we took off our shoes, my partner, who was considerable of a scientific man, suggesting that the stone must be magnetic and was acting on the steel pegs in our soles and heels. We knew the magnetic stone was holding the burro fast by the heavy, steel shoes he wore for mountain travel. He had tried to walk until his fore feet were so far from his hind feet that he was away backed. He had evidently been a prisoner until he was half starved and famished, and we did not wonder that he was glad to see us.

"Of course the first thing for us to do was to get him off the stone, and we began by trying to pry him loose, but as fast as we got one foot free and tackled another one the magnet would pull the free one back again, and the best we could do was to get his fore feet nearer the hind ones and relieve the strain on his spinal column.

"We tried to roll him over on his back, but he couldn't lie down, and we had to give that up too. Then we determined to take off his shoes, and, going back after our ax, we started in with that, but the magnet dragged it out of our hands and held it so fast we broke the handle trying to get it loose. Stones were the only tools we could use, and after an hour's work with them we got the shoes off, and the burro was free. By zucks, gentlemen, the joy of that dumb animal when he found he could walk and had a chance to get at grass and water was enough to bring tears to eyes unused to weep."

The hack driver sniffled, but he apologized by saying he had a cold.

"We gave the burro a day to fill up and get some of his strength back," continued the stranger, "and, putting the pack once more on his back, we proceeded on our course, the burro making the best time I ever saw a burro make. We believed we had found something greater than a gold mine and intended to come back and develop our find.

"We had a long, hard trip still before us, but we got out at last and reached Denver in good shape, all things considered. Interesting some scientific and moneyed people in our discovery, we organized another party and went back to find the magnet, but its location escaped us, as is often the case with mines in that vast region, and, do what we could, we could not locate it."

The stranger stopped as if he had reached the end of his story.

"Why in thunder didn't you let the mule lead the party?" asked the hack driver in a state of suppressed excitement.

The stranger looked at him more in pity than in anger.

"Why didn't we?" he replied. "We did, but as soon as the burro was headed in that direction and got his bearings he turned tail and started east on a dead run, and we haven't seen him since. Have any of you seen a strange burro in this neighborhood? I'm here on my way to the Atlantic ocean looking for him."

"Well, I'll be derned!" remarked Sam Perkins, and everybody else was speechless.—St. Louis Republic.

The Art of Skipping.

When I meet a paragraph which begins—

"It is now necessary to retrace our steps somewhat to explain"— Or,

"The crimson sun by this time neared the horizon. Far over the hills stretched a vault of heavy cloud, its strange purple tints fading and dissolving into"— Or,

"But the contents of this room, his sanctum sanctorum, deserve more detailed description"— Or,

"Oh, strange, unfathomable mystery of existence, compelling our purblind race"—

When, I say, I meet a passage in a novel which begins thus, I skip like anything.—Pilot.

The Fuel of the Future.

The question has been worrying many people who fear that the coal supply is becoming exhausted, but there is no need to worry, however, as a substitute has been discovered in petroleum. In nearly all of nature's products we find that as soon as one material becomes scarce another is discovered to take its place. There is one exception, and that is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. It is nature's own remedy for all stomach, liver and bowel complaints, and during the past fifty years it has been impossible to make a better medicine. It cures indigestion, dyspepsia, constipation, nervousness and malaria, fever and ague. If you have never tried it, do so today. It cannot help but do you good. Our private die stamp is over the neck of the bottle.

A Deep Mystery.

It is a mystery why women endure backache, headache, nervousness, sleeplessness, melancholy, fainting and dizzy spells when they can be promptly cured. Electric Bitters will quickly cure such troubles. "I suffered for years with kidney trouble," writes Mrs Phebe Cherney, of Peterson, Ia, "and a lame back pained me so I could not dress myself, but Electric Bitters wholly cured me, and, although 73 years old, I now am able to do all my housework." It overcomes constipation, improves appetite, gives perfect health. Only 50c at W L Delano's drug store.
