Wm. D. Galt

THE KING.

BY BARRY PAINE.

Mr. Wilfred Camp thought that a walking tour would be a good thing. One night a week later, at about 10 o'clock, he found himself lost on a Yorkshire moor. His feet were weary; his new knapsack was heavy; his road map was all wrong; he was thirsty and sleepy. In this condition he was extremely glad to sight at last a very small cottage with a light burning in the window. That meant a rest and a direction. There would also be something in the way of supper. Wilfred quickened his steps and knocked gently on the door of the cottage.

The door was opened, considerably to Wilfred's surprise, by a gaunt old gentleman in evening dress. Wilfred had expected a peasant, but he pulled himself together and told his story and made his requests as well as he could.

"You are the second stranger that has called here within these 20 years," said the old gentleman. "I came here to be out of the world, which had ceased to want me, and yet the world drifts in. But do not let me seem ungracious. Such hospitality as I am able to offer is entirely at your service. Pray come in."

The old man led the way into a small book lined living room. "I must tell you," he added, "that I have no servant, live by myself and am accustomed to do everything for myself. You will excuse any shortcomings."

For the life of him Wilfred could not help his glance straying to that perfect shirt front. "Yes, I know," said the old gentleman. "It does seem inconsistent. It is an old habit. Let us hope that it may help me to not as your waiter with a skill that shall not lag too far behind my good will or the part. Please be seated and excuse me for a few moments while I prepare supper for you."

Wilfred's offer of assistance was declined, and an excellent and simple meal was soon ready. It was only when he had finished the omelet and was pouring out the last glass of the old burgundy that his curiosity got the better of his appetite and his discretion. He tried a leading question.

"Certainly," said the old gentleman, with a courteous smile, as he handed the cigar box. "It is natural that you should be asking yourself who this amiable lunatic may be. Potentially I am king of the world. Born in the right age and in the right stage of civilization—or, if you prefer it, barbarism—I should unquestionably have been the king of the world. The iron, scientific, conventional, civilized world of today is too strong for me. When you contend against it, it gives you seven years' penal servitude. I myself have done seven years' penal servitude."

"You are jesting, of course," said Wilfred.

"I never jest. There is little dignity in it. I was fellow of my college at the time of the sentence, many years ago. When I came out, my relatives and a few friends were ready with advice, penitential gibberish and forgiveness. Others were ready to despise or mistrust. I could not understand the point of view of any of them. You see, I am at heart a king, one to whom forgiveness or contempt must be purely ridiculous. To myself, and no other, can I ever be answerable. Obviously a world of men and women of the type that is spawned nowadays was no place for me. I came out of it. I am alone, and I am the king, the king in exile, the king without a kingdom. Chance cannot affect that. It moves me from my right epoch and sets me down in a vulgar generation with absurd ideas that cannot understand me. Briefly, it denies me my kingdom, but can do no more. No, I am stronger than chance there. I am, in myself and all through myself, a king unalterably."

The old man's eyes glittered, and his manner was rapidly becoming more excited. Mr. Wilfred Camp was as rapidly becoming very nervous.

"I'm afraid," he said, "you find my visit a terrible intrusion. I was, as you saw, the victim of circumstances, and I thank you for your hospitality and will not trespass on it further. If you could kindly direct me to Vennersley."

The old man looked away from him and muttered, as if to himself, "Two in 20 years." Then he suddenly turned to him again, raising his voice. "Address me properly, and on your knees."

Wilfred was down on his knees at once. "May it please your majesty to permit me to retire?"

"Very well. You will walk backward until you reach the door. On leaving the house you will not run unless you wish my dogs to run after you. I shall not direct you on your way, for then you might return. You will get lost again. The other stranger got buried. You are kneeling on his grave at this moment. Out before I change my mind!"

Wilfred Camp rose and backed toward the door. As he reached it the madman made a rush at him, and he turned and ran. He never saw nor heard anything of the dogs. At a little distance he took one look back at the cottage. The madman stood in the doorway, waving his knife and shouting: "I am the king of the world! I am the king!"

It was dawn when he reached, by chance, the highroad. Some days afterward an organized attempt was made to find the cottage, but with no success. So some think Camp's story untrue; others, that if it had been a lie it would have put him in a less ignominious position.—Black and White.

His Impression.

She—Why, no. The stolen Gainsborough was not a hat. It was a picture. Her Husband—Oh! I thought from the value it was a hat.—Brooklyn Life.

It Girdles the Globe.

The fame of Bucklen's Arnica Salve as the best in the world, extends round the earth. It's the one perfect healer of cuts, corns, burns, bruises, sores, scalds, boils, ulcers, eruptions, aches, pains and all skin diseases. Only infallible cure. 25c a box at W L DeLano's.

Told by Pain

If you have pains you should look after them quickly. Pain shows something is wrong. The sharper the pain the more danger there is in delay. There are thousands of women to-day who are bearing awful pain almost continually, rather than tell a physician about the shooting pains in their lower abdomen, about the agony of falling of the womb and the distress of leucorrhoea. They let the months pass and their trouble becomes harder to cure and more distressing. But modest women can secure exemption from the embarrassment of a private examination. When pain tells them of danger they can cure themselves by the use of

WINE OF CARDUI

In the privacy of their homes. You can be cured without distressing publicity. With these facts before you there is no reason for the delay which is increasing your misery and wasting the days of your life. Why not stop the pain today?

I have used one bottle of Wine of Cardui and one package of Theodore's Black Draught. Before I began to take your medicines I had pains in my back, hips, lower bowels and my arms. Sometimes I thought I would go blind. My head ached and I was so weak I could hardly walk across the floor. Now I can only feel a little of the pain in my side and I am going to use your medicines until I get cured, for I believe they will certainly cure me. I have been married twelve years and am the mother of seven children. I thank you for your wonderful medicine and what it has done for me.
