"LAW: A TRIUMPH FROM THE THRESHOLD."

By Jacob B O'Neil, of the school of law. This oration was well rendered and showed careful thought and study.

THE LEWIS AND CLARKE EXPEDITION; ITS SIGNIFICANCE.

By Kate E Wilson. Oregon one hundred years ago was an unexplored region.

Through the efforts of President Jefferson an expedition commanded by Lewis and Clarke was organized in 1804 for the purpose of exploring the Oregon country. Lewis and Clarke were the first white men to cross the Rocky Mountains. This expedition meant much. It opened the door into the heart of the far West. The narrative of this expedition aroused in our ancestors that inherent Anglo-Saxon desire to move westward.

It required stout hearts, strong hands and brave souls to press forward through the wilderness and plant the stars and stripes on the shores of the Pacific.

The Lewis and Clarke expedition was the germ from which grew the desire to possess the country. It gave the United States her sure foothold upon the Pacific Coast of America. It was the beginning of a movement that has given us a Pacific coast line longer than from Maine to Florida.

ROMANUS SUM.

By Leeton L Lewis. Rome, building upon foundations laid in centuries past cultivated ideas destined to last even to the present. Her greatness rested not upon her wealth, commerce or colonies, but upon moral qualities of Roman character. But Rome fell, blinded by her unchallenged position, her sons became careless. These qualities which formed the background of Roman character were lost, and Rome became helpless in the face of new emergencies.

Rome fell, but not Roman ideals. After a lapse of fourteen centuries their ideal lives on American soil. America is on the forefront of progress; but dangers are not past. The same evils that overthrew Roman civilization now confront us, the American people. A new absolutism appears today, which threatens evil.

Although confronted by such dangers we appear to them what former races never possessed in any similar degree—the power of democracy.

Inspired by the noble ideals of the founders and preservers of our republic, and infused with a spirit of Nathan Hale—a spirit which manifested itself only one month ago when American control in Cuba ended.

We are the heirs of history living in a time when history is making. Manifest destiny divinely ordered, is upon us. Doubts and fears swept aside, the prospect of the future lies before us and is exceedingly fair.

THE ANCIENT LANDMARKS.

By J A Gamber. One of the greatest achievements of the past century is the recognition of the universal reign of law. Only in recent years have men realized that there is one sublime force, one all-inclusive movement where record lies plainly written in the history of man and of nation. There is in all nature a force that is constant, reliable, ever striving to do its work, and to this force the earth owes its development.

Because an inherent power is less obvious in themselves and their institutions than in nature men often deny its existence, but more and more men are discovering that they live, think and develop by law, for in the landmarks of the past, in the records of his progress man reads the measure of his greatness and the destiny of his race.

The progress of the race is ever upward, men, nations and civilization pass away but humanity knows no defeat. All questions of government must be settled finally for the right for truth can never be evaded.

The life and power of individuals and nations depends upon the progress and its search for truth. Every age, every individual feels the force pushing everything forward and only by harmony with its laws is there life. Every individual feels yearning for the infinite, and has ideals that are his alone. Listen to this voice for it comes from beyond the ages; betrace to it for it is your life, your Heavenly vision, aye, it is the voice of God.

UP FROM SLAVERY.

By Elizabeth R Logan: For the South there lies one of the fairest domains of this fair land. Here a dark race marked with the badge of servitude tends the cotton and hoes the corn. Their history is a familiar one. It began when negroes were first brought to this country; after slavery had assumed a sectional character it was the cause of a war which destroyed Southern civilization, and made the negro nominally free.

But the struggle up from slavery is a long process and was but begun when the negro was given civil privileges. The problem confronts us today. Present conditions in the South are dangerous to our national welfare. We have tried legislation and we have failed. The problem is not so much political, and social as it is industrial, and we must follow in the path opened up for us by "servitor of his people," Booker T Washington, giving the negro our sympathy and the Southern whites our co-operation.

UP FROM SLAVERY.

By Allen Eaton. When this nation was born the fathers of the constitution did not realize the danger of the institution of human slavery that should some day threaten the republic's very existence, and so it was allowed to grow. But the day came when the nation could no longer endure half slave and half free, and in the smoke of battle the institution of slavery was lost. Then the North asked the South to prepare for American citizenship its 4,000,000 former slaves * * *

The great leap from bondage into freedom still bears its evils and demands its remedies. Men declare the negro incapable of being helped by education, voters disfranchise the black but not the ignorant white, citizens deny the negro his lawful trial in instances of crime * * *

The education which has failed to lift the negro proves that the system is at fault. The negro must first be taught life's essentials and a respect for himself. Ignorant negroes should not be allowed to vote neither should ignorant whites. The standard of citizenship should apply equally to all citizens. In cases of crime the law must take its course, disregard for it will weaken both races. The negro people will constitute one-third and more of the crime and ignorance of the South or one-third of its intelligence and progress. The best people of both races realize that the common safety of the South is dependent upon the intelligence and development of all and the best men, black and white, are united in a determination to administer absolute justice and obey willingly the mandates of law.

"UP FROM SLAVERY."

By William H Johnson. Centuries of slave-owning left the American negro in a degraded condition. But in spite of great disadvantages he has made great progress since freedom was given him. The path of the race has been a rough one, but it has shown its capacity and will only require time and friendly assistance to reach a high degree of civilization. Salvation lies in the help and co-operation of the white race, and more particularly that of the Southern people. It is not best for the negro to aim at white civilization through political equality. The prejudice, passion, and oppression which are inevitable will hinder his best efforts for improvement. Let the negro divert his efforts from politics and turn his attention toward elevating his social life and increasing his industrial efficiency. Let him become a law-abiding citizen, peaceable, full of integrity and honor in his own sphere and he will have accomplished the highest law of being.
