EFFECTING A SETTLEMENT

By Frank S. Chiswick
Copyright, 1902, by the S. S. McClure Company

When Orrin Payton left the law school, he decided that he would confine himself to criminal cases as offering better pay and greater credit than the usual work which falls to the lot of the beginner. An ample fortune enabled him to decline cases which less fortunate young lawyers might have been glad to take up.

He had already figured in one or two trials of considerable importance, but his practice was not large, and his principal occupation consisted in wondering about the pretty girl in the office across the court. By a judicious expenditure of tips among the elevator boys, who in turn questioned the letter carrier, he finally discovered that her name was Maude Kingdon and that she was a stenographer for Massey & Keller, architects.

This information, while of interest, did not materially aid him in forming her acquaintance. He could think of no excuse for intruding on the architects, and Miss Kingdon was not the sort of girl one could get acquainted with in the elevator. Both dress and manner indicated an amount of refinement and acquaintance with social customs that necessitated a formal introduction.

Payton moved in good society, but he had acquired an intense dislike for the girls with whom he came in contact and whose goal was Mammon, not Cupid. The little typewriter across the light shaft was of far greater interest to him, and her apparent inaccessibility made him the more eager to form her acquaintance. Once he met Massey in company with a business friend and exultingly told himself that this would at least afford him an entrance to the office. But even this hope was dashed to the ground when in saying goodbye Massey expressed a desire to meet him on returning from a business trip that would occupy several months.

He had about given up all hope when one afternoon the young clerk who formed his entire office staff broke in on his solitude.

"There's a lady outside," he said, handing Payton a card, "who wants to see you about taking up a claim against the street car company."

"Tell her," said his employer, "that we don't take up damage suits." And then as the clerk turned to go he added:

"There's a lady outside," he said, handing Payton a card, "who wants to see you about taking up a claim against the street car company."

deavor to rush the matter through as quickly as possible. This afforded him an excuse for a daily visit to Miss Kingdon, and the more he saw of her the more he was satisfied that she was the one woman who could make him happy. The claim progressed slowly, as claims always do, but finally he secured from the company an offer of $500, the maximum payment in cases settled out of court.

"This is outrageous," said the girl when he communicated the decision. "They know we need the money and that we will have to take this rather than wait several years until the case has been finally settled on appeal."

Something like a sob ended the sentence, and then she smiled bravely. "You must not think me mercenary, Mr. Payton, but my salary is all we have, and mother has never been strong, and the hospital bills must be paid."

The office was empty, and Payton's sympathetic brown eyes looked straight into her own. She could stand anything just then save sympathy. Two great, round tears rolled down her cheeks.

Payton suppressed a wild inclination to kiss away the tears and took her hand gently in his.

"Believe me, Miss Kingdon, I have done my best. The greatest lawyer in New York could do no more. Six hundred and fifty is little enough to win from a corporation; but, whether you have guessed it or not, you have won something more—the heart of your attorney. If you'll marry me, you—your mother—won't have to worry about the street car company."

She looked at him with brimming eyes. "You are very good, Mr. Payton," she said simply, "but I could never permit you to make such a sacrifice. You have done as much for us as any man could do. Don't think that because you failed to get more you must offer yourself in marriage."

"Sacrifice?" he echoed. "If you argue along those lines, you'll be accusing me in a moment of marrying you for your money. Can't you realize that I've been interested in you more than a year and that I've loved you ever since you came into my office?"

She looked up, a smile breaking through the tears. "In that case?" she said softly.

"In that case," he retorted jubilantly, "I think I'll take my fee."

Had Put It to Proof.

Most of the men who went west in 1849 were from the north. There were, however, a few southerners, among them a Baltimore family who took along an old slave, Samuel Jefferson. Samuel was a patient traveler on the long journey across the plains, but very skeptical about the success of his master's expedition. It was not until his master became one of the gold kings of California that Samuel stopped shaking his head in silent protest.

Samuel lived to a good old age and after the war was the special attendant of his master's children. One day Hugh, the youngest son, was explaining to Samuel the spherical shape of the earth.

"If you should go straight ahead far enough, you'd come right around to where you started from."

"Now look here, child, yo' can't mek me believe dat. I ain't hevin' yo' daddy tote his things all de way out heah 'f'm Baltimore 'r nothin'. If what yo' tell me was true, we'd 'a' come back to Ma'y-lan' about 'fo' times. I knows 'f'm 'sperience, honey, drivin' 'cross dem plains, dat de worl' ain't flat out—flat 'er a hocke, clean till yo' bump in-ter de ocean."

The Man Chase.

A convict had broken bounds and the dogs were put on the trail, that was still warm. It was an exciting scene. No one was near except a few prison officials in charge of a hundred desperadoes and felons, and I felt the exciting sense of a sentinel on a lonely outpost as the six bloodhounds bounded through tangled forest, baying madly at every leap.

Eager was my desire to see the finish. It came soon. The negro's force was a posse of men, and he took to a tree in his effort to save himself from the baying dogs. I could not help thinking of the scene when a possum is treed, but I doubt whether the simile occurred to the wretched felon. He had broken off a branch and was desperately lashing dynamite, one of the finest bloodhounds in the state, whose mouth was only a foot or two below him. Dynamite has been known to climb trees and to make a spring of ten feet in getting up to the first branches. Then the dogs were called off, and the negro, unarmed, was taken back in less than an hour after he began his run for liberty.

—Leslie's Magazine.

A Poet's Little Story.

"Magazine poetry," said a young Philadelphian who dabbles in verse, "is always a source of wonder to me. For a long time I have read it and tried to understand it, but many of the poems I couldn't make head or tail of. For five years I have sent verses of my own to one magazine and always got them back, usually with a printed rejection slip, but occasionally with a polite note from the editor explaining why the particular verse was not available. One day it occurred to me that obscurity was the open sesame to the pages of this magazine, and, more in jest than anything else, I scribbled off a sonnet that meant absolutely nothing. My only thought was to string together a lot of meaningless words that would rhyme. I couldn't help laughing to myself when I read it over. I called it 'Obscurity' and sent it off. After three months had gone by I got a check for it and a letter from the editor complimenting me upon having at length fathomed the depths of true poetry. What humbug it all is!"—Philadelphia Record.

Saved From Awful Fate.

"Everybody said I had consumption," writes Mrs. A. M. Shields, of Chambersburg, Pa., "I was so low after four months of severe sickness caused by fever and asthma that few thought I could get well, but I learned of the marvelous merit of Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, used it and was completely cured. For desperate throat and lung diseases it is the safest cure in the world and is infallible for coughs, colds and bronchial affections. Guaranteed to cure and $1. Trial bottle free at W. L. DeLano.

City Property for Sale

HENDRICKS' ADDITION TO EUGENE.—To those desiring to purchase city lots, I have laid out an addition, on the south side of the city and north of College Hill Park. I have 120 lots in this addition, and am selling them very low so as to enable every one to have a home of their own. The price of these lots is from $50 up.

ELIAS STEWART ADDITION TO EUGENE.—I have some very desirable lots in this addition, in the very heart of the city and within a few blocks of Williams street.

WHITAKER'S ADDITION TO EUGENE.—I have a few lots in this addition within two blocks of the First National Bank.

COLLIER HILL PARK.—I have 100 lots in this addition. The price now is $50 each. We expect College Hill Park to become the most desirable residence property in or near the city.

HENDRICKS' ADDITION TO COLLEGE HILL PARK.—We have 70 lots for sale cheap in this addition; also 40 or 50 acres of very choice fruit land. I have on this place 1300 young prune trees, about 400 Bartlett pear trees, and 200 black walnut trees, also apples, plums and small fruits. This place has a good farm house, barn and out-houses, and is a most beautiful suburban place of property. It is known as the Locust Hill farm, and there is no place in the state more beautifully and pleasantly situated.

I am not in real estate business as a business—we sell our own lands only. I employ no agents. Any one desiring to purchase any of this property will find me at the First National Bank. I will be pleased to show property and give prices. I might exchange some of this property for good timber land. Come and see me.

Virulent Cancer Cured.

Startling proof of a wonderful advance in medicine is given by druggist G. W. Roberts of Elizabeth, W. Va. An old man there had long suffered with what good doctors pronounced incurable cancer. They believed his case hopeless till he used Electric Bitters and applied Bucklen's Arnica Salve which treatment completely cured him. When Electric Bitters are used to expel bilious, kidney and morbid poisons at the same time this salve exerts its matchless healing power, blood cleanses, skin eruptions, ulcers and sores vanish. Bitters 50c, Salve 25c at W. L. DeLano's.
